Bipartisan Foreign Policy Called Dead

Republican Senators Announce Intention To Scrutinize All Moves Of Administration; Will Question Acheson Nomination

By Jack Bell

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Senator Capehart (R.-Ind.) called the bipartisan foreign policy "dead" tonight and Republican critics lined up to fight—or minutely analyze—nomination of Dean Acheson as secretary of state.

Because Republicans were not consulted by President Truman in advance about the cabinet choice, Capehart told reporters he regards the action as "another slap at the bipartisan foreign policy."

He said this, piled on top of the Democrats' action last week in taking topheavy control of the senate foreign relations committee, demonstrated that two party-cooperation on foreign affairs is at an end.

"The Democrats have broken up the bipartisan foreign policy and it's the best thing that ever happened to the country," the Indiana senator told a reporter. He said he now considers himself a "free agent" and gave notice that he and Republicans of like views are ready to battle administration ideas they don't like.

He predicted that Republicans will demand a full airing of Acheson's views, a move also called for by Senator Vandenberg (R.-Mich.).

Describing Acheson as "a distinguished American with wide experience in foreign affairs and with many proved qualifications for this critical responsibility," the Michigan senator said:

"I expect the senate foreign relations committee will fully explore his viewpoints when it considers the nomination."

Friends added this up to an endorsement by Vandenberg—with reservations—of an appointee who certainly would not have been the Michigan senator's first choice for the place, had he been asked about it.

Vandenberg was not consulted in advance by the president—a change of administration tactics from the time a few months ago when President Truman was reported to have passed over Acheson, his first choice, to

REV. EDWARD F. HAYWARD

REV. HAYWARD HAS RESIGNED

Impaired Health Necessitates Relinquishing Grace Rectorship

Rev. Edward Farren Hayward, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, announced Saturday that he is to retire immediately. This action has been taken much to his own regret and to those of his church membership and congregation, strictly on his physician's orders. He has been suffering from heart attacks and rest and quiet have been prescribed by his physician.

Rev. Hayward has completed more than 25 years as rector here and during that time has been largely responsible for the large temporal and spiritual growth of this church. He came to Monroe as pastor from Houston Heights Church in Houston, Tex., December 1, 1921, and in point of service is the dean of all pastors in the Twin Cities. Only two others anywhere near approach the long term of service of Reverend Hayward.

The announcement of the resignation came as a surprise to members of the church and stated as follows:

"Monroe, Louisiana.
"January 8, 1949.

"The Wardens, Vestrymen and Congregation
"Grace Church
"Monroe, Louisiana.
"My Dear Friends:

"Grace Church is, as you know, one hundred years old. Twenty-seven years of this time (more than a quarter of a century) it has been my privilege to serve Grace Church as priest and rector.

"It now becomes my duty—not a pleasant one—to ask you men of the vestry to relieve me of my pastoral duties, as well as my executive and administrative powers. The relief asked for to be effective when my successor shall have been instituted as priest and rector of Grace Church.

"To the members of the congregation

PEACE BIDS MADE WHILE REDS OPEN DRIVE ON NANKING

Western Nation's Envoys Called In To Be Asked To Mediate Civil War

ATTACKS LAUNCHED UPON THIN GOVERNMENT LINE

By Harold K. Milks

NANKING, Jan. 8. —(AP)— China's government reportedly made one more desperate bid for peace today as the Communists loosed intense attacks on Nanking's last defense line short of the Yangtze.

The ambassadors of the United States, Great Britain and France were summoned to the foreign office. A usually reliable source said they had been requested to ask their governments to try to mediate the civil war.

Neither the ambassadors nor the foreign office would comment. It was considered likely from the actions of the various officials that the question of mediation or an appeal to the United Nations was under study. One move or the other has been reported in the wind.

In the midst of intense diplomatic activities, field dispatches said the Reds had opened attacks along the Hwai river line, the thinly manned government defenses 100 miles north of Nanking.

It was the first attack on the Hwai since the big Red push southward turned last month and began the annihilation of two government forces trapped between the river and Suchow 90 miles north.

Dispatches to the Chinese press reported artillery fire could be heard again in Pengpu, anchor for the line in the north. The rear guards under attack are north of the Hwai.

This attack was coupled with heavy assaults on the former Suchow garrison, which still holds possibly 150,000 government soldiers. This force has been encircled for weeks.

The government's central news agency asserted the Reds lost "more than 20,000" in the new attacks on

SNOWPLOWS FREE 271 FROM DRIFTS

Tiny South Dakota Communities Play Hosts To Several Times Population

RAPID CITY, S. D., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Snowplows today freed the second large party marooned in western South Dakota for five days by Blizzards.

Some 200 motorists were liberated at the town of Wall in the second slash through heavy drifts. Bulldozers were called into use and moved beyond Wall to open Highway 16 for east-west travel across the state. Harry Marshall, Rapid City pilot, yesterday flew emergency supplies of bread and milk to the marooned.

Before getting to Wall, snowplows smashed through the high drifts to rescue 71 motorists snowbound since Sunday in a community whose normal population is 13.

The first-freed travellers, in 28 autos, were caught by the midwest blizzard at Wicksville, 33 miles east of here on U. S. Highway 14-16. They were put up in two houses and two gasoline filling stations, the town's sole buildings.

Wall is 60 miles east of Rapid City. Its normal population is 700.

A college student, Robert Mlady, said there was "a mad rush" to leave Wall by the 385 men, women and chil-

Harmony, Progress Pledged By Avants

Newly Elected Superintendent Of Ouachita Parish Schools Issues Statement On Visit To Monroe To Accept Office

Ouachita parish's newly-elected superintendent of schools, Mack Avants, last night promised a better educational system and more harmony between teachers on the parish staff.

Avants also assured West Monroe residents of a junior-senior high school in that city.

The former football coach at Ouachita Parish High School and the present principal of the East Baton Rough High School, was elected to the superintendent's post in a meeting of the parish school board Friday. He spent Saturday in Monroe, then returned to Baton Rouge.

Elected with Avants were Charlie Wall, Jr., who will step into president of the board's position, and W. E. Palmer, who won out in the race for the vice-president's seat.

A young West Monroe business man, Wall promised his town Friday that a high school would be erected there in the immediate future.

Avants, in his statement released last night, pledged himself to work toward building an educational program which would meet the needs of all the children of the parish.

"We must enrich our curriculum to include home economics, home living, industrial arts, vocational and agriculture education, music, expanded athletic programs, commerce and the many other subjects included in an all round education program," Avants said.

Avants pointed out that the working conditions of the parish school teachers must be improved, adding that he would exert his efforts in improving the relationship between the administration forces of the school system and the teachers.

Avants promised his efforts in correcting the "deplorable" condition of neglected educational opportunities in West Monroe and rural areas."

Avants, a graduate of the Baton Rouge High School, was an outstanding athlete and student at Tulane University where he received his B. A. degree. He later entered Louisiana State University where he received his master's degree in education.

He was employed by the Ouachita Parish School as coach several years before the war. He resigned his posi-

Jes' Ramblin'

The public of Monroe will be greatly concerned when this morning they read in the Sunday World that Rev. Edward Farren Hayward, rector of Grace Episcopal Church for more than 25 years, is to retire. His public services in the community have been equally as widespread as his ministerial life, neither one being allowed to suffer any lack. When an important address at some city-wide event needed a speaker, Rev. Hayward was ever available, and always delivered a brilliant and timely discourse no matter what the affair might be.

A large number of weddings were performed by him for he was ever ready and filled a popular niche when services were required.

He served efficiently as president of the Monroe Rotary Club for one term and also he was active in Masonry in which he filled numerous high offices. To the average person who knew him, he has seemed almost indispensable. He is leaving a far more substantial Grace Church than it was a couple of decades ago, and the magnificent early English cathedral-like sanctuary at Fourth and Glenmar will stand as a monument to his guidance and wisdom.

In his retirement, there is one bright feature. He will continue to reside in Monroe and if he follows the example of Dr. E. K. Means, retired Methodist minister, he will find that his services may be more in demand now then when in active life.

The high and less high fare alike in Democratic America, this was the statement of Allen Behr, who brings Jes' Ramblin' the following tale of woe:

"Saturday I made a mistake. I overparked and got a ticket. In much humility I proceed to the desk sergeant at the city hall.

And who was there in the same fix I found myself in!"

"The Honorable Judge Ben C. Dawkins was paying over his fine at almost the same time."

"This goes to show," reiterated Mr. Behr," "We live in a real democracy. We ought to appreciate it and keep it this way forever!"

EGYPT ANNOUNCES SHE PLANS PEACE TALKS WITH JEWS

Secretary General Of Arabian League Lashes At Uncooperative Nations

NEGOTIATIONS ARE NOT EXPECTED TO END WARS

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Egypt confirmed today that she has agreed to negotiate with Israel for a Palestine armistice.

The foreign office's confirmation (two days after it had been announced by the U. N. mediator in New York) marked a departure from Arab policy dating back to 1939 of holding no direct talks with Zionists. It was accompanied by some Egyptian recriminations aimed at some of their Arab allies.

Abdel Rahman Azzam Pasha, Egyptian secretary general of the Arab league, said recent fighting in Palestine had showed "the regrettable hesitation of some politicians in Arab countries," an obvious reference to the failure of Arab allies to come to Egypt's assistance.

Edgar Gallad Bey, publisher of the influential Arabic El Zamane and the French Le Journal D'Egypte, in a signed editorial said other Arab countries had remained from joining the recent fighting in the hope that the Israelis would overcome the Egyptians and open the way for a settlement in the interests of Israel and Trans-Jordan.

Gallad Bey also wrote that Nuri Pasha Es Said, new Iraqi premier, declared this week he would renew cooperation with the Arab countries to "save Palestine."

"What does he mean by 'save Palestine'?" Gallad Bey asked. "This is the question which Cairo puts to Paghdad. She is putting it because she knows that if Nuri Pasha does not change his old policy 'to save Palestine' will mean something contrary to what the Arab league wants and in agreement with the policy of the

REPORT BURGLARY FROM WIDE AREA

New Outbreak Friday Night Follows Wednesday Night Looting On West Side

Burglars Friday night entered a Monroe package store, a Sterlington restaurant and for the second time during the week paid a visit to West Monroe, where they entered a grocery store and "borrowed" City Judge Jesse Heard's automobile, police officials reported.

Cash, whiskey, cigarettes and candy, missing from the two stores and cafe, amounted to over $400, according to the owners' estimates.

Judge Jesse Heard's automobile was discovered a block away from his home a few hours after it was reported stolen Saturday morning.

The car was taken from the judge's garage during the night and deputies said the motor was reported to have still been warm when it was recovered.

Seventeen cases of whiskey, valued at more than $360, were reported stolen from Fontana's package store, 614 North Third street, officers said.

Entrance to the package store was gained by breaking two glass panels out of the front door, deputies pointed out.

A screen was cut on a rear window of Powell's cafe at Sterlington and

Claims Israel Unrecognized

Note Concerning Shooting Down Of Five RAF Aircraft Over Palestine Will Not Be Transmitted To Tel Aviv

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—(AP)—The Israeli delegation to the United Nations refused tonight to transmit to Tel Aviv a British protest against the shooting down of five R. A. F. planes because it was not addressed to the Israeli government.

Britain has not recognized the state of Israel.

I. L. Kenen, press attache of the Israeli delegation to U. N., announced that Arthur Lourie, delegation head, had informed Sir Terence Shone, British deputy on the U. N. security council, of the Israeli stand.

The protest was drafted after the British air ministry in London accused Jewish forces of downing five British planes on patrol over Egypt.

In his statement to Shone, Lourie said that he had noted the British document "contains a request to 'the Jewish delegation' to transmit the protest contained in that document to 'the Jewish authorities at Tel Aviv.'

"I had assumed that you were calling on me in my capacity as acting representative of the provisional government of Israel at the security council of the United Nations, and it was on that understanding that, subject to the proviso verbally communicated to you, I had undertaken to transmit the contents of the document in question to my government.

"It is clear from the document itself, however, that I was mistaken, and in the absence of any specific indication as to who is intended by words 'The Jewish representative' or 'The Jewish authorities at Tel Aviv,' I am not in a position to act on your request."

At the time he received the protest Lourie told Shone it would be sent to Tel Aviv promptly.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Britain angrily accused Israel today of shooting down five R. A. F. patrol planes over Egypt and gave her fliers a free hand to fight back.

At the same time she disclosed an unspecified number of British troops have been moved into Aqaba at the request of her ally, King Abdullah, to guard that strategic Red Sea port in Trans-Jordan.

In the tense atmosphere, Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin gave up his week end in the country and stayed close to his desk to watch developments.

Israeli spokesmen in Tel Aviv accounted for only four British planes shot down and said at least three of them went down in fights that began and ended over Israeli territory. They admitted the possibility of fights over the border area but said they could not have taken place deep in Egyptian territory.

The Israelis said they had two captured British pilots, one slightly wounded, and that one of the planes fell near Nirm, a Palestine settlement 15 miles north of the border line.

The British air ministry's version of the incident along the Egyptian frontier was this:

Yesterday morning two formations, one of four Spitfires and one of a single Mosquito and four Tempest fighters, left their Suez Canal zone base in Sgypt on reconnaissance to "ascertain the depth and scale of Jewish incursion into Egyptian territory."

They had "strict orders" not to cross the border into Palestine.

The Spitfires were attacked by Jewish aircraft and none of the Spitfires returned. The leader of the Spitfires reported he was attacked while 15 miles inside Egypt and that he was compelled to bail out. He was wounded and picked up by an Arab near Brigabramir, 15 miles west of Rafa, the border point.

A few hours later another reconnaissance force was sent to see what had happened to the Spitfires. It "was

CITY POLICE NAB CHECK 'ARTISTS'

Two 21-Year-Old Men Are Jailed On Charges Of Issuing Worthless Drafts

Monroe police officers, acting fast on tips from a number of suspicious local merchants, trapped two alleged hot check artists in a DeSiard street jewelry store yesterday afternoon and shortly afterwards had the two resting meekly in the parish prison.

Police identified the men as James Proctor, 21, of Nashville, Tenn., and E. M. Stancil, Jr., also 21, of Farmerville. Both were booked with the theft of clothing and jewelry by issuing worthless checks.

The chase began early yesterday afternoon when several merchants called police headquarters and reported that "suspicious looking men" were attempting to cash checks at their establishments. Others said that checks the two cashed with them Friday were not good.

With a "fairly accurate description" given them by the salesmen, police went to work, and within a half hour had a suspect at the station.

Then a phone call came from Howard Brothers Jewelry Store, 116 DeSiard, stating that the two men were purchasing a watch there.

Officers C. W. Hand and H. V. Brown, along with Sgt. L. C. Taylor, ran to the store where they met Officer E. D. Otwell, Jr., entering the establishment. The four officers approached the two young men as Proctor was signing a check for $60.90 in payment for a wrist watch. The policemen escorted the two back to headquarters and after a short questioning, released their first suspect and jailed both Proctor and Stancil.

Desk Sgt. J. E. McMullen played an important role in directing the attack.

After questioning the two men, officers learned that the checks were issued on blanks of the Union Bank in Junction City, Ark. Proctor claimed he had deposited seventy-five dollars there, but police said he had issued checks amounting to over $108 in Arkansas and others to the D. & E. Furniture Store, R. & A. Jewelry store, Silverstein's, Fields and Peacock's Jewelry store, all of which are in downtown Monroe.

Stancil, who told police he was unaware that Proctor did not have an account to cover the checks, said he was a helper at his father's garage in Farmerville and had known his friend "off and on for some time."

Only a few long distance phone calls by officers revealed that the two were under bond for an automobile theft in Tennessee.

UNIVERSITY REPORTS STUDENT IS MISSING

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Louisiana State University and the East Baton Rouge parish sheriff's office asked today for help in locating a university student reported missing since Monday.

Dean of Men Arden O. French said the missing student was Donald Braswell, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Braswell of Minden.

He was last seen late Monday afternoon in his room in the stadium dormitory. He was reported to be wearing tan corduroy jacket, green or tan slacks and brown shoes, carrying a tan raincoat and tan handbag.

Braswell was described as five feet seven inches tall, weighing 145 pounds, with a ruddy complexion, dark curly hair and brown eyes.

NEW INDUSTRY VALUE IN LA. SET AT TWO HUNDRED MILLION

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 8.—(AP)—The year just ended saw $214,606,133 worth of industrial plants, with a potential of 16,999 new jobs, come to Louisiana, the state department of commerce and industry reported in a roundup of its 1948 activities today.

Director Mary Evelyn Dickerson estimated also that tourists visiting the state spent a record-breaking $100,000,000 here during the year.

Miss Dickerson said 306 of the 322 new or enlarged plants qualified for 10-year exemption from ad valorem taxes under a law designed to attract industry to the state.

She announced plans for 1949, including:

An intensive campaign through national advertising in newspapers, magazines and by radio to solicit additional industries.

Production of a 30-minute motion picture showing the industrial, recreational, agricultural and sociological advantages of Louisiana.

Continuation of a series of weekly radio broadcasts "dramatizing the advantages enjoyed by the people of the state under the program of social betterment put into effect by the 1948 legislature." The director said the broadcasts would "deal with industry, with recreation, with hospital, ambulance and dental services to the people in every part of the state, and will depict the broad-reaching and humanitarian effect of Louisiana's old-age pension program, which the federal security agency has characterized as one of the best programs in America."

Tourist plans for the year, Miss Dickerson said, include establishment of roadside parks along main routes, with cabins in some instances, rest houses, barbecue pits and other facilities, and wayside cabins at major highway entrances into the state.

At these, she said, "employes of the department will supply the visitors with road maps, literature and complete information on any subject desired by the visitor." Motorized police officers, she said, will "stop all out-of-state automobiles, affix welcome stickers . . . and extend to them during their stay in Louisiana the full police protection of Louisiana and every assistance desired."

YOUNG MOTHER DIES FROM WILD BULLET

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Jan. 8—(AP)—A mysterious bullett that whistled out of nowhere killed Mrs. Lois Jones, 22, as she stood beside her husband with her baby in her arms today.

The young mother was inspecting a house under construction when the bullet struck her in the face. She and her husband were searching for a home.

Mrs. Jones had her daughter, Mary Katherine, 15-months-old, in her arms. Another child, Sherill Lee, two-months old, remained at home.

The husband, J. D. Jones, a navy veteran, was prostrated by grief and required a doctor's attention.

NEW BLIZZARD NOW HEADS FOR MIDWEST

(By Associated Press)

Winter rounded out a destructive week-long weather binge Saturday by slamming a new blizzard and cold wave at the midcontinent and another killing freeze toward California.

A new storm from Canada howled into Montana and Wyoming. It headed south and eastward. This is the same general area still digging out from the season's worst blizzard earlier in the week.

To the west, another mass of chill air moved down from Alaska and Canada toward California. It is expected to arrive Sunday night, and forecasters said the air mass is "even colder than it was last week."

The California forecast carried the threat of new destruction to the already damaged fruit and vegetable crops.

As rising winds and skidding temperatures heralded the coming of the new onslaught, the weather bureau in Denver issued a special storm warning to travelers and stockmen in Colorado and Wyoming. The Chicago weather bureau said the cold wave, with blowing and drifting snow, would spread as far east as upper Michigan. Much colder weather was in store for the entire midwest.

COTTON FUTURE DISCUSSIONS SLATED IN CAPITAL MONDAY

By Edward Jamieson
(World Washington Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Discussions which will bear upon the future plans of virtually every cotton grower of the nation will get underway at the department of agriculture Monday.

Probably the most important conference between cotton growers and officials of the department since before the war will continue for four days as an attempt will be made to develop some agreed method of sharply reducing and equitably distributing among states, counties and growers future cotton acreage.

Representing the growers will be members of the state production and marketing committees of every cotton producing state.

On the basis of recommendations made by the committee members, as well as other studies which have been underway by department officials, it is anticipated that Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brannan will draft proposed new legislation which must be enacted this year. Should congress fail to act, it is doubtful that any controls over cotton production could be invoked in 1950, regardless of the size of the 1949 crop and resultant carryover of cotton.

The problem and need for its solution became apparent last year when Brannan, acting under the law, considered the possibility of calling a referendum on cotton quotes for the coming crop year.

The study disclosed that terms of the original law, plus subsequent amendments, would have restricted the minimum acreage allowed under quotas for 1949 to approximately 27,300,000 acres. These requirements would also have severely restricted acreage in some states, while permitting virtually uncontrolled production in others.

In view of the fact that the third-largest crop in history was grown in 1948 on only 23,500,000 acres, due to increased yields per acre. It was obvious that imposition of quotas would have been a complete futility insofar as curbing the national total production, and would still have inflicted hardships on some areas.

There seems little doubt, however, that controls must be imposed in 1950

EARTHQUAKE JARS VOLCANIC REGION

HILO, Hawaii, Jan. 8.—(AP)—A sharp earthquake jarred the island of Hawaii today and downpours of more than a foot of rain in 24 hours flooded some districts at the base of erupting Mauna Loa.

There was no report of damage from the quake. The downpours disrupted communications to Hawaii's interior and prevented detailed reports of flood damage.

The weather bureau recorded 9.94 inches of rainfall in the past 24 hours at the Hilo airport 34 miles northeast of the smoking volcano. There were heavier downpours nearer Mauna Loa.

Latest reports from the district around the 13,680-foot volcano said there had been no damage to villages and crops from the lava flow. The lava was slowing considerably as it moved down the western slope. Lava still was erupting from the crater at the summit.

The coast guard said there still was no trace of a light plane which vanished yesterday near Mauna Loa on a sightseeing flight. It was believed to carry four persons.

PEACE BIDS MADE WHILE REDS OPEN DRIVE ON NANKING

Western Nation's Envoys Called In To Be Asked To Mediate Civil War

By Harold K. Milks

NANKING, Jan. 8. —(AP)— China's government reportedly made one more desperate bid for peace today as the Communists loosed intense attacks on Nanking's last defense line short of the Yangtze.

The ambassadors of the United States, Great Britain and France were summoned to the foreign office. A usually reliable source said they had been requested to ask their governments to try to mediate the civil war.

Neither the ambassadors nor the foreign office would comment. It was considered likely from the actions of the various officials that the question of mediation or an appeal to the United Nations was under study. One move or the other has been reported in the wind.

In the midst of intense diplomatic activities, field dispatches said the Reds had opened attacks along the Hwai river line, the thinly manned government defenses 100 miles north of Nanking.

It was the first attack on the Hwai since the big Red push southward turned last month and began the annihilation of two government forces trapped between the river and Suchow 90 miles north.

Dispatches to the Chinese press reported artillery fire could be heard again in Pengpu, anchor for the line in the north. The rear guards under attack are north of the Hwai.

This attack was coupled with heavy assaults on the former Suchow garrison, which still holds possibly 150,000 government soldiers. This force has been encircled for weeks.

The government's central news agency asserted the Reds lost "more than 20,000" in the new attacks on

SNOWPLOWS FREE 271 FROM DRIFTS

Tiny South Dakota Communities Play Hosts To Several Times Population

RAPID CITY, S. D., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Snowplows today freed the second large party marooned in western South Dakota for five days by Blizzards.

Some 200 motorists were liberated at the town of Wall in the second slash through heavy drifts. Bulldozers were called into use and moved beyond Wall to open Highway 16 for east-west travel across the state. Harry Marshall, Rapid City pilot, yesterday flew emergency supplies of bread and milk to the marooned.

Before getting to Wall, snowplows smashed through the high drifts to rescue 71 motorists snowbound since Sunday in a community whose normal population is 13.

The first-freed travellers, in 28 autos, were caught by the midwest blizzard at Wicksville, 33 miles east of here on U. S. Highway 14-16. They were put up in two houses and two gasoline filling stations, the town's sole buildings.

Wall is 60 miles east of Rapid City. Its normal population is 700.

A college student, Robert Mlady, said there was "a mad rush" to leave Wall by the 385 men, women and chil-

NEW INDUSTRY VALUE IN LA. SET AT TWO HUNDRED MILLION

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 8.—(AP)—The year just ended saw $214,606,133 worth of industrial plants, with a potential of 16,999 new jobs, come to Louisiana, the state department of commerce and industry reported in a roundup of its 1948 activities today.

Director Mary Evelyn Dickerson estimated also that tourists visiting the state spent a record-breaking $100,000,000 here during the year.

Miss Dickerson said 306 of the 322 new or enlarged plants qualified for 10-year exemption from ad valorem taxes under a law designed to attract industry to the state.

She announced plans for 1949, including:

An intensive campaign through national advertising in newspapers, magazines and by radio to solicit additional industries.

Production of a 30-minute motion picture showing the industrial, recreational, agricultural and sociological advantages of Louisiana.

Continuation of a series of weekly radio broadcasts "dramatizing the advantages enjoyed by the people of the state under the program of social betterment put into effect by the 1948 legislature." The director said the broadcasts would "deal with industry, with recreation, with hospital, ambulance and dental services to the people in every part of the state, and will depict the broad-reaching and humanitarian effect of Louisiana's old-age pension program, which the federal security agency has characterized as one of the best programs in America."

Tourist plans for the year, Miss Dickerson said, include establishment of roadside parks along main routes, with cabins in some instances, rest houses, barbecue pits and other facilities, and wayside cabins at major highway entrances into the state.

At these, she said, "employes of the department will supply the visitors with road maps, literature and complete information on any subject desired by the visitor." Motorized police officers, she said, will "stop all out-of-state automobiles, affix welcome stickers . . . and extend to them during their stay in Louisiana the full police protection of Louisiana and every assistance desired."

Harmony, Progress Pledged By Avants

Newly Elected Superintendent Of Ouachita Parish Schools Issues Statement On Visit To Monroe To Accept Office

Ouachita parish's newly-elected superintendent of schools, Mack Avants, last night promised a better educational system and more harmony between teachers on the parish staff.

Avants also assured West Monroe residents of a junior-senior high school in that city.

The former football coach at Ouachita Parish High School and the present principal of the East Baton Rough High School, was elected to the superintendent's post in a meeting of the parish school board Friday. He spent Saturday in Monroe, then returned to Baton Rouge.

Elected with Avants were Charlie Wall, Jr., who will step into president of the board's position, and W. E. Palmer, who won out in the race for the vice-president's seat.

A young West Monroe business man, Wall promised his town Friday that a high school would be erected there in the immediate future.

Avants, in his statement released last night, pledged himself to work toward building an educational program which would meet the needs of all the children of the parish.

"We must enrich our curriculum to include home economics, home living, industrial arts, vocational and agriculture education, music, expanded athletic programs, commerce and the many other subjects included in an all round education program," Avants said.

Avants pointed out that the working conditions of the parish school teachers must be improved, adding that he would exert his efforts in improving the relationship between the administration forces of the school system and the teachers.

Avants promised his efforts in correcting the "deplorable" condition of neglected educational opportunities in West Monroe and rural areas."

Avants, a graduate of the Baton Rouge High School, was an outstanding athlete and student at Tulane University where he received his B. A. degree. He later entered Louisiana State University where he received his master's degree in education.

He was employed by the Ouachita Parish School as coach several years before the war. He resigned his posi-

Jes' Ramblin'

The public of Monroe will be greatly concerned when this morning they read in the Sunday World that Rev. Edward Farren Hayward, rector of Grace Episcopal Church for more than 25 years, is to retire. His public services in the community have been equally as widespread as his ministerial life, neither one being allowed to suffer any lack. When an important address at some city-wide event needed a speaker, Rev. Hayward was ever available, and always delivered a brilliant and timely discourse no matter what the affair might be.

A large number of weddings were performed by him for he was ever ready and filled a popular niche when services were required.

He served efficiently as president of the Monroe Rotary Club for one term and also he was active in Masonry in which he filled numerous high offices. To the average person who knew him, he has seemed almost indispensable. He is leaving a far more substantial Grace Church than it was a couple of decades ago, and the magnificent early English cathedral-like sanctuary at Fourth and Glenmar will stand as a monument to his guidance and wisdom.

In his retirement, there is one bright feature. He will continue to reside in Monroe and if he follows the example of Dr. E. K. Means, retired Methodist minister, he will find that his services may be more in demand now than when in active life.

The high and less high fare alike in Democratic America, this was the statement of Allen Behr, who brings Jes' Ramblin' the following tale of woe:

"Saturday I made a mistake. I overparked and got a ticket. In much humility I proceed to the desk sergeant at the city hall.

And who was there in the same fix I found myself in!"

"The Honorable Judge Ben C. Dawkins was paying over his fine at almost the same time."

"This goes to show," reiterated Mr. Behr." "We live in a real democracy. We ought to appreciate it and keep it this way forever!"

YOUNG MOTHER DIES FROM WILD BULLET

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Jan. 8—(AP)—A mysterious bullett that whistled out of nowhere killed Mrs. Lois Jones, 22, as she stood beside her husband with her baby in her arms today.

The young mother was inspecting a house under construction when the bullet struck her in the face. She and her husband were searching for a home.

Mrs. Jones had her daughter, Mary Katherine, 15-months-old, in her arms. Another child, Sherill Lee , two-months old, remained at home.

EGYPT ANNOUNCES SHE PLANS PEACE TALKS WITH JEWS

NEGOTIATIONS ARE NOT EXPECTED TO END WARS

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Egypt confirmed today that she has agreed to negotiate with Israel for a Palestine armistice.

The foreign office's confirmation (two days after it had been announced by the U. N. mediator in New York) marked a departure from Arab policy dating back to 1939 of holding no direct talks with Zionists. It was accompanied by some Egyptian recriminations aimed at some of their Arab allies.

Abdel Rahman Azzam Pasha, Egyptian secretary general of the Arab league, said recent fighting in Palestine had showed "the regrettable hesitation of some politicians in Arab countries," an obvious reference to the failure of Arab allies to come to Egypt's assistance.

Edgar Gallad Bey, publisher of the influential Arabic El Zamane and the French Le Journal D'Egypte, in a signed editorial said other Arab countries had remained from joining the recent fighting in the hope that the Israelis would overcome the Egyptians and open the way for a settlement in the interests of Israel and Trans-Jordan.

Gallad Bey also wrote that Nuri Pasha Es Said, new Iraqi premier, declared this week he would renew cooperation with the Arab countries to "save Palestine."

"What does he mean by 'save Palestine'?" Gallad Bey asked. "This is the question which Cairo puts to Paghdad. She is putting it because she knows that if Nuri Pasha does not change his old policy 'to save Palestine' will mean something contrary to what the Arab league wants and in agreement with the policy of the

New Outbreak Friday Night Follows Wednesday Night Looting On West Side

Burglars Friday night entered a Monroe package store, a Sterlington restaurant and for the second time during the week paid a visit to West Monroe, where they entered a grocery store and "borrowed" City Judge Jesse Heard's automobile, police officials reported.

Cash, whiskey, cigarettes and candy, missing from the two stores and cafe, amounted to over $400, according to the owners' estimates.

Judge Jesse Heard's automobile was discovered a block away from his home a few hours after it was reported stolen Saturday morning.

The car was taken from the judge's garage during the night and deputies said the motor was reported to have still been warm when it was recovered.

Seventeen cases of whiskey, valued at more than $360, were reported stolen from Fontana's package store, 614 North Third street, officers said.

Entrance to the package store was gained by breaking two glass panels out of the front door, deputies pointed out.

NEW BLIZZARD NOW HEADS FOR MIDWEST

(By Associated Press)

Winter rounded out a destructive week-long weather binge Saturday by slamming a new blizzard and cold wave at the midcontinent and another killing freeze toward California.

A new storm from Canada howled into Montana and Wyoming. It headed south and eastward. This is the same general area still digging out from the season's worst blizzard earlier in the week.

To the west, another mass of chill air moved down from Alaska and Canada toward California. It is expected to arrive Sunday night, and forecasters said the air mass is "even colder than it was last week."

The California forecast carried the threat of new destruction to the already damaged fruit and vegetable crops.

As rising winds and skidding temperatures heralded the coming of the new onslaught, the weather bureau in Denver issued a special storm warning to travelers and stockmen in Colorado and Wyoming. The Chicago weather bureau said the cold wave, with blowing and drifting snow, would spread as far east as upper Michigan. Much colder weather was in store for the entire midwest.

Claims Israel Unrecognized

Note Concerning Shooting Down Of Five RAF Aircraft Over Palestine Will Not Be Transmitted To Tel Aviv

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—(AP)—The Israeli delegation to the United Nations refused tonight to transmit to Tel Aviv a British protest against the shooting down of five R. A. F. planes because it was not addressed to the Israeli government.

Britain has not recognized the state of Israel.

I. L. Kenen, press attache of the Israeli delegation to U. N., announced that Arthur Lourie, delegation head, had informed Sir Terence Shone, British deputy on the U. N. security council, of the Israeli stand.

The protest was drafted after the British air ministry in London accused Jewish forces of downing five British planes on patrol over Egypt.

In his statement to Shone, Lourie said that he had noted the British document "contains a request to 'the Jewish delegation' to transmit the protest contained in that document to 'the Jewish authorities at Tel Aviv.'

"I had assumed that you were calling on me in my capacity as acting representative of the provisional government of Israel at the security council of the United Nations, and it was on that understanding that, subject to the proviso verbally communicated to you, I had undertaken to transmit the contents of the document in question to my government.

"It is clear from the document itself, however, that I was mistaken, and in the absence of any specific indication as to who is intended by words 'The Jewish representative' or 'The Jewish authorities at Tel Aviv,' I am not in a position to act on your request."

At the time he received the protest Lourie told Shone it would be sent to Tel Aviv promptly.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Britain angrily accused Israel today of shooting down five R. A. F. patrol planes over Egypt and gave her fliers a free hand to fight back.

At the same time she disclosed an unspecified number of British troops have been moved into Aqaba at the request of her ally, King Abdullah, to guard that strategic Red Sea port in Trans-Jordan.

In the tense atmosphere, Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin gave up his week end in the country and stayed close to his desk to watch developments.

Israeli spokesmen in Tel Aviv accounted for only four British planes shot down and said at least three of them went down in fights that began and ended over Israeli territory. They admitted the possibility of fights over the border area but said they could not have taken place deep in Egyptian territory.

The Israelis said they had two captured British pilots, one slightly wounded, and that one of the planes fell near Nirm, a Palestine settlement 15 miles north of the border line.

The British air ministry's version of the incident along the Egyptian frontier was this:

Yesterday morning two formations, one of four Spitfires and one of a single Mosquito and four Tempest fighters, left their Suez Canal zone base in Sgypt on reconnaissance to "ascertain the depth and scale of Jewish incursion into Egyptian territory."

They had "strict orders" not to cross the border into Palestine.

The Spitfires were attacked by Jewish aircraft and none of the Spitfires returned. The leader of the Spitfires reported he was attacked while 15 miles inside Egypt and that he was compelled to bail out. He was wounded and picked up by an Arab near Brigabramir, 15 miles west of Rafa, the border point.

A few hours later another reconnaissance force was sent to see what had happened to the Spitfires. It "was

CITY POLICE NAB CHECK 'ARTISTS'

Two 21-Year-Old Men Are Jailed On Charges Of Issuing Worthless Drafts

Monroe police officers, acting fast on tips from a number of suspicious local merchants, trapped two alleged hot check artists in a DeSiard street jewelry store yesterday afternoon and shortly afterwards had the two resting meekly in the parish prison.

Police identified the men as James Proctor, 21, of Nashville, Tenn., and E. M. Stancil, Jr., also 21, of Farmerville. Both were booked with the theft of clothing and jewelry by issuing worthless checks.

The chase began early yesterday afternoon when several merchants called police headquarters and reported that "suspicious looking men" were attempting to cash checks at their establishments. Others said that checks the two cashed with them Friday were not good.

With a "fairly accurate description" given them by the salesmen, police went to work, and within a half hour had a suspect at the station.

Then a phone call came from Howard Brothers Jewelry Store, 116 DeSiard, stating that the two men were purchasing a watch there.

Officers C. W. Hand and H. V. Brown, along with Sgt. L. C. Taylor, ran to the store where they met Officer E. D. Otwell, Jr., entering the establishment. The four officers approached the two young men as Proctor was signing a check for $60.90 in payment for a wrist watch. The policemen escorted the two back to headquarters and after a short questioning, released their first suspect and jailed both Proctor and Stancil.

Desk Sgt. J. E. McMullen played an important role in directing the attack.

After questioning the two men, officers learned that the checks were issued on blanks of the Union Bank in Junction City, Ark. Proctor claimed he had deposited seventy-five dollars there, but police said he had issued checks amounting to over $108 in Arkansas and others to the D. & E. Furniture Store, R. & A. Jewelry store, Silverstein's, Fields and Peacock's Jewelry store, all of which are in downtown Monroe.

Stancil, who told police he was unaware that Proctor did not have an account to cover the checks, said he was a helper at his father's garage in Farmerville and had known his friend "off and on for some time."

Only a few long distance phone calls by officers revealed that the two were under bond for an automobile theft in Tennessee.

COTTON FUTURE DISCUSSIONS SLATED IN CAPITAL MONDAY

By Edward Jamieson
(World Washington Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Discussions which will bear upon the future plans of virtually every cotton grower of the nation will get underway at the department of agriculture Monday.

Probably the most important conference between cotton growers and officials of the department since before the war will continue for four days as an attempt will be made to develop some agreed method of sharply reducing and equitably distributing among states, counties and growers future cotton acreage.

Representing the growers will be members of the state production and marketing committees of every cotton producing state.

On the basis of recommendations made by the committee members, as well as other studies which have been underway by department officials, it is anticipated that Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brannan will draft proposed new legislation which must be enacted this year. Should congress fail to act, it is doubtful that any controls over cotton production could be invoked in 1950, regardless of the size of the 1949 crop and resultant carryover of cotton.

The problem and need for its solution became apparent last year when Brannan, acting under the law, considered the possibility of calling a referendum on cotton quotes for the coming crop year.

The study disclosed that terms of the original law, plus subsequent amendments, would have restricted the minimum acreage allowed under quotas for 1949 to approximately 27,300,000 acres. These requirements would also have severely restricted acreage in some states, while permitting virtually uncontrolled production in others.

In view of the fact that the third-largest crop in history was grown in 1948 on only 23,500,000 acres, due to increased yields per acre. It was obvious that imposition of quotas would have been a complete futility insofar as curbing the national total production, and would still have inflicted hardships on some areas.

There seems little doubt, however, that controls must be imposed in 1950

EARTHQUAKE JARS VOLCANIC REGION

HILO, Hawaii, Jan. 8.—(AP)—A sharp earthquake jarred the island of Hawaii today and downpours of more than a foot of rain in 24 hours flooded some districts at the base of erupting Mauna Loa.

There was no report of damage from the quake. The downpours disrupted communications to Hawaii's interior and prevented detailed reports of flood damage.

The weather bureau recorded 9.94 inches of rainfall in the past 24 hours at the Hilo airport 34 miles northeast of the smoking volcano. There were heavier downpours nearer Mauna Loa.

Latest reports from the district around the 13,680-foot volcano said there had been no damage to villages and crops from the lava flow. The lava was slowing considerably as it moved down the western slope. Lava still was erupting from the crater at the summit.

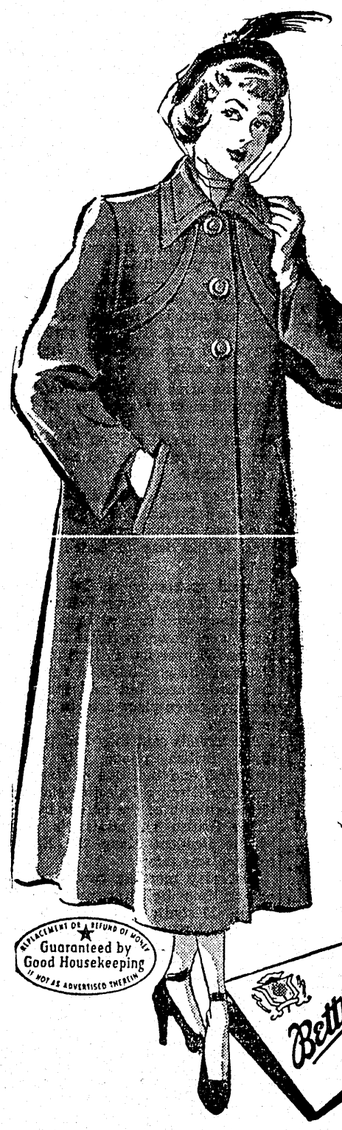

The coast guard said there still was no trace of a light plane which vanished yesterday near Mauna Loa on a sightseeing flight. It was believed to carry four persons.

MRS. IDA HEADLY EXPIRES SATURDAY

Mrs. Ida Mae Headley, 89-year-old resident of Ouachita parish for the past 48 years, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. S. Henderson, late yesterday morning following a long illness.

A member of the Emmanuel Baptist Church here, Mrs. Headley was well known throughout Louisiana and Arkansas, having been the widow of the late Dr. John D. Headley, a steamboat captain on southern rivers and a salesman with a wholesale drug company in New Orleans. Mr. Headley died July 18, 1941.

The remains will lie in state at her daughter's home, 516 Hart street, until time for funeral services Sunday at 3:30 p. m. The Rev. Grant Clark, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, assisted by the Rev. A. M. Funderburk, pastor of the Emmanuel Baptist Church, will officiate. The services will be held at Mrs. Henderson's home.

Interment, under the direction of the Hall Funeral Home, will take place in the Riverview Burial Park.

She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Hazel Boudreaux and Mrs. J. S. Henderson, both of Monroe, and Mrs. H. C. Doty, Sr., of Lake Charles; two sisters, Mrs. B. F. Oliver of Wainwright, Mo., and Mrs. Florence Williams of Kansas City, Mo.; seven grandchildren, eight great-grandchildren and a number of nieces and nephews.

Mrs. Headley, a direct descendant of Lord Baltmore, was well liked by residents here. She had been living with her daughter eight years prior to her death.

NEW CITY DIRECTORY SLATED FOR MONROE

A new city directory for both Monroe and West Monroe is slated for distribution by September, C. B. Page, of the C. B. Page Directory Company, revealed yesterday.

Twenty-five "callers", who will make visits to every home in the two cities in ninety days, are scheduled to begin work immediately, Page said.

If persons are not in when the visitors call on them, a yellow slip will be left in the mail box urging the resident to fill it out and mail it to the company immediately. This, Page said, will insure the 1949-1950 edition of a complete and accurate coverage of the two cities.

The new directories will include names of every person in the city, his address, and occupation, in addition to city officials and the office each holds, a classified section, a street and telephone guide, householders' directory and numerical telephone directory, the book promises to be the most up-to-date so far, Page said.

Hummingbirds, known to feed on flower nectar, also have a diet consisting of tiny flies, bees, beetles and other insects.

LIONS, LIBRARIAN, PROJECTOR

NORTH MONROE CLUB GIVES PROJECTOR TO LOCAL LIBRARY

Machine To Be Used By Handicapped Persons In Reading Books Donated

The North Monroe Lions Club presented the Ouachita Parish Library with a book projector last week which will be made available to physically handicapped in Ouachita parish who for various reasons are unable to handle an ordinary book, Miss Frances Flanders, Ouachita parish librarian said.

The projector, projects the book from a roll of microfilm on the ceiling, making it possible for an invalid to lie flat on their backs and use the machine.

Since the projector was received several micrifilmed books have been donated, Miss Flanders said, and the library hopes to soon increase its collection of both books and the book projectors.

The idea was worked out during the war by the Argus photographic company and the University microfilms for the use of wounded military personnel, the librarian explained. These projectors were such a success that they have now been put on the market and libraries throughout the country are now purchasing the microfilm machines, according to Miss Flanders.

This projector is a compact portable machine, which permits immobilized patients to read from a microfilm image projected on the ceiling. It weighs less than 20 pounds when packed. A small button pressed either with the finger or chin causes the microfilm to run through a vertical projector and each page is clearly shown on the ceiling above the user's bed. The remote control switch advances or reverses pages.

Libraries have undertaken making the projectors available to handicapped persons, because the manufacturers of the machine are selling it on a non-profit basis, Miss Flanders pointed out.

Manufacturers do not want to run the risk of its getting into commercial use and it fits in with the broader concept of library service, she explained.

Publishers allow their books to be microfilmed on a royalty free basis, and have insisted that libraries administer the program, so that the machine and books will be used by those who actually are unable to use an ordinary book.

Miss Flanders asserted that it had been estimated that each community should have one projector and thirty of forty books for every 4,000 population in the area.

Fifteen projectors are needed for Ouachita parish according to the 1940 census, she said.

It was pointed out that the machine costs about $190 and the books average about $2.50 each.

Lion clubs all over the country, Miss Flanders said, have evidenced a great interest in this project and were the first civic group in the Ouachita parish to donate a projector.

TECH OFFICIAL IS GUEST OF KIWANIS

A. W. Ford, of Louisiana Tech, addressed members of the West Monroe Kiwanis Club at their regular weekly luncheon and enumerated how each letter of K-I-W-A-N-I-S can be applied to a principle.

Ford pointed out that if practiced by the club members these principals can improve the club and consequently the community.

The principals enumerated by Ford were as follows:

K—Knowledge of our fellow man; and their achievements; I—Interest in any and all things that apply to our every day life; W—Wisdom as applied to what is right and wrong; A—Action along the line of motivated power toward accomplishing our missions in Kiwanis; N—Neighborliness, actually be a neighbor and not be satisfied to just speak to our neighbors; I—Imagination, and to draw upon it to better our relations with everyone; S—Spiritual, just as the work implies and to live by its every meaning.

Walter Cash asked that all members interested in joining the West Monroe Kiwanis bowling team report to the bowling alley.

The meeting was presided over by Dan Bivins, president.

Guests at the meeting were Louis Milner, Jr., and Leo Esdorn, of the Monroe Kiwanis Club, and J. H. Watkins, who was the guest of Bill Snyder.

MRS. IDA HEADLY EXPIRES SATURDAY

Mrs. Ida Mae Headley, 89-year-old resident of Ouachita parish for the past 48 years, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. S. Henderson, late yesterday morning following a long illness.

A member of the Emmanuel Baptist Church here, Mrs. Headley was well known throughout Louisiana and Arkansas, having been the widow of the late Dr. John D. Headley, a steamboat captain on southern rivers and a salesman with a wholesale drug company in New Orleans. Mr. Headley died July 18, 1941.

The remains will lie in state at her daughter's home, 516 Hart street, until time for funeral services Sunday at 3:30 p. m. The Rev. Grant Clark, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, assisted by the Rev. A. M. Funderburk, pastor of the Emmanuel Baptist Church, will officiate. The services will be held at Mrs. Henderson's home.

Interment, under the direction of the Hall Funeral Home, will take place in the Riverview Burial Park.

She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Hazel Boudreaux and Mrs. J. S. Henderson, both of Monroe, and Mrs. H. C. Doty, Sr., of Lake Charles; two sisters, Mrs. B. F. Oliver of Wainwright, Mo., and Mrs. Florence Williams of Kansas City, Mo.; seven grandchildren, eight great-grandchildren and a number of nieces and nephews.

Mrs. Headley, a direct descendant of Lord Baltmore, was well liked by residents here. She had been living with her daughter eight years prior to her death.

NEW CITY DIRECTORY SLATED FOR MONROE

A new city directory for both Monroe and West Monroe is slated for distribution by September, C. B. Page, of the C. B. Page Directory Company, revealed yesterday.

Twenty-five "callers", who will make visits to every home in the two cities in ninety days, are scheduled to begin work immediately, Page said.

If persons are not in when the visitors call on them, a yellow slip will be left in the mail box urging the resident to fill it out and mail it to the company immediately. This, Page said, will insure the 1949-1950 edition of a complete and accurate coverage of the two cities.

The new directories will include names of every person in the city, his address, and occupation, in addition to city officials and the office each holds, a classified section, a street and telephone guide, householders' directory and numerical telephone directory, the book promises to be the most up-to-date so far, Page said.

Hummingbirds, known to feed on flower nectar, also have a diet consisting of tiny flies, bees, beetles and other insects.

LIONS, LIBRARIAN, PROJECTOR

Miss Frances Flanders, Ouachita parish librarian, was presented a book projector last week by the North Monroe Lions Club's President Fran Brennan (second from right). Eugene D. Galligan (second from left) and Abe Gold (right) witnessed the presentation. This is the first book projector to be made available to physically handicapped persons in North Louisiana.

NORTH MONROE CLUB GIVES PROJECTOR TO LOCAL LIBRARY

Machine To Be Used By Handicapped Persons In Reading Books Donated

The North Monroe Lions Club presented the Ouachita Parish Library with a book projector last week which will be made available to physically handicapped in Ouachita parish who for various reasons are unable to handle an ordinary book, Miss Frances Flanders, Ouachita parish librarian said.

The projector, projects the book from a roll of microfilm on the ceiling, making it possible for an invalid to lie flat on their backs and use the machine.

Since the projector was received several micrifilmed books have been donated, Miss Flanders said, and the library hopes to soon increase its collection of both books and the book projectors.

The idea was worked out during the war by the Argus photographic company and the University microfilms for the use of wounded military personnel, the librarian explained. These projectors were such a success that they have now been put on the market and libraries throughout the country are now purchasing the microfilm machines, according to Miss Flanders.

This projector is a compact portable machine, which permits immobilized patients to read from a microfilm image projected on the ceiling. It weighs less than 20 pounds when packed. A small button pressed either with the finger or chin causes the microfilm to run through a vertical projector and each page is clearly shown on the ceiling above the user's bed. The remote control switch advances or reverses pages.

Libraries have undertaken making the projectors available to handicapped persons, because the manufacturers of the machine are selling it on a non-profit basis, Miss Flanders pointed out.

Manufacturers do not want to run the risk of its getting into commercial use and it fits in with the broader concept of library service, she explained.

Publishers allow their books to be microfilmed on a royalty free basis, and have insisted that libraries administer the program, so that the machine and books will be used by those who actually are unable to use an ordinary book.

Miss Flanders asserted that it had been estimated that each community should have one projector and thirty of forty books for every 4,000 population in the area.

Fifteen projectors are needed for Ouachita parish according to the 1940 census, she said.

It was pointed out that the machine costs about $190 and the books average about $2.50 each.

Lion clubs all over the country, Miss Flanders said, have evidenced a great interest in this project and were the first civic group in the Ouachita parish to donate a projector.

TECH OFFICIAL IS GUEST OF KIWANIS

A. W. Ford, of Louisiana Tech, addressed members of the West Monroe Kiwanis Club at their regular weekly luncheon and enumerated how each letter of K-I-W-A-N-I-S can be applied to a principle.

Ford pointed out that if practiced by the club members these principals can improve the club and consequently the community.

The principals enumerated by Ford were as follows:

K—Knowledge of our fellow man; and their achievements; I—Interest in any and all things that apply to our every day life; W—Wisdom as applied to what is right and wrong; A—Action along the line of motivated power toward accomplishing our missions in Kiwanis; N—Neighborliness, actually be a neighbor and not be satisfied to just speak to our neighbors; I—Imagination, and to draw upon it to better our relations with everyone; S—Spiritual, just as the work implies and to live by its every meaning.

Walter Cash asked that all members interested in joining the West Monroe Kiwanis bowling team report to the bowling alley.

The meeting was presided over by Dan Bivins, president.

Guests at the meeting were Louis Milner, Jr., and Leo Esdorn, of the Monroe Kiwanis Club, and J. H. Watkins, who was the guest of Bill Snyder.

P.-T. A. COUNCIL MEET IS HELD

Study Based On Three Important Groups; Year's Work Outlined

The Twin City P.-T. A. Council meeting was held last Thursday, January 6, at the Health Unit Building. The program was based on "Study Groups," "Founders' Day" and "Summer Round-Up" three of the all-important goals of P.-T. A. work.

Mrs. Stanley Hodges, state P.-T. A. goals chairman, reported on the P.-T. A. goals. She exclaimed: "Watch out, the P.-T. A. year is rapidly passing and we need to reach our goals and plan of work. Unit presidents . . . have you followed your plan of work, and are you prepared to report on your achievements at the convention in April? Let's get together and make new plans for reaching these goals."

Mrs. F. H. Peterson, Twin City P.-T. A. study group chairman, gave an interesting talk on "The Pre-School Child." Mrs. Peterson stated that the first few years of a child's life forms all the character traits and attitudes that the child will carry throughout its entire life. Her concern was for the enormous crop of "war babies" that are beginning to start to school. Mrs. Peterson urged more study groups to have courses on the pre-school child for she felt the need of this training in the home. Larger units could have two separate study groups—one on the pre-school child and another on older children.

Mrs. W. O. Webb, president of Sherrouse P.-T. A., gave an interesting as well as informative talk on "Founders' Day." She gave the following as suggestions to be used on the Founders' Day programs to be given in the various P.-T. A. units:

1. Founders' Day, 1949, and National P.-T. A. Magazine to be used as suggestive material for programs.
2. Tell the history of own local unit.
3. Make it a "homecoming" for all old members.
4. Publicize "Founders' Day" through press, letters, radio and church.
5. Birthday cake and party.

The council voted to present our own Mrs. Fagan Cox, state P.-T. A. Founders' Day chairman, and a past state president, with a "life membership pin."

Mrs. Gene Corley gave an interesting talk on "Summer Round-Up." She stressed these points: Set the date, advertise it, have the examinations and then be sure to have the follow up.

Mrs. Corley was appointed Twin City Council P.-T. A. summer round-up chairman due to the resignation of the former chairman.

Mrs. Alvin Andrews reported that blanks are to be mailed to the various units to be filled in concerning the summer round-up, and for the units to please take care of this matter immediately.

The Twin City Council P.-T. A. is to have charge of the "Mile of Dimes" for the week of January 26-31, in connection with the "Infantile Paralysis Drive."

The Twin City Council P.-T. A. has gone on record to sponsor a series of radio broadcasts. The various P.-T. A. units will be asked to have charge of one program. Mrs. W. S. Vincent has prepared radio scripts available on various subjects to be used on these programs. This is a national as well as state P.-T. A. project. Mrs. M. L. DeFreese was named as chairman for this project with Mrs. Henry Williams and Wallace Kendell to serve on the same committee.

FIRE DEATHS TAKE BIG TOLL

National Board Of Underwriters Sounds Need Of Taking Precautions

Many deaths in fires resulting from the operation of portable oil heaters already have occurred this winter, and many more will occur unless people use greater care and caution, the National Board of Fire Underwriters warns. The danger is greatest during cold weather, but householders in many parts of the country will continue to use the heaters until spring.

Good design and substantial construction are the first essentials for safety. These can best be obtained by providing a heater that has been examined and listed by Underwriters Laboratories, Inc.

For greater care and caution in the operation of oil heaters, the nation board's engineers suggest the following safety rules:

1. Thoroughly inspect and clean the heater before putting it into operation for the first time.
2. Keep it clean and free of dirt at all times.
3. Never place the heater near curtains, tablecloths, or other hanging material.
4. Never place it where it can be knocked over. Many fires have resulted when heaters were placed in line of traffic in the home or were knocked over by children at play.
5. Never fill the heater while it is lighted.
6. Don't operate the heater in a closed room. See that a door or window is open slightly to assure a good oxygen supply. This is essential even in the coldest weather.
7. Don't leave the heater unattended when it is first lighted. Watch the flame and adjust it so it produces no smoke.
8. When refilling the heater with oil, take it outside the building. Keep the fuel supply outside.
9. See that the latch holding the top part of the heater to the lower part holds the two parts of the heater together securely.

Typical swifts rest by clinging to the inside of hollow trees or chimneys or hanging to the face of cliffs; they never perch on twigs or limbs as do other birds.

Bloom Off Boom

The flurry of economic and business predictions for 1949 has subsided. The overwhelming consensus is that inflation will no longer be a major problem in 1949, but depression will not be a problem either. Business will slacken a bit, but not to the extent of a recession.

A few persons will be hurt by this, as by any economic change, but they, too, would have been worse off under depression or runaway inflation. Profits will be lower, but there will still be profits. Business failures and unemployment may increase, but only slightly.

The cost of living should drop. Corn has already decreased more than one-third, with the price of hogs close behind, with other commodities firmer but dropping. Boom conditions continue in only two industries—automobiles and steel. The sellers' market is becoming a buyers' market. The customer can expect more deference this year.

Business (this is still a consensus, not a prediction) will nevertheless be active and sales are unlikely to slump sharply. Industrialists will show caution without defeatism. The "inflationary gap" between exports and imports has been lowered from $8,700,000,000 to $5,500,000,000. No major strikes are on the horizon. The bloom is off the boom, but no killing frost is likely.

ON THE DECLINE OF LYING

Liars aren't what they once were—especially American liars. The Liars' Club of Burlington, Wis., found the native output so poor this year that it was forced to choose a Canadian for the honor of being named world champion liar.

His effort was rather feeble, by American standards. To Baron Munchausen it would have sounded downright veracious. The potent liars of the Old West (some of their tales are to be found in Mark Twain's "Roughing It") would hardly have bothered to pay it the compliment of disbelief.

The effort that won the new world championship tells of a northwester so strong that it blew 2,000 post-holes plumb out of the ground. "The rancher finally located them 125 miles away, but they were a total loss. After bouncing 125 miles cross-country, over the cactus, they were so full of holes that they wouldn't hold the dirt out any more!"

There is no occasion to seem too critical. The poor fellow was doing the best he could. Just lacked practice, no doubt.

BENNY'S BUBBLE

Well, if the Jack Benny bubble hasn't collapsed. And—surprise!—it is revealed that there wasn't any $4,000,000 involved in the complicated deal that currently has the Columbia Broadcasting System and the bureau of internal revenue issuing statements and totting up columns of figures. It was only a paltry $1,356,000.

Benny now uses the facilities of CBS. He formerly worked for the National Broadcasting Company. Last summer a pair of radio comedians rolled their talents into a package and sold it outright to CBS for a handsome sum. The bureau of internal revenue went along with the gag and permitted them to keep 75 per cent of the sum under the provisions of the capital gains section of the internal revenue law.

Benny, who evidently has as much affection for a dollar off the airwaves as he does on, executed what was described as an identical scheme. His "package" was Amusement Enterprises, Inc., of which he owns 60 per cent. For months the amount involved in the swap was described as $4,000,000. Neither CBS nor Benny denied it.

Now the bureau of internal revenue has ruled that Benny's peculiar mannerisms and talents are construed as "personal services" to an employer. Therefore, any emoluments received (Benny is radio's highest-paid comedian) are taxable as ordinary personal income. In his case it represents a whopping figure.

There is a laugh in this somewhere. No doubt the people at NBC will laugh longest.

SUN'S RAYS FOR FUEL?

Coal, wood, oil? Why not let the stored-up rays of the good old sun save fuel bills, furnace worries and lugging up logs in winter? Maybe they can be made to do just that. This is the belief, at all events, of Dr. Maria Telkes of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. She is so convinced that a sun-heating unit will work that she plans to occupy a five-room house at Dover, 15 miles away, equipped with such a unit, and commute to her work in Cambridge. Long before spring arrives it is safe to say that her experience—she admits it is only an experiment—in keeping warm without the purchase of customary fuels will be blazoned to a world too impatient to wait.

The fly in the ointment is that this sun-heating unit costs $3,000 now, when there is only one of its size in existence. It will be built into the roof of her five-room, $20,000 house. An 800-square-foot black metal sheet, back of two glass plates, will function as a heat trap to collect the sun's rays. Air circulated behind it is to be conducted to heat bins connected with registers, each bin able to serve two rooms. Warm air is stored in these bins in a chemical container and released at will through the registers. The cost of the chemicals is reported as virtually nil.

If the present experiment is successful—certainly this is no period in man's inventive progress to scoff at such an effort—it may have a revolutionary effect in saving the diminishing stocks of dependable natural fuel resources in the United States. Also, since such a "solar house" requires a roof expanse of roughly 40 by 20 feet, it can, if mass production ensues, have a considerable effect on architectural design.

Jimmie Fidler
IN HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8—Night club star Kay Thompson is plenty emphatic in denying that persistent rumor that she's secretly wed to one of the younger Williams brothers in her act . . . Esther Williams (Mrs. Ben Gage) has scheduled a visit from the stork for August . . . hear that RKO is plotting a picture based on the life of the late Earl Carroll . . . Bells to Ingrid Bergman, who emerged from her shell Christmas eve and, sans publicity, spent four hours in a San Fernando valley veterans hospital shaking hands with all the patients . . . Divorced: Actress Pamela Blake and television producer Michael Stokey.

Producer William Cagney will consider it a happy new year if he can persuade Lucille Wagner to swap "I do's" with him . . . Weren't composer David Rose and his bride, Betty Bigelow, secretly married a full month before their much-publicized wedding ceremony in Las Vegas? . . . Wanda Hendrix (scheduled to marry Audie Murphy today) has been upped to full star rating by Paramount . . . According to intimates, Ronald Coleman, last year's Acadamy Award winner, plans to make one picture only in 1949 and then retire for keeps.

Mrs. Forrest Tucker will file for divorce this month . . . Understand that Universal-International, after considering the boxoffice failure of Deanna Durbin's recent pictures, will try to buy up the remainder of her contract . . . Roy Rogers, born Leonard Slye, will ask Los Angeles courts to legalize his screen name.

PREVIEW NIGHTS: Pic of the week: Republic's "Wake of the Red Witch," (John Wayne-Gail Russell-Gig Young-Adele Mara). Big, suspensful, swashbuckling—it's a natural of all outdoor action fans . . . RECOMMENDED: MGM's "The Sun Comes Up" (Jeanette MacDonald-Lloyd Nolan-Claude Jarman Jr.-Lassie). Sentimental drama with musical overtones, and rich enough in entertainment value to win favor with every audience . . . GOOD: RKO's "Gun Smugglers" (Tim Holt-Richard Martin-Gary Gray-Martha Hyer). Preferred fare for western addicts . . . Columbia's "Boston Blackie's Chinese Venture" (Chester Morris - Maylia - Richard Lane). A high spot in a better than average series . . . SO-SO: Monogram's "Back Trail" (Johnny Mack Brown-Raymond Hatton). A routine western, less entertaining than most . . . BEST PERFORMANCE: Janette MacDonald in "The Sun Comes Up."

As a matter of fact, I didn't make any New Year's resolutions (probably because I've broken too many in my time to retain any self-confidence), but I was tempted to undertake one—namely a pledge to write nothing more about the Tyrone Power-Linda Christian romance until those two will-o'-the-wisp either marry or give one another the gate. I consider that pledge out of a kindly feeling toward Power and Miss Christian, for I'm inclined to believe that all the publicity about their romantic association is making them, not only ridiculous, but boresome. They simply aren't important enough to justify such a waste of printer's ink. I'll let you know when they've finally made up their minds.

A Hollywood columnist, after printing the wide-spread report that Maria Montez, being without professional prospects here, will return to Europe for several picture roles, plaintively asks: "What's happened to Maria's Hollywood career?" Well, the answer to that question shouldn't bee too difficult. Making her next to the last picture at Universal-International, Miss Montez flew into a tizzle because she thought she was being somewhat slighted in the billing, engaged an attorney and sued the studio. Her antics gave the producers headaches that persisted for months. In her last picture here, trouble also reared its ugly head. The fiery Maria, after a catch-as-catch-can battle out of court, again sued her producer. In view of that record, isn't it quite possible that Hollywood's film-makers have decided that the lady's charms are more than off-set by her claws?

With all the talk about economy drives in the studios, and dwindling boxoffice returns, have yet to hear anyone in movie officialdom suggest the most obvious of all cures for the current illness. Why not eliminate double features?

Many audience polls, conducted in the past ten years have indicated that a majority of theatre-goers would accept single features. Personally, I know many people who have nearly quit going to theatres because they refuse to suffer through boresome "B" offerings. Theatre men, almost without exceptions, regret the double feature system. It cuts down their audience turnover, ups their total rentals and forces them to maintain high ticket prices. In short, the only beneficiaries are the "quikie" producers, and the industry would be better off without most of them.

FALSE VALUES

The 81st congress of the United States is being asked to approve assumption by the federal government of responsibility for the welfare of the people along many lines—medicine and health and education and housing and many others.

Thus we see a continuation of the trend toward the "government'll take care of you" idea which sincere, patriotic Americans, regardless of political affiliation, know must be reversed if our republic is to survive.

It is said that when Benjamin Franklin came out of the hall where they were holding the constitutional convention, the people crowded around him and asked, "Mr. Franklin, what do we have?" His answer was, "You have a republic, if you can keep it." We have now reached that period in our history when it must rather soon be decided whether we "can keep it."

We cannot keep our republic if we continue to destroy the dignity of the individual. Nearly 2,000 years ago it was laid down that "If any would not work, neither should he eat." At first thought, that seems like a hard rule. But a great moral issue is involved, a moral issue that no nation can violate and remain a great nation.

An individual who gains his subsistence from sources outside his own efforts must inevitably lose his independence, his self-reliance, his initiative; he no longer has the energy and the incentive to create and build and accomplish. A nation of such individuals is doomed for oblivion, willy-nilly. Time and again nations in history have attempted to violate this rule—and always with the same result. Yet the idea of getting "something for nothing" is so seductive that people continue to try it.

Far beyond all other nations in history, the United States of America has seemed to be destined to make secure the dignity of the individual. Our whole system of government is founded on the Christian principle that the individual is supreme, that the individual is responsible for his own welfare and his own future. More than any other, our nation has proven that the system works—by becoming the most powerful, the most productive nation in the history of the world in the comparatively short period of 160 years; by serving as the arsenal of democracy in two worldwide wars; by making it possible for its people to attain the highest standard of living the world has ever known.

But even here—where it should never happen—we seem to be suffering from the general sense of false values that is plaguing the world today. The Socialist aim, expressed in the phrase "each according to his needs," has produced an unnatural, even an immoral, state of mind among many people. This is in face of the fact that it must be obvious, on reflection, that the system which professes to distribute rights to the satisfaction of needs and ignores the sources from which those needs can alone be supplied, must inevitably collapse. This is the situation in Great Britain now, where a Socialist government has control, and it is the trend in this nation, whether we know it or not and whether we believe it or not.

Let us at least realize what we are doing as we consider turning the provisions for our welfare over to the government. Let us beware of these false values. Want must never have priority over Worth. The union membership card must never be of more importance than the skill of the craftsman. The rationing coupon must never be more needful to the housewife than cash. And, finally, the debtor must never be the master of the creditor.

It is well to want things. Freedom from want was one of the rankest of the delusions offered by the New Dealers! It is also well to satisfy these wants—but this can be done only by the "sweat of one's brow" and not by the benevolence of a paternalistic government. It just won't work any other way.

OUR CHILDREN

VOCATIONAL TRAINING
By Angelo Patri

Vocational training is good for everybody. Members of the higher intelligence group need it quite as much if not more than the others; but everybody is the better equipped for happy living if their hands find work to do, work they enjoy doing.

Hands are closely allied to intelligence. What they discover to be pleasant and useful they pass on to the mind to nourish its power to see, feel and understand correctly. Hands develop the skills that mean so much to earning a living and in earning a place in society. People have deep respect for the ones who can do rather than dream or talk, and doing is a surprisingly powerful stimulant to well-being.

Our homes are not equipped to allow children to do useful work, and so they are deprived of one of the richest sources of their growth and development. The schools are trying to make up for it by putting vocational courses and schools within reach of some of the children. However, they should be in reach of every school child without regard to his intelligence quotient.

We make odd mistakes about this sort of training. Some believe that only dull children can profit by vocational training. Dull children—be it known—do not, cannot, do accurate work and so are not fine workers in crafts or trades. Only the keen-minded are accurate, so the best workers are keen-minded children and grown people. Ever see a dull-minded mechanic do good work? I haven't either.

The students in professional schools need handwork as much as the other children and students do. Hands feed intelligence in professional fields as they do in all others. The surgeon is skillful with his hands; so is the musician, and the lawyer ought to be. Many of them would profit by more attention to this side of their natures. I have a lawyer friend who is a fine cabinet maker. Our family doctor is a skilled mechanic, and in his shop finds relief from the tensions his work creates.

Our schools should be equipped to teach crafts, trades and the arts. They should not send out skilled workers—these are trained after school graduation in the trade unions, I hope—but to give the young ones a balanced experience, to allow their hands to fulfill their function of nourishing their minds and keeping them the sane and useful citizens they were intended to be. We use handwork to restore unbalanced minds. How about using it to prevent the unbalance in the first place?

How to overcome slowness in children is discussed by Dr. Patri in leaflet P-11, "Slowness."

These Days
By George E. Sokolsky

THE DUBINSKY PLAN

The International Ladies Garment Works Union has organized itself for social services to its own members. This has been variously interpreted, but the outsider need only view the fact that its officials are more amenable to its members than is usual in a unionism which has been invaded by racketeers, used by politicians and which has often become the private businesses of its officials. The I. L. G. W. U. is not like that.

The leader of this union is David Dubinsky, who possesses unusual qualities of statesmanship. He is an old-fashioned Social Democrat, which makes him violently anti-Communst and sometimes leads him far afield into European politics. Yet the money his union spends fighting Communism in such countries as Italy and Poland is better spent than lots of funds other unions use in ways less commendable. One may be critical of such extramural activities without failing to recognize that American unions are reservoirs of capital which need siphoning off lest they become too large and therefore dangerous.

So, in the discussion of the amendments of the Taft-Hartley Act, Dubinsky jumped the gun with a constructive program which realistically recognizes first, that labor unions, like corporations, cannot exist in an anarchy; secondly, that many phases of the Taft-Hartley Act are beneficial to labor as well as management and need to be retained; and finally that those to which the labor unions object must not be completely abandoned unless for them are substituted measures which protect the American system of government by law.

While many will quarrel with this or that phase of his proposals, the fact that his offering admits the need for regulation, seeks to protect the United tSates from sabotage and whimsically organized non-production, forces a recognition of his sense of responsibility and statesmanship. It is particularly encouraging to find a labor leader courageoulsy facing not the fact of the November election but the welfare of the United States in troubled times.

Before anyone can honestly make up his mind on the Taft-Hartley Act and what should be done about it, he should read the "report of the joint committee on labor-management relations" made to the congress of the United States. This is a report on how the Taft-Hartley Act actually performed up-to-date, in full detail. For instance, on the subject of strikes, the comparison between 1947 and 1948, the period when the Act was in existence, shows a marked gain; also wages increased; union membership increased; the Communist control of unions lessened. On the subject of the non-Communist affidavit, the report states:

"Despite the protests by many union leaders and officials against the Act, and against the filing requirements, accompanied by a threat of concerted refusal to file affidavits and registration statements, it is to be noted that no such boycott of the National Labor Relations board and of the procedures of the law has ensued. Officers of a large majority of labor organizations have complied with the filing requirements. In many instances, unions have taken decisive action to compel reluctant officers to comply with the filing requirements. Refusals by incumbent officers to make the affidavit has been an issue in a number of union elections which resulted in such officers being denied re-election. One large international union amended its constitution to require all of its officers to make the non-Communist oath. There has been considerable evidence of membership dissatisfaction with the policy of those unions who have sought to boycott the processes of the board. . . It has already been fairly well demonstrated that the American workingman will take steps to rid his union of Communistic leadership when the character of that leadership has been identified to his satisfaction."

The question of Communst infiltration and control of unions is as important as their widespread influence in the state department. Communist unions can cripple us at the outset of the next war, depriving this country of the initiative in the most critical moments of the beginning of hostilities. For instance, control of the electrical equipment industry and the transportation industries by Communist unions, partisans of our enemy, could, at the outset of a war, leave this country helpless for a sufficient period to produce defeat.

NEW YORK—Thinking out loud: My family physician, Dr. Ed McCabe, wishes me all joy for the year to come, but he doesn't include a wish for good health, as do so many readers. Perhaps that's a delicate subject. . . . My next-door neighbor, Dr. F. P. Loiacono, whom I've never met, also sends polite good wishes. . . James W. Brown, of Editor & Publisher, also a neighbor, sends a philosophical treatise from Marcus Arelieus, whom I used to read voraciuosly.

Two of our most satisfactory holiday gifts were telephone calls from our two distant daughters, Pat called from State College, N. M., within a few miles of the Mexican border, and Mary from Iowa City, within a few minutes of each other. Pat said the telephone from which she talked has slots for silver dollars and half dollars, as well as for the quarters, dimes and nickels familiar in New York. I haven't seen a silver dollar in New York in many years, so I'm afariad such a coin box here would be an anomaly or a monster or something like that.

Anna K. Rau, Hamburg, Pa., sends a greeting, with snapshots of her two Kern grandchildren. . . . Nelson Antrim Crawford, a great lover of cats, mails from Topeka a card on which he has drawn a sleeping cat, beautifully done . . . From Lausanne, Switzerland, comes a stunning mountain photograph by and from the great Perry Stieglitz . . . George Matthew Adams and his charming wife, Tecla, present a dignified preeting, with one of George's columns, fitting to the season.

As president of the Society For Keeping Christmas Decorations Up Through January, I may have to fight my wife. She usually wants to take down all the wreaths and things about this time.

The SFKCDUTJ has headquarters in Winoma, Minn., and every member is president.

In Maine many old families keep Christmas decorations up throughout the year. Not a bad idea, either.

Prettiest baby to come to us on a postcard is Amy Vanderbilt's little boy, Paul. He is a laughing honey-boy . . . Paul Glase, the theater man of Reading, sent best wishes for the year just beginning, as did Sgt. Gerber Schafer, same town. I hope Gerber's charities are progressing well . . . J. The swank Hotel Marguery, on Park avenue, which was to have been wrecked last summer, has got a reprieve, like the Aquarium. In the case of the block-long residence hotel, the delay is caused by a real estate misunderstanding. A magazine company was to occupy a good portion of the skyscraper to be erected on the Marguery site.

Arthur and Marian Rudd, old friends, who have the rare privilege of driving all over the United States, all year long, year after year, write us from a town in Ohio, postmark illegible. But they'll be back in New York this month, and we'll find out about the world.

Arrives also, the January number of "Household," an excellent magazine published by Arthur Capper, Topeka. Lead article, handsomely illustrated. "Storm Over Omaha," by this person who writes this column.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. In Washington
By Bascom N. Timmons

President Truman's attacks on Washington lobbyists during the campaign has aroused talk that the Democratic-controlled 81st congress will strengthen that part of the congressional reorganization act dealing with the registration and activities of the paid representatives in the capital.

It is doubtful, however, that the administration will make any recommendations along this line until the courts have reached a decision in the indictment of former Congressman Roger Slaughter of Missouri, charged with failing to register as a lobbyist.

When Slaughter was indicted, his friends charged persecution because the president fought bitterly with his fellow Missouran while Slaughter was a member, and led the election purge which resulted in Slaughter's defeat in the Democratic primary.

Whether this charge is true or not, justice department officials who investigated and prepared the case against Slaughter, believe that the decisions resulting from Slaughter's trial will finally draw a clear-cut line between the legal and lobbying activities of an attorney in the nation's capital.

Slaughter, a prominent attorney, contends that he was merely acting as counsel for clients and therefore was not required to register as a lobbyist with congress. The justice department, however, claims that he went beyond the role of an attorney and was actually lobbying at the time he is charged with violation of the laws.

There are hundreds of attorneys in Washington who have never registered as lobbyists, which prevents any official scrutiny of their activities. Many are what might be termed borderline cases, but it is unlikely that any action will be taken against these men and women until the Slaughter decision is handed down.

Should the courts hold that most, if not all, attorneys practicing in Washington are exempt from the anti-lobbying act, it is virtually certain that congress will consider a new definition of lobbyists which would reach to the lawyers who spent part or most of their time working for or against legislation.

Senatorial courtesy makes senators act the part of gentlemen even though they might not, at times, have a gentlemanly feeling toward some of their colleagues. Its operation is always amusing to watch.

During the organization of the senate, the two Tennessee senators put on a senatorial courtesy act that completely belied the fact of their hostile political feelings toward each other.

The fact is that 80-year-old Senator Kenneth D. McKellar and newcomer Senator Estes Kefauver are engaged in a knock-down, drag-out patronage row.

Despite the fact that young Kefauver defeated the Crump-McKellar political organization in last summer's Democratic primary, McKellar still wants to keep his hands on much of the patronage in the state.

McKellar has expressed himself in person and by letter to Kefauver as to what he thinks of Kefauver. But this antagonism never showed up from the gallery when the new senate convened.

In the spirit of senatorial courtesy, Kefauver wrote McKellar that he would support him for the titular job of president pro tempore of the senate. The job is really not important, and the tender of support didn't at first appear to mean very much.

As it turned out, however, Senator Millard Tydings (D-Md.) gave the veteran Tennessee solon such a close race that Kefauver's single vote could conceivably have defeated McKellar.

In any event, Kefauver's vote for McKellar led McKellar to offer to escort Kefauver down the aisle to receive the oath of office. There had been some doubt that he would do this, despite the fact they hail from the same state.

On the opening day of the new congress, the two put on a great act. They sat together in the rear of the chamber awaiting the call of Kefauver's name, and chatted like a couple of college girls discussing dates.

When Kefauver was called, McKellar stuck out his arm jauntily for Kefauver to hold as if he were escorting the bride down the aisle. He was restooned in smiles.

After the oath was administered at the rostrum, McKellar was first to stick out a hand of congratulations. Kefauver smiled so broadly that his gold teeth gleamed.

But that was the end of the act. They returned to their respective seats, McKellar in the front row and Kefauver in the rear, as hostile as ever.

They had given senatorial courtesy a fling. On with the feuding!

Bloom Off Boom

The flurry of economic and business predictions for 1949 has subsided. The overwhelming consensus is that inflation will no longer be a major problem in 1949, but depression will not be a problem either. Business will slacken a bit, but not to the extent of a recession.

A few persons will be hurt by this, as by any economic change, but they, too, would have been worse off under depression or runaway inflation. Profits will be lower, but there will still be profits. Business failures and unemployment may increase, but only slightly.

The cost of living should drop. Corn has already decreased more than one-third, with the price of hogs close behind, with other commodities firmer but dropping. Boom conditions continue in only two industries—automobiles and steel. The sellers' market is becoming a buyers' market. The customer can expect more deference this year.

Business (this is still a consensus, not a prediction) will nevertheless be active and sales are unlikely to slump sharply. Industrialists will show caution without defeatism. The "inflationary gap" between exports and imports has been lowered from $8,700,000,000 to $5,500,000,000. No major strikes are on the horizon. The bloom is off the boom, but no killing frost is likely.

ON THE DECLINE OF LYING

Liars aren't what they once were—especially American liars. The Liars' Club of Burlington, Wis., found the native output so poor this year that it was forced to choose a Canadian for the honor of being named world champion liar.

His effort was rather feeble, by American standards. To Baron Munchausen it would have sounded downright veracious. The potent liars of the Old West (some of their tales are to be found in Mark Twain's "Roughing It") would hardly have bothered to pay it the compliment of disbelief.

The effort that won the new world championship tells of a northwester so strong that it blew 2,000 post-holes plumb out of the ground. "The rancher finally located them 125 miles away, but they were a total loss. After bouncing 125 miles cross-country, over the cactus, they were so full of holes that they wouldn't hold the dirt out any more!"

There is no occasion to seem too critical. The poor fellow was doing the best he could. Just lacked practice, no doubt.

BENNY'S BUBBLE

Well, if the Jack Benny bubble hasn't collapsed. And—surprise!—it is revealed that there wasn't any $4,000,000 involved in the complicated deal that currently has the Columbia Broadcasting System and the bureau of internal revenue issuing statements and totting up columns of figures. It was only a paltry $1,356,000.

Benny now uses the facilities of CBS. He formerly worked for the National Broadcasting Company. Last summer a pair of radio comedians rolled their talents into a package and sold it outright to CBS for a handsome sum. The bureau of internal revenue went along with the gag and permitted them to keep 75 per cent of the sum under the provisions of the capital gains section of the internal revenue law.

Benny, who evidently has as much affection for a dollar off the airwaves as he does on, executed what was described as an identical scheme. His "package" was Amusement Enterprises, Inc., of which he owns 60 per cent. For months the amount involved in the swap was described as $4,000,000. Neither CBS nor Benny denied it.

Now the bureau of internal revenue has ruled that Benny's peculiar mannerisms and talents are construed as "personal services" to an employer. Therefore, any emoluments received (Benny is radio's highest-paid comedian) are taxable as ordinary personal income. In his case it represents a whopping figure.

There is a laugh in this somewhere. No doubt the people at NBC will laugh longest.

SUN'S RAYS FOR FUEL?

Coal, wood, oil? Why not let the stored-up rays of the good old sun save fuel bills, furnace worries and lugging up logs in winter? Maybe they can be made to do just that. This is the belief, at all events, of Dr. Maria Telkes of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. She is so convinced that a sun-heating unit will work that she plans to occupy a five-room house at Dover, 15 miles away, equipped with such a unit, and commute to her work in Cambridge. Long before spring arrives it is safe to say that her experience—she admits it is only an experiment—in keeping warm without the purchase of customary fuels will be blazoned to a world too impatient to wait.

The fly in the ointment is that this sun-heating unit costs $3,000 now, when there is only one of its size in existence. It will be built into the roof of her five-room, $20,000 house. An 800-square-foot black metal sheet, back of two glass plates, will function as a heat trap to collect the sun's rays. Air circulated behind it is to be conducted to heat bins connected with registers, each bin able to serve two rooms. Warm air is stored in these bins in a chemical container and released at will through the registers. The cost of the chemicals is reported as virtually nil.

If the present experiment is successful—certainly this is no period in man's inventive progress to scoff at such an effort—it may have a revolutionary effect in saving the diminishing stocks of dependable natural fuel resources in the United States. Also, since such a "solar house" requires a roof expanse of roughly 40 by 20 feet, it can, if mass production ensues, have a considerable effect on architectural design.

IN HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8—Night club star Kay Thompson is plenty emphatic in denying that persistent rumor that she's secretly wed to one of the younger Williams brothers in her act . . . Esther Williams (Mrs. Ben Gage) has scheduled a visit from the stork for August . . . hear that RKO is plotting a picture based on the life of the late Earl Carroll . . . Bells to Ingrid Bergman, who emerged from her shell Christmas eve and, sans publicity, spent four hours in a San Fernando valley veterans hospital shaking hands with all the patients . . . Divorced: Actress Pamela Blake and television producer Michael Stokey.

Producer William Cagney will consider it a happy new year if he can persuade Lucille Wagner to swap "I do's" with him . . . Weren't composer David Rose and his bride, Betty Bigelow, secretly married a full month before their much-publicized wedding ceremony in Las Vegas? . . . Wanda Hendrix (scheduled to marry Audie Murphy today) has been upped to full star rating by Paramount . . . According to intimates, Ronald Coleman, last year's Acadamy Award winner, plans to make one picture only in 1949 and then retire for keeps.

Mrs. Forrest Tucker will file for divorce this month . . . Understand that Universal-International, after considering the boxoffice failure of Deanna Durbin's recent pictures, will try to buy up the remainder of her contract . . . Roy Rogers, born Leonard Slye, will ask Los Angeles courts to legalize his screen name.

PREVIEW NIGHTS: Pic of the week: Republic's "Wake of the Red Witch," (John Wayne-Gail Russell-Gig Young-Adele Mara). Big, suspensful, swashbuckling—it's a natural of all outdoor action fans . . . RECOMMENDED: MGM's "The Sun Comes Up" (Jeanette MacDonald-Lloyd Nolan-Claude Jarman Jr.-Lassie). Sentimental drama with musical overtones, and rich enough in entertainment value to win favor with every audience . . . GOOD: RKO's "Gun Smugglers" (Tim Holt-Richard Martin-Gary Gray-Martha Hyer). Preferred fare for western addicts . . . Columbia's "Boston Blackie's Chinese Venture" (Chester Morris - Maylia - Richard Lane). A high spot in a better than average series . . . SO-SO: Monogram's "Back Trail" (Johnny Mack Brown-Raymond Hatton). A routine western, less entertaining than most . . . BEST PERFORMANCE: Janette MacDonald in "The Sun Comes Up."

As a matter of fact, I didn't make any New Year's resolutions (probably because I've broken too many in my time to retain any self-confidence), but I was tempted to undertake one—namely a pledge to write nothing more about the Tyrone Power-Linda Christian romance until those two will-o'-the-wisp either marry or give one another the gate. I consider that pledge out of a kindly feeling toward Power and Miss Christian, for I'm inclined to believe that all the publicity about their romantic association is making them, not only ridiculous, but boresome. They simply aren't important enough to justify such a waste of printer's ink. I'll let you know when they've finally made up their minds.

A Hollywood columnist, after printing the wide-spread report that Maria Montez, being without professional prospects here, will return to Europe for several picture roles, plaintively asks: "What's happened to Maria's Hollywood career?" Well, the answer to that question shouldn't bee too difficult. Making her next to the last picture at Universal-International, Miss Montez flew into a tizzle because she thought she was being somewhat slighted in the billing, engaged an attorney and sued the studio. Her antics gave the producers headaches that persisted for months. In her last picture here, trouble also reared its ugly head. The fiery Maria, after a catch-as-catch-can battle out of court, again sued her producer. In view of that record, isn't it quite possible that Hollywood's film-makers have decided that the lady's charms are more than off-set by her claws?

With all the talk about economy drives in the studios, and dwindling boxoffice returns, have yet to hear anyone in movie officialdom suggest the most obvious of all cures for the current illness. Why not eliminate double features?

Many audience polls, conducted in the past ten years have indicated that a majority of theatre-goers would accept single features. Personally, I know many people who have nearly quit going to theatres because they refuse to suffer through boresome "B" offerings. Theatre men, almost without exceptions, regret the double feature system. It cuts down their audience turnover, ups their total rentals and forces them to maintain high ticket prices. In short, the only beneficiaries are the "quikie" producers, and the industry would be better off without most of them.

In Washington

By Bascom N. Timmons

President Truman's attacks on Washington lobbyists during the campaign has aroused talk that the Democratic-controlled 81st congress will strengthen that part of the congressional reorganization act dealing with the registration and activities of the paid representatives in the capital.

It is doubtful, however, that the administration will make any recommendations along this line until the courts have reached a decision in the indictment of former Congressman Roger Slaughter of Missouri, charged with failing to register as a lobbyist.

When Slaughter was indicted, his friends charged persecution because the president fought bitterly with his fellow Missouran while Slaughter was a member, and led the election purge which resulted in Slaughter's defeat in the Democratic primary.

Whether this charge is true or not, justice department officials who investigated and prepared the case against Slaughter, believe that the decisions resulting from Slaughter's trial will finally draw a clear-cut line between the legal and lobbying activities of an attorney in the nation's capital.

Slaughter, a prominent attorney, contends that he was merely acting as counsel for clients and therefore was not required to register as a lobbyist with congress. The justice department, however, claims that he went beyond the role of an attorney and was actually lobbying at the time he is charged with violation of the laws.

There are hundreds of attorneys in Washington who have never registered as lobbyists, which prevents any official scrutiny of their activities. Many are what might be termed borderline cases, but it is unlikely that any action will be taken against these men and women until the Slaughter decision is handed down.

Should the courts hold that most, if not all, attorneys practicing in Washington are exempt from the anti-lobbying act, it is virtually certain that congress will consider a new definition of lobbyists which would reach to the lawyers who spent part or most of their time working for or against legislation.

Senatorial courtesy makes senators act the part of gentlemen even though they might not, at times, have a gentlemanly feeling toward some of their colleagues. Its operation is always amusing to watch.

During the organization of the senate, the two Tennessee senators put on a senatorial courtesy act that completely belied the fact of their hostile political feelings toward each other.

The fact is that 80-year-old Senator Kenneth D. McKellar and newcomer Senator Estes Kefauver are engaged in a knock-down, drag-out patronage row.

Despite the fact that young Kefauver defeated the Crump-McKellar political organization in last summer's Democratic primary, McKellar still wants to keep his hands on much of the patronage in the state.

McKellar has expressed himself in person and by letter to Kefauver as to what he thinks of Kefauver. But this antagonism never showed up from the gallery when the new senate convened.

In the spirit of senatorial courtesy, Kefauver wrote McKellar that he would support him for the titular job of president pro tempore of the senate. The job is really not important, and the tender of support didn't at first appear to mean very much.

As it turned out, however, Senator Millard Tydings (D-Md.) gave the veteran Tennessee solon such a close race that Kefauver's single vote could conceivably have defeated McKellar.

In any event, Kefauver's vote for McKellar led McKellar to offer to escort Kefauver down the aisle to receive the oath of office. There had been some doubt that he would do this, despite the fact they hail from the same state.

On the opening day of the new congress, the two put on a great act. They sat together in the rear of the chamber awaiting the call of Kefauver's name, and chatted like a couple of college girls discussing dates.

When Kefauver was called, McKellar stuck out his arm jauntily for Kefauver to hold as if he were escorting the bride down the aisle. He was restooned in smiles.

After the oath was administered at the rostrum, McKellar was first to stick out a hand of congratulations. Kefauver smiled so broadly that his gold teeth gleamed.

But that was the end of the act. They returned to their respective seats, McKellar in the front row and Kefauver in the rear, as hostile as ever.

They had given senatorial courtesy a fling. On with the feuding!

FALSE VALUES

The 81st congress of the United States is being asked to approve assumption by the federal government of responsibility for the welfare of the people along many lines—medicine and health and education and housing and many others.

Thus we see a continuation of the trend toward the "government'll take care of you" idea which sincere, patriotic Americans, regardless of political affiliation, know must be reversed if our republic is to survive.

It is said that when Benjamin Franklin came out of the hall where they were holding the constitutional convention, the people crowded around him and asked, "Mr. Franklin, what do we have?" His answer was, "You have a republic, if you can keep it." We have now reached that period in our history when it must rather soon be decided whether we "can keep it."

We cannot keep our republic if we continue to destroy the dignity of the individual. Nearly 2,000 years ago it was laid down that "If any would not work, neither should he eat." At first thought, that seems like a hard rule. But a great moral issue is involved, a moral issue that no nation can violate and remain a great nation.

An individual who gains his subsistence from sources outside his own efforts must inevitably lose his independence, his self-reliance, his initiative; he no longer has the energy and the incentive to create and build and accomplish. A nation of such individuals is doomed for oblivion, willy-nilly. Time and again nations in history have attempted to violate this rule—and always with the same result. Yet the idea of getting "something for nothing" is so seductive that people continue to try it.

Far beyond all other nations in history, the United States of America has seemed to be destined to make secure the dignity of the individual. Our whole system of government is founded on the Christian principle that the individual is supreme, that the individual is responsible for his own welfare and his own future. More than any other, our nation has proven that the system works—by becoming the most powerful, the most productive nation in the history of the world in the comparatively short period of 160 years; by serving as the arsenal of democracy in two worldwide wars; by making it possible for its people to attain the highest standard of living the world has ever known.

But even here—where it should never happen—we seem to be suffering from the general sense of false values that is plaguing the world today. The Socialist aim, expressed in the phrase "each according to his needs," has produced an unnatural, even an immoral, state of mind among many people. This is in face of the fact that it must be obvious, on reflection, that the system which professes to distribute rights to the satisfaction of needs and ignores the sources from which those needs can alone be supplied, must inevitably collapse. This is the situation in Great Britain now, where a Socialist government has control, and it is the trend in this nation, whether we know it or not and whether we believe it or not.

Let us at least realize what we are doing as we consider turning the provisions for our welfare over to the government. Let us beware of these false values. Want must never have priority over Worth. The union membership card must never be of more importance than the skill of the craftsman. The rationing coupon must never be more needful to the housewife than cash. And, finally, the debtor must never be the master of the creditor.

It is well to want things. Freedom from want was one of the rankest of the delusions offered by the New Dealers! It is also well to satisfy these wants—but this can be done only by the "sweat of one's brow" and not by the benevolence of a paternalistic government. It just won't work any other way.

These Days
By George E. Sokolsky

THE DUBINSKY PLAN

The International Ladies Garment Works Union has organized itself for social services to its own members. This has been variously interpreted, but the outsider need only view the fact that its officials are more amenable to its members than is usual in a unionism which has been invaded by racketeers, used by politicians and which has often become the private businesses of its officials. The I. L. G. W. U. is not like that.

The leader of this union is David Dubinsky, who possesses unusual qualities of statesmanship. He is an old-fashioned Social Democrat, which makes him violently anti-Communist and sometimes leads him far afield into European politics. Yet the money his union spends fighting Communism in such countries as Italy and Poland is better spent than lots of funds other unions use in ways less commendable. One may be critical of such extramural activities without failing to recognize that American unions are reservoirs of capital which need siphoning off lest they become too large and therefore dangerous.

So, in the discussion of the amendments of the Taft-Hartley Act, Dubinsky jumped the gun with a constructive program which realistically recognizes first, that labor unions, like corporations, cannot exist in an anarchy; secondly, that many phases of the Taft-Hartley Act are beneficial to labor as well as management and need to be retained; and finally that those to which the labor unions object must not be completely abandoned unless for them are substituted measures which protect the American system of government by law.

While many will quarrel with this or that phase of his proposals, the fact that his offering admits the need for regulation, seeks to protect the United tSates from sabotage and whimsically organized non-production, forces a recognition of his sense of responsibility and statesmanship. It is particularly encouraging to find a labor leader courageoulsy facing not the fact of the November election but the welfare of the United States in troubled times.

Before anyone can honestly make up his mind on the Taft-Hartley Act and what should be done about it, he should read the "report of the joint committee on labor-management relations" made to the congress of the United States. This is a report on how the Taft-Hartley Act actually performed up-to-date, in full detail. For instance, on the subject of strikes, the comparison between 1947 and 1948, the period when the Act was in existence, shows a marked gain; also wages increased; union membership increased; the Communist control of unions lessened. On the subject of the non-Communist affidavit, the report states:

"Despite the protests by many union leaders and officials against the Act, and against the filing requirements, accompanied by a threat of concerted refusal to file affidavits and registration statements, it is to be noted that no such boycott of the National Labor Relations board and of the procedures of the law has ensued. Officers of a large majority of labor organizations have complied with the filing requirements. In many instances, unions have taken decisive action to compel reluctant officers to comply with the filing requirements. Refusals by incumbent officers to make the affidavit has been an issue in a number of union elections which resulted in such officers being denied re-election. One large international union amended its constitution to require all of its officers to make the non-Communist oath. There has been considerable evidence of membership dissatisfaction with the policy of those unions who have sought to boycott the processes of the board. . . It has already been fairly well demonstrated that the American workingman will take steps to rid his union of Communistic leadership when the character of that leadership has been identified to his satisfaction."

The question of Communst infiltration and control of unions is important as their widespread influence in the state department. Communist unions can cripple us at the outset of the next war, depriving this country of the initiative in the most critical moments of the beginning of hostilities. For instance, control of the electrical equipment industry and the transportation industries by Communist unions, partisans of our enemy, could, at the outset of a war, leave this country helpless for a sufficient period to produce defeat.

NEW YORK—Thinking out loud: My family physician, Dr. Ed McCabe, wishes me all joy for the year to come, but he doesn't include a wish for good health, as do so many readers. Perhaps that's a delicate subject. . . . My next-door neighbor, Dr. F. P. Loiacono, whom I've never met, also sends polite good wishes. . . James W. Brown, of Editor & Publisher, also a neighbor, sends a philosophical treatise from Marcus Arelieus, whom I used to read voraciuosly.

Two of our most satisfactory holiday gifts were telephone calls from our two distant daughters, Pat called from State College, N. M., within a few miles of the Mexican border, and Mary from Iowa City, within a few minutes of each other. Pat said the telephone from which she talked has slots for silver dollars and half dollars, as well as for the quarters, dimes and nickels familiar in New York. I haven't seen a silver dollar in New York in many years, so I'm afariad such a coin box here would be an anomaly or a monster or something like that.

Anna K. Rau, Hamburg, Pa., sends a greeting, with snapshots of her two Kern grandchildren. . . . Nelson Antrim Crawford, a great lover of cats, mails from Topeka a card on which he has drawn a sleeping cat, beautifully done . . . From Lausanne, Switzerland, comes a stunning mountain photograph by and from the great Perry Stieglitz . . . George Matthew Adams and his charming wife, Tecla, present a dignified preeting, with one of George's columns, fitting to the season.

As president of the Society For Keeping Christmas Decorations Up Through January, I may have to fight my wife. She usually wants to take down all the wreaths and things about this time.

In Maine many old families keep Christmas decorations up throughout the year. Not a bad idea, either.

Prettiest baby to come to us on a postcard is Amy Vanderbilt's little boy, Paul. He is a laughing honey-boy . . . Paul Glase, the theater man of Reading, sent best wishes for the year just beginning, as did Sgt. Gerber Schafer, same town. I hope Gerber's charities are progressing well . . . J. Frank Cole, New York; George Wellbaum, a son of Indiana and of the telephone company; Longtime friend Mildred Bellah, all give appreciated good wishes.

The swank Hotel Marguery, on Park avenue, which was to have been wrecked last summer, has got a reprieve, like the Aquarium. In the case of the block-long residence hotel, the delay is caused by a real estate misunderstanding. A magazine company was to occupy a good portion of the skyscraper to be erected on the Marguery site.

Arthur and Marian Rudd, old friends, who have the rare privilege of driving all over the United States, all year long, year after year, write us from a town in Ohio, postmark illegible. But they'll be back in New York this month, and we'll find out about the world.

OUR CHILDREN

VOCATIONAL TRAINING
By Angelo Patri

Vocational training is good for everybody. Members of the higher intelligence group need it quite as much if not more than the others; but everybody is the better equipped for happy living if their hands find work to do, work they enjoy doing.

Hands are closely allied to intelligence. What they discover to be pleasant and useful they pass on to the mind to nourish its power to see, feel and understand correctly. Hands develop the skills that mean so much to earning a living and in earning a place in society. People have deep respect for the ones who can do rather than dream or talk, and doing is a surprisingly powerful stimulant to well-being.

Our homes are not equipped to allow children to do useful work, and so they are deprived of one of the richest sources of their growth and development. The schools are trying to make up for it by putting vocational courses and schools within reach of some of the children. However, they should be in reach of every school child without regard to his intelligence quotient.

We make odd mistakes about this sort of training. Some believe that only dull children can profit by vocational training. Dull children—be it known—do not, cannot, do accurate work and so are not fine workers in crafts or trades. Only the keen-minded are accurate, so the best workers are keen-minded children and grown people. Ever see a dull-minded mechanic do good work? I haven't either.

The students in professional schools need handwork as much as the other children and students do. Hands feed intelligence in professional fields as they do in all others. The surgeon is skillful with his hands; so is the musician, and the lawyer ought to be. Many of them would profit by more attention to this side of their natures. I have a lawyer friend who is a fine cabinet maker. Our family doctor is a skilled mechanic, and in his shop finds relief from the tensions his work creates.

Our schools should be equipped to teach crafts, trades and the arts. They should not send out skilled workers—these are trained after school graduation in the trade unions, I hope—but to give the young ones a balanced experience, to allow their hands to fulfill their function of nourishing their minds and keeping them the sane and useful citizens they were intended to be. We use handwork to restore unbalanced minds. How about using it to prevent the unbalance in the first place?

How to overcome slowness in children is discussed by Dr. Patri in leaflet P-11, "Slowness."

INDICT DAUGHTER MIXED IN SLAYING

Forty-Two-Year-Old Woman Charged In Death Of Mother On Plantation

GREENVILLE, Miss., Jan. 8.—(AP)—The Washington county grand jury today indicted Mrs. Ruth Thompson Dickins, member of a prominent delta family, on murder charges in the slaying of her mother, Mrs. Idella Long Thompson, at nearby Leland on Nov. 17.

Mrs. Dickins told Sheriff Hugh Foote after the slaying that her 69-year-old mother was beaten to death in the latter's residence on fashionable Deer Creek drive by an unidentified negro.

She said she visited the mother's home on the afternoon of the slaying and that the negro attacked her after she had entered the residence by a rear door.

Mrs. Dickins, 42, told the sheriff that the negro used a pair of rosebud pruning shears as the death weapon. She said the man turned upon her and that she grappled with him for possession of the shears. Mrs. Dickins received cuts and arm injuries.

Mrs. Thompson's slaying marked the third violent death in the Thompson family during the past several years.

Her late husband, J. Wood Thompson, former president of the Mississippi levee commission, was found shot to death in his home at Leland about nine years ago.

Previously, a son-in-law that Deputy Sheriff M. A. Etheridge identified only as "Meadors," was ambushed and shot to death as he sat in his Leland home during the flood of 1927.

Etheridge said the Meadors slaying was unsolved. He said Thompson's death was "a suicide."

A short while after return of the indictment, Sheriff Foote drove to Leland and arrested Mrs. Dickins at her home. Mrs. Dickins accompanied the sheriff to the county jail here, posted $10,000 bond and was released.

The bond was signed by her husband, John Dickins, a Greenville cotton man; Hilton Waits and Shields Hood of Leland and Attorney Ben Wilkes of Greenville.

Wilkes, who is serving as Mrs. Dickins' attorney, said she will plead innocent. Mrs. Dickins made no immediate statement.

She is a graduate of Rollins College and is the mother of two girls, 10 and 14 years old, respectively.

The capias for her arrest is returnable to circuit court here on Jan. 17.

tion with the school to enter the navy. While in the service, he served as an athletic instructor before receiving his commission as gunnery officer. Avants saw action in every combat area and was placed on an inactive status in the navy.

Upon being honorably discharged, he returned to Ouachita Parish High School and resumed his duties there.

Avants is the past president of the Louisiana Education Association and is a member of the Methodist Church, of the Lions Club and is a Mason.

Last night Avants issued the following statement:

"I have accepted the position of superintendent of education of the Ouachita parish schools for a four year term, and am elated over the thought of returning to Ouachita parish. I fully realize the significance and the great responsibility of the position of superintendent.

"I pledge to the Ouachita parish school board, the school children, the patrons of the schools and the teachers of this parish to work toward building an educational program which will meet the needs of all the children and our parish. If we are to educate our boys and girls to become useful citizens in an ever-changing society, we must expand our educational program to reach the need of every child entrusted under our guidance. We must enrich our curriculum to include home economics, home living, industrial arts, vocational and agricultural education, music, expanded athletic program, commerce and the many other subjects included in an all-round educational program.

"We must improve the working conditions of our teachers. Our teachers must feel secure in their positions, and I shall exert every effort to improve the relationship between the administration forces of the school system and our teachers. It is impossible to carry out a successful educational program without a happy and contented staff of teachers. I shall do everything possible to help develop this harmony in the Ouachita parish schools.

"Of all the communities in Louisiana, I know of not one which is more entitled to a junior—senior high school than West Monroe. I am in complete accord with C. C. Wall, Jr., president of the Ouachita parish school board, and the other board members supporting this project. West Monroe and the rural wards have been neglected of equal educational opportunities, and we are going to put forth every effort to correct this deplorable condition. The people of this parish can rest assured that we are going to work for a program which will insure every child in the parish an equal chance to develop his capacities and potentialities.

"I solicit the support of all interested citizens in this parish to help us plan and organize a well-balanced educational program. There is much to be done to improve our school system, but by all working together this can be accomplished.

"Mrs. Avants joins me in expressing our sincere appreciation to the board members and our many friends, who have worked so diligently to elect me to this high position of trust. We are indeed happy to bring our children to live with you here in Ouachita parish. Also I should like to use this means of thanking our many friends for their many congratulatory messages."

Since 1900 total life insurance owned in the United States has increased 20 times, while the population has not yet doubled.

REV. HAYWARD

—let me assure you that throughout these twenty-seven years as your rector, my heart's desire has been to do only those things which as pastor and priest would be for your spiritual growth and strength. So now—due to failing health and the insistence of my physicians—I feel it becomes incumbent upon me to do that which I am convinced is the right thing for the further development and enrichment in this part of God's vineyard. So I am asking to be relieved of the duties as rector of Grace Church.

"I shall say more to you later on, but in the meantime I pray God's continued blessing upon you all; and may God guide the wardens and vestrymen in securing my successor.

"Sincerely and faithfully,

"EDWARD FARREN HAYWARD,
"Rector."

In connection with Reverend Hayward's resignation some facts embodying the history of the Grace Church are of interest.

January, 1943, was such as to mark history for Grace Church when it was host to the annual meeting of the Diocese of Louisiana in the 105th annual convention session and at this time the handsome church edifice became free of all indebtedness. A special service was held in this connection. The building had been formally opened on Easter Sunday, 1926.

Grace Church has come a long way since September, 1847, when the Rev. C. S. Hodges held the first Episcopal service here. In the year, 1856, the Right Rev. Leonidas Polk, bishop of Louisiana, visited Monroe, accompanied by the Rev. William Miller, of Oak Ridge, and the Rev. Thomas B. Lawson, took steps toward the establishment of an Episcopal Church in Monroe.

In 1866, following the close of the war, the Rev. Lawson began ways for the building of the church and the congregation was incorporated as "Grace Church, Monroe, 1866." The cornerstone was laid in 1870 at Oak and St. John streets with Reverend Lawson as rector. Here the church was located until destroyed by fire December 27, 1922. The cornerstone of the present Grace Church was laid October 26, 1925, with Bishop Sessums officiating, assisted by the Right Rev. Harry R. Carson, D.D., together with Rev. E. F. Hayward. On the following Easter Sunday it was used for the first time.

With a vision and unswerving loyalty to his church and to the entire community, Reverend Hayward has been in almost constant demand for years as public speaker in a multitude of community affairs as well as in attendance to his church duties and he has been rated among the most brilliant public speakers here.

He came to the Grace Church when it occupied an old but highly venerable edifice at St. John and Oak streets, being the oldest or at least next to the oldest church here. In the fire in the Christmas holidays of 1923, this old landmark was destroyed, and thereafter the congregation worshipped in a frame temporary building on the same site—now occupied by the Vaughan-Bendel-Wright Clinic.

Realizing the need for a church on the north side, Reverend Hayward urged that a new edifice be erected at Fourth and Glenmar and on this site the handsome English cathedral type present edifice was erected at a cost of $100,000. This church was paid out in full in January, 1943.

In the intervening years since Reverend Hayward became identified as leader of this church, the membership grew from 200 to 600 members, many of whom are among the most prominent and influential residents of Monroe. The church is regarded as standing as a monument to the foresight, self-denial and spiritual influence of Reverand Hayward and his flock.

The retiring pastor stated Saturday that he will continue to reside at 301 College avenue, overlooking Northeast Junior College, and will endeavor as his physician advises to live a few more years in quiet retirement.

Reverend and Mrs. Hayward are parents of five children and have eight grandchildren. Their sons and daughters are: Edward F. Hayward, Jr., James Hayward and the former Miss Ann Hayward, now Mrs. Floyd Stone, Jr., all of Monroe; the former Miss Mary Hayward, now the wife of Dr. Webb in St. Louis, Mo., and the former Helena Hayward, now Mrs. Frank Morgan, of Atlanta, Ga.

Reverend Hayward is a native of Philadelphia, Pa., where he was educated and his first pastorate was in Camden, N. J., later going in 1912 to become a rector in Chippewa Falls, Wis. He then next went as rector to a church in Enid, Okla., then to Houston and on to Monroe.

EGYPT ANNOUNCES

Hashemite King (Abdullah of Trans-Jordan)."

Azzam Pasha predicted that fighting will reopen in Palestine unless Israeli troops withdraw from their newly won Negev battleground.

"We are still in the early phases of the struggle for liberation of Palestine," he said in a news conference. "We have still before us a long struggle which will take many forms."

The spokesman for the league, which represents seven Arab nations, spoke pointedly of the failure of some of those countries to help Egypt in the latest fight with Israel, and asserted:

"Although the Egyptian government has been forced for various reasons to accept a cease-fire (last June) while the Egyptian army had the initiative on the battlefield, there is no doubt the Zionists will not respect their pledges.

"Thus, this phase is similar to previous phases, and anybody who thinks battles will not be renewed in Palestine will be mistaken."

He said the fighting has brought out two points.

"One, which is regrettable, is the hesitation of some politicians in Arab countries." His reference obviously was to failure of some league members to join Egypt in the renewed fighting.

The other point, he added, was the way the Egyptian army, "supported by the Egyptian nation and some Arab forces such as Saudi Arabians and Palestinians," had "defended the right and stood firm for Allah."

He predicted this year would see the tide turn toward final Arab victory in the Holy Land.

The latest cease-fire order still leaves many explosive issues to be settled. Chief of these is the United Nations security council demand that Jewish forces withdraw in the Negev to the positions they held before the Israeli advance began on Oct. 14 during the truce.

Another question is what to do about Egyptian troops isolated at Faluja. The Egyptians contend the Israelis refuse to permit these troops to return to Egypt, and have attacked them repeatedly since they were trapped in mid-October.

Negotiation of an armistice to replace the Palestine truce is another knotty problem.

All of these are covered by the security council's orders of Nov. 4 and Nov. 16, or by plans worked out by Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, acting U. N. mediator, in his efforts to make the orders effective.

Egypt and Israel were miles apart in their interpretation of the orders, however, even before the last outburst of fighting in the Negev.

The Egyptian foreign office said recently that, just before the new fighting started on Dec. 21, Egypt offered to enter into negotiations with U. N. representatives for a permanent armistice within three days after the Jews would comply with the council's withdrawal orders.

(The Jews said they withdrew the reinforcements sent into the Negev on and after Oct. 14 and that this constituted compliance. However, they refused to withdraw from captured Beersheba or give up their siege of Faluja.)

Announcing yesterday's cease-fire order to its troops, Egypt said the order was conditional on "necessary measures" being taken to carry out the council's orders. Whether Egyptian participation in armistice negotiations will be conditioned, as before, on the prior withdrawal of Jewish forces in the Negev is not yet apparent. U. N. representatives here said they had no information as to what the next step would be.

the encircled forces. It also claimed the Reds were using poison gas.

(The Communist side, as heard in a broadcast by The Associated Press at San Francisco:

(That the nationalists lost 9,000 men in the first 19 hours of fighting and that the defenders were preparing to use poison gas. Both sides exaggerate casualties and both often accuse the other of using poison gas. This charge has never been proved.)

While the attacks mounted in intensity on the central front, reports reaching Nanking from the north said all fighting had ceased abruptly at Tientsin, which has been under heavy Red assault.

These reports aroused speculation in Nanking that some sort of a deal had been worked out for the surrender of the city.

Aside from the diplomatic maneuvering, peace proponents in Nanking also were busy.

Vice President Li Tsung-jen was reported in frequent sessions with Chang Chi-chung, minister without portfolio in the cabinet, and others who are supposed to be trying to form a "peace bloc."

Li has been mentioned as the one to take over the government and try to work out a peacable solution to the civil war should President Chiang Kai-shek step aside.

One well-informed source said Chiang would "retire" within the next few days, apparently convinced there is no other way to bring the Communists to the table of negotiations.

Former Premier Chang Chun, another who has been classed as a peace advocate, flew off to Hankow for a meeting with Gen. Pai Chung-ksi, commander in central China.

It was reported he went at Pai's request to have someone come to Hankow and see for himself that the commander had no intention of withdrawing his troops to south China.

Pai has been reported dissatisfied with President Chiang Kai-shek's peace offer. One unconfirmed account said he had withdrawn the troops he had left north of Nanking, for the purpose of moving into south China.

It was considered significant here that a close adviser to Vice President Li went along with the former premier. The adviser is Huang Shao-hsiung.

(Associated Press Correspondent Spencer Moosa in Peiping said there were reports that the long-heralded meeting between Hong Kong dissidents and Red leaders would be held at Shihkiachwang, regional Red capital 160 miles southwest of Peiping.)

The Hong Kong group is headed by Marshall Li Chishen, once Chiang's chief of staff who broke with him and fled into exile. Li says he is no Communist but is willing to work with the Reds in order to form a coalition government. He is believed on his way north now.

$24 in nickels taken, officers said. Investigators said the circumstances make it obvious that juveniles made the entrance.

Five cartons of cigarettes, two boxes of cigars, two cartons of gum, a carton of tums and two boxes of chocolate candy were reported stolen from Neal's grocery store, 1510 Cypress street, in West Monroe, West Monroe police said. Investigating officers said the prowlers pryed the rear door of the building open to break in.

Friday night's thievery made the second outbreak in West Monroe. Wednesday of last week three businesses were broken into, West Monroe police stated.

On Wednesday night the Strand Theater, Morrison and Heacock's garage and Calvert's hardware were victims. The total amount of cash stolen was $3 and several other small items were reported missing.

Eggs left for four days in a warm store or kitchen lose as much "freshness" as eggs kept for several weeks in the refrigerator in a covered container.

RECIPROCAL TRADE RENEWAL IS ASKED

Truman Urges Lifting Of Restrictions Placed On Agreements By G. O. P.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8—(AP)—President Truman today urged a before-April extension of the reciprocal trade agreements act minus "hampering restrictions" approved by the Republican-controlled 80th congress.

He also asked congress to extend the new act until Jun 12, 1951, in line with his request to the congress last year. The old congress extended the law only June 30, 1949, and inserted certain limitations opposed by the president.

In a letter to Senator George (D-Ga.) and Representative Doughton (D-N. C.), who will head the tariff-handling committees in the current congress, Mr. Truman said speedy action is needed because negotiations will start in April to expand the reciprocal program.

These negotiations are on proposed extension to 13 other nations the tariff-reduction agreement of 1947 signed by the United States and 22 other nations.

The president's letter today did not detail the "hampering restrictions" he said congress place in the law. But it was apparent he had in mind a clause giving the tariff commission greater powers over trade agreements.

Under this provision the president is required to furnish the commission a list of commodities to be covered in a prospective agreement. The commission then holds hearings and can suggest "peril points" beyond which it believes tariff cuts should not go lest they injure domestic industry. It has four months to make recommendations.

The president last year termed this provision "complicated, time-consuming and unnecessary procedure." The state department contended it could wreck the whole trade program.

"The trade agreements program," the president said today, "has proved itself to the people of the United States. It has justly earned their overwhelming support. We must be in a position to press that program forward with vigor."

He said extension of the 1947 agreement to other nations "is a practical cooperative effort to remove unnecessary obstacles to the building of a stable and prosperous world." he added:

"The restrictive provisions and limited extension of the present trade agreements law materially hamper the effectiveness of United States participation in this effort.

"That is why it is so important that the existing trade agreements act be promptly repealed, and that the act as it existed on March 1, 1948, be extended ***."

Mr. Truman said unless nations can sell each other the products of their agriculture, labor and industry to the greatest possible extent "there can be no sure foundation for economic peace."

COTTON

if the domestic stocks of American cotton are not going to pile up in proportions as large as those of the thirties, with the resultant pressure on prices. But the 1948 experience shows that, barring bad weather or heavy losses from infestation, no effective controls can be imposed unless the secretary is authorized to fix them below 23,500,000 acres.

Just how this will be accomplished will be the chief subject of discussion at the coming conferences. A spokesman for the department said that it has no specific proposals to make, but will draft its recommendations to congress after hearing from the committee representatives. It is generally agreed, however, that a complete revamping of the pre-war quotas, due to wartime acreage shifts and the rapid increase in per acre yields, is absolutely necessary.

There is some indication that an attempt will be made to reach a historic base upon which to allot individual farm quotas in the first control year, but there is no doubt that this will arouse a major controversy. For instance, advance reports received here indicate that cotton growers are planning to plant their largest acreage since before the war in 1949, hoping that this heavy acreage will be used in computing their acreage allotments for 1950. Some officials believe that 1949 acreage will have to be eliminated if any real historic base can be secured.

Officials of the department also plan to discuss with the growers at the conferences other problems which have arisen since the war. One of the major ones is a method of improving and speeding the classing of cotton offered for loan this year ,togther with the lack of sufficient classing facilities, created many complaints among the growers.

FRATERNITY HOUSE GUTTED BY FLAMES

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Members of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity at Louisiana State University were homeless and temporarily destitute tonight.

The fraternity house was gutted by fire this afternoon. None of the 25 occupants was injured, but the entire contents, including the students' clothes and other personal belongings, were destroyed.

The cause was not immediately determined. The fire apparently started in the attic and swept quickly through the two-story frame structure. No fraternity members were in the upstairs bedrooms, but some in the lower part of the house and others who were painting the exterior had to run to escape the flames.

The university announced arrangements to house them in dormitories and to make emergency loans to any who lacked cash.

BIPARTISAN

name Paul G. Hoffman as Marshall plan administrator.

Hoffman had the vigorous support of Vandenberg.

Senator Taft of Ohio, top senate policy leader, announced at New Haven, Conn., that he "will certainly" vote for Acheson. That indicated that some of the Republicans are willing to go along on the nomination.

But Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the Republican floor leader, said he was surprised that the president did not consult with Vandenberg before making the appointment.

"So far as I personally am concerned, I have not changed my mind about Acheson," said Wherry, who fought Acheson's confirmation as undersecretary of state in September, 1945.

Despite the Republican uprising over the Democratic seizure of a three-man majority on the foreign relations committee, Senator Connally (D.-Texas), new chairman of the committee, predicted that Acheson would be confirmed. This seemed certain if only in view of the Democratic majority.

Besides it is customary for the senate to go along with a presidential cabinet choice.

Senator Smith (R.-N. J.) also urged that the foreign relations committee explore with Acheson his "views on the pending critical issues of our foreign policy."

Smith called Acheson and James Webb, named as undersecretary, "two distinguished Americans with a background of wide experience and important national service."

Senator Mundt (R.-S. D.), former member of the house committee investigating un-American activities, suggested that the senate foreign relations committee hear testimony from Whittaker Chambers, admitted former Communist courier, and Adolf A. Berle, Jr., former assistant secretary of state, on the Acheson appointment.

Mundt also urged that former Ambassador Lane be called as a witness, adding:

"I have no personal information or reasons for believing that Dean Acheson would not now support and favor a program designed to protect America and the free areas of the world against further oppressive invasions by the Communist conspiracy."

Mundt asserted that "like many other Americans," at one time Acheson "appeared to favor an appeasement program toward Russia which the march of events and an analysis of Communist objectives demonstrated to be an attitude dangerous to the preservation of peace and the protection of our national security."

Mundt did not explain in his statement why he thought the three men should be called.

Berle testified last August before the un-American activities committee, and went into state department behind-the-scenes affairs during 1944 when Russia was our wartime ally. He disclosed that two groups in the department were split in their views about Russia, one being "Mr. Acheson's group." Acheson was undersecretary of state.

Berle Adhered, he said, to a group which felt that the Russians were not going to be sympathetic or cooperative, while the "Acheson group" took an opposite position. One group, he said, favored a stronger policy toward Russia, and the other wanted to play down friction between Washington and Moscow.

Berle said that Alger Hiss belonged to the Acheson group. Hiss, then a state department official, now is under indictment for perjury in denying that he gave Chambers secret state department papers some six years before the policy situation described by Berle.

Arthur Bliss Lane, ambassabor to Poland in the period after the war, declined to comment on Mundt's suggestion that he be called.

Lane, in a book on his experiences, was critical of state department policy toward the Polish Communist government under Acheson. He described the policy as "financial appeasement" of Poland and other Red satellite states.

In June, 1947, Acheson attracted the anger of Russia by a speech in which he said Russian policy was retarding world recovery. He was bitterly assailed by the official Communist newspaper.

President Truman was asked yesterday whether the Acheson appointment portended any change in the stiff policy toward Aussia and he emphasized that it does not.

Vandenberg, who was chairman of the committee in the 80th congress, expressed deep regret in his statement at the retirement of Secretary Marshall, whom he called "one of the great Americans of all time."

The senator also said he was regretful over the retirement of undersecretary of State Robert Lovett.

The president's failure to consult with Vanderberg is likely to be seized upon by administration critics as another sign that the bipartisan foreign policy has been dealt a blow.

Capehart was outspoken in his criticism of the senate Democrats in voting themselves eight of the 13 seats on the foreign relations committee. The ratio in the Republican congress was 7 to 6.

Capehart, who has gone along reluctantly on some foreign affairs issues in the past, said he thinks the time has come for Republicans to speak up on foreign, as well as domestic, issues.

"It is just a fundamentally sound and right to debate, argue—and possibly disagree—on foreign policy as on domestic policy," he declared.

"If we are going to be the world's leader, then we must work out policies by debating them fully and deciding what is best to do. We can't just go along blindly with everything the administration proposes."

The change in party ratios on the committee was vigorously protested by Vandenberg and Senator Morse (R-Ore.), as well as other Republicans in the senate last week.

A prediction by Morse that it would put Vandenberg at a disadvantage in attempts to rally GOP members behind new administration programs seemed to have matured in Capehart's statement.

Vandenberg told the senate Thursday the shift was "implicit with hostility," indicating the Democrats didn't think Republicans were "trustworthy" in vital international questions.

Democrats, led by Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the vice-president elect, denied any such intent.

Friends quoted Vandenberg as having said privately that he no longer can accept the responsibility he has had in the past in helping push foreign proposals through congress and in aiding at international conferences.

It is his position, they said, that with Democrats certain of four-year control of the White House, he cannot be expected to be a front-rank burden bearer as he has been in the past.

Morse told a reporter he thinks the Democrats will find the Republicans in congress dealing with them "at arms length" as a result of the eight to five division they forced.

Senator Knowland, (R-Calif) said he thinks the Democratic action on the foreign relations committee lineup will make it difficult for Vandenberg to argue with some GOP colleagues that they sought to support the bipartisan foreign policy.

Agreeing, Senator Hicklenlooper (R-Iowa) said he doesn't think the action will affect Republican votes within the committee itself.

"It's on the floor that the effect will become apparent," he said.

Some Democrats said they thought the committee change a mistake. One of these, who didn't want to be quoted by name for obvious reasons, said Senator Connally could have demanded that the seven to six ratio be retained, but didn't.

dren who had been caught there by the storm. Mlady was in a party of four en route from Chamberlain, S. D., to the School of Mines in Rapid City.

They were caught by the full force of the blizzard 10 miles east of Wall. "The car crawled into Wall," Mlady said. The town was rapidly filling with motorists.

Townspeople opened their homes but by late Sunday night people were sleeping in cafe booths, on top of bars and stretched out on the floor of stores.

Food held up "pretty good," Mlady said. Milk and bread began to run out the last day.

Mlady and his group wore out four decks of cards. A small dance was organized Thursday. The dancers could find only a clarinet and trumpet for music. Next day the shut-ins located a pianist—and another dance was held.

In reaching Wall, plows bypassed many of the highway drifts and cut across fields and pastures.

At Wicksville, women baked bread and rolls as an adequate food supply was maintained.

Dr. N. E. Olson, Rapid City, described activity at Wicksville this way:

"We slept where we would not get stepped on, played every kind of card game imaginable and walked back and forth between the other two buildings, looking for a litte excitement."

When the snowplow arrived, a girl exclaimed:

"There's the most beautiful piece of machinery I have ever seen."

WISNER NEGRO HELD AFTER VICTIM DIES

HARRISONBURG, La., Jan. 8—(Special)— A 33-year-old Wisner Negro was being held in the Catahoula parish jail here tonight charged with murder after he admitted shooting another Negro shortly after midnight while the two were engaged in a gambling dispute at a Negro tavern, two miles south of Wisner, according to Catahoula parish Deputy Sheriff W. R. Stubbs.

According to witnesses, Bonnie Robinson, the man being held, shot L. V. Doyle, about 30, of Extension, La., after a heated argument, Stubbs said.

Stubbs added that Robinson admitted shooting Doyle shortly after his apprehension in Sicily Island approximately three hours after the fatal shot was fired. At the time, Robinson did not know Doyle was dead.

Doyle died a few minutes after being admitted to a Wisner clinic, according to Dr. H. E. Jones, deputy coroner of Franklin parish. Dr. Jones reported the victim to have been shot in the chest with a Spanish make, 38 calibre pistol.

Robinson was arrested by Catahoula parish authorities assisted by Sheriff Hiram Waller and Deputy Ellis Tarver, of Franklin parish.

Waller was notified of the shooting by Dr. Jones when Doyle was taken to the clinic.

Sheriff Waller made a preliminary investigation and summoned Catahoula parish officials. The shooting occured just inside Catahoula parish near the Franklin parish line.

Robinson told arresting officers he had shot Doyle in self defense. Witnesses, denying Robinson's statement, told investigating officers there was no evidence of self defense.

LEWIS LAUNCHES UMW 'SECURITY' PROGRAM

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—(AP)—John L. Lewis began today to put into operation the United Mine Workers' far-reaching program of free hospital and medical service to ailing coal miners.

The service will be provided by the U. M. W. welfare and retirement fund, of which Lewis is chief trustee. A 20-cent royalty on each ton of coal finances the fund, now building up at $100,000,000 a year.

From this, Lewis, the union's president, has announced he plans eventually to finance all medical and hospital care for the 400,000 soft coal miners. A separate fund is being used for Pennsylvania's 80,000 hard coal diggers.

As a start, activities will be directed to the hospitalization of miners who are already receiving disability benefits and pensions. These men, because they are not working, are unable to obtain services through an existing wage check-off system.

Also among the first to be cared for will be those with serious ailments who are unable to get adequate treatment in their communities.

Besides the hospital and medical program, the huge welfare fund finances monthly pensions of $100 to 62-year-old miners who have worked 20 years.

Egg production can be increased by placing lights in the poultry house and thus lengthening the day for hens.

GUN BATTLE ENDS WITH DEATH OF HOLDUP MAN

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 8. —(AP)— A gun battle through the window of a crowded bus ended today in the death of a negro holdup man.

None of the 41 bus passengers, who cringed in terror on the floor, was hurt seriously.

A poultry store operator, who loaded his shotgun and gave chase after the man had robbed a neighboring store on the east side, was the winner in the gun fight.

Orville G. Barnes, a grocer, ran into Kenneth Smiser's shop and told of being robbed at gunpoint of between $75 and $100.

Smiser and his father, Fletcher, began the chase after getting a shotgun from their nearby home.

Finding no trace of the fugitive, the Smisers asked Robert Koss, who thought the negro might have caught a bus, to chase the bus, which was forced into a curb.

The Smisers asked the bus driver, Harold E. Curry, if a negro man had boarded the bus a few blocks back and the fugitive started shooting.

Amid the screams of the passengers who had ducked to the floor after the first glass-shattering shot, the negro and Smiser exchanged shots.

The fugitive then ran out of the bus and after more shooting collapsed on a nearby lawn. He made one last effort to pick up his revolver before he died, but Smiser kicked it out of reach.

"He fired two shots at me too close for comfort," Smiser said. "I could hear the bullets whiz by."

At least two passengers suffered minor injuries. Police said two shotgun pellets struck Robert Howard in the leg and Mrs. George Harris suffered a cut over the eye from flying glass.

Police said the holdup man was identified tentatively as an Indianapolis man with a criminal record but they were not positive of the identification.

SOUTHERN RIVERS BEGIN TO RECEDE

Luxapalilia, Tombigbee Start Downward After Forcing 3,000 From Homes

COLUMBUS, Miss., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Two rivers flanking Columbus kept receding tonight from near-record crests that drove 3,000 persons from their flooded homes.

A prediction of showers for tomorrow caused some concern, but U. S. weather bureau forecaster W. R. Stevens said in New Orleans that "no great amount" of rain was expected.

Across the state in the rich delta country, 100 prisoners from the penitentiary at Parchman arrived to strengthen a ring levee around Greenwood in the face of a flood threat from the Yazoo river.

A crest of 39 feet, four above flood stage, is predicted for rthe Yazoo at Greenwood next Tuesday.

Mayor Allen D. Saffold of Greenwood described the levee work as "precautionary," and said that, barring excessive rainfall, the levees are expected to handle the floodwaters. They protected the city from a crest of 40 feet last February.

The Red Cross said about 45 families had been evacuated from lowland areas and housed at the Greenwood air base.

No casualties were reported from the floods in the Columbus area, but damages to livestock, lands and homes remained to be counted.

The Tombigbee river to the west of Columbus crested yesterday at 39.7 feet, 10.7 feet above flood stage and the highest on record except for 43.5 in 1892. The Luxapalila on the eastern edge of Columbus, smaller and usually quiet, touched its highest point in 22 years and flooded a number of suburban homes and industrial and business establishments.

Traffic conditions improved slightly as the water receded. The Frisco railroad maintained schedules to the north by detouring over Gulf, Mobile and Ohio lines through Artesia and Tupelo. Travel to the south over the Frisco was normal.

Passenger and freight service was held up 12 hours Friday night over the G. M. and O. when a freight train was derailed in the Columbus yards. A broken rail was blamed.

The Columbus and Greenville railway is still out, but officials said traffic would be normal by tomorrow. Frisco schedules between here and Amory, stopped by water over the tracks, is expected to be resumed by Sunday night.

Highway 82 to the west remains closed, but Highways 82 to the east and 45 northward are open.

No rain has fallen since Wednesday morning.

Residents of New York state own more life insurance than those of any other state. Pennsylvanians are second.

INDICT DAUGHTER MIXED IN SLAYING

Forty-Two-Year-Old Woman Charged In Death Of Mother On Plantation

GREENVILLE, Miss., Jan. 8.—(AP)—The Washington county grand jury today indicted Mrs. Ruth Thompson Dickins, member of a prominent delta family, on murder charges in the slaying of her mother, Mrs. Idella Long Thompson, at nearby Leland on Nov. 17.

Mrs. Dickins told Sheriff Hugh Foote after the slaying that her 69-year-old mother was beaten to death in the latter's residence on fashionable Deer Creek drive by an unidentified negro.

She said she visited the mother's home on the afternoon of the slaying and that the negro attacked her after she had entered the residence by a rear door.

Mrs. Dickins, 42, told the sheriff that the negro used a pair of rosebud pruning shears as the death weapon. She said the man turned upon her and that she grappled with him for possession of the shears. Mrs. Dickins received cuts and arm injuries.

Mrs. Thompson's slaying marked the third violent death in the Thompson family during the past several years.

Her late husband, J. Wood Thompson, former president of the Mississippi levee commission, was found shot to death in his home at Leland about nine years ago.

Previously, a son-in-law that Deputy Sheriff M. A. Etheridge identified only as "Meadors," was ambushed and shot to death as he sat in his Leland home during the flood of 1927.

Etheridge said the Meadors slaying was unsolved. He said Thompson's death was "a suicide."

A short while after return of the indictment, Sheriff Foote drove to Leland and arrested Mrs. Dickins at her home. Mrs. Dickins accompanied the sheriff to the county jail here, posted $10,000 bond and was released.

The bond was signed by her husband, John Dickins, a Greenville cotton man; Hilton Waits and Shields Hood of Leland and Attorney Ben Wilkes of Greenville.

Wilkes, who is serving as Mrs. Dickins' attorney, said she will plead innocent. Mrs. Dickins made no immediate statement.

She is a graduate of Rollins College and is the mother of two girls, 10 and 14 years old, respectively.

The capias for her arrest is returnable to circuit court here on Jan. 17.

tion with the school to enter the navy. While in the service, he served as an athletic instructor before receiving his commission as gunnery officer. Avants saw action in every combat area and was placed on an inactive status in the navy.

Upon being honorably discharged, he returned to Ouachita Parish High School and resumed his duties there.

Avants is the past president of the Louisiana Education Association and is a member of the Methodist Church, of the Lions Club and is a Mason.

Last night Avants issued the following statement:

"I have accepted the position of superintendent of education of the Ouachita parish schools for a four year term, and am elated over the thought of returning to Ouachita parish. I fully realize the significance and the great responsibility of the position of superintendent.

"I pledge to the Ouachita parish school board, the school children, the patrons of the schools and the teachers of this parish to work toward building an educational program which will meet the needs of all the children and our parish. If we are to educate our boys and girls to become useful citizens in an ever-changing society, we must expand our educational program to reach the need of every child entrusted under our guidance. We must enrich our curriculum to include home economics, home living, industrial arts, vocational and agricultural education, music, expanded athletic program, commerce and the many other subjects included in an all-round educational program.

"We must improve the working conditions of our teachers. Our teachers must feel secure in their positions, and I shall exert every effort to improve the relationship between the administration forces of the school system and our teachers. It is impossible to carry out a successful educational program without a happy and contented staff of teachers. I shall do everything possible to help develop this harmony in the Ouachita parish schools.

"Of all the communities in Louisiana, I know of not one which is more entitled to a junior—senior high school than West Monroe. I am in complete accord with C. C. Wall, Jr., president of the Ouachita parish school board, and the other board members supporting this project. West Monroe and the rural wards have been neglected of equal educational opportunities, and we are going to put forth every effort to correct this deplorable condition. The people of this parish can rest assured that we are going to work for a program which will insure every child in the parish an equal chance to develop his capacities and potentialities.

"I solicit the support of all interested citizens in this parish to help us plan and organize a well-balanced educational program. There is much to be done to improve our school system, but by all working together this can be accomplished.

"Mrs. Avants joins me in expressing our sincere appreciation to the board members and our many friends, who have worked so diligently to elect me to this high position of trust. We are indeed happy to bring our children to live with you here in Ouachita parish. Also I should like to use this means of thanking our many friends for their many congratulatory messages."

Since 1900 total life insurance owned in the United States has increased 20 times, while the population has not yet doubled.

—let me assure you that throughout these twenty-seven years as your rector, my heart's desire has been to do only those things which as pastor and priest would be for your spiritual growth and strength. So now—due to failing health and the insistence of my physicians—I feel it becomes incumbent upon me to do that which I am convinced is the right thing for the further development and enrichment in this part of God's vineyard. So I am asking to be relieved of the duties as rector of Grace Church.

"I shall say more to you later on, but in the meantime I pray God's continued blessing upon you all; and may God guide the wardens and vestrymen in securing my successor.

"Sincerely and faithfully,

"EDWARD FARREN HAYWARD,
"Rector."

In connection with Reverend Hayward's resignation some facts embodying the history of the Grace Church are of interest.

January, 1943, was such as to mark history for Grace Church when it was host to the annual meeting of the Diocese of Louisiana in the 105th annual convention session and at this time the handsome church edifice became free of all indebtedness. A special service was held in this connection. The building had been formally opened on Easter Sunday, 1926.

Grace Church has come a long way since September, 1847, when the Rev. C. S. Hodges held the first Episcopal service here. In the year, 1856, the Right Rev. Leonidas Polk, bishop of Louisiana, visited Monroe, accompanied by the Rev. William Miller, of Oak Ridge, and the Rev. Thomas B. Lawson, took steps toward the establishment of an Episcopal Church in Monroe.

In 1866, following the close of the war, the Rev. Lawson began ways for the building of the church and the congregation was incorporated as "Grace Church, Monroe, 1866." The cornerstone was laid in 1870 at Oak and St. John streets with Reverend Lawson as rector. Here the church was located until destroyed by fire December 27, 1922. The cornerstone of the present Grace Church was laid October 26, 1925, with Bishop Sessums officiating, assisted by the Right Rev. Harry R. Carson, D.D., together with Rev. E. F. Hayward. On the following Easter Sunday it was used for the first time.

With a vision and unswerving loyalty to his church and to the entire community, Reverend Hayward has been in almost constant demand for years as public speaker in a multitude of community affairs as well as in attendance to his church duties and he has been rated among the most brilliant public speakers here.

He came to the Grace Church when it occupied an old but highly venerable edifice at St. John and Oak streets, being the oldest or at least next to the oldest church here. In the fire in the Christmas holidays of 1923, this old landmark was destroyed, and thereafter the congregation worshipped in a frame temporary building on the same site—now occupied by the Vaughan-Bendel-Wright Clinic.

Realizing the need for a church on the north side, Reverend Hayward urged that a new edifice be erected at Fourth and Glenmar and on this site the handsome English cathedral type present edifice was erected at a cost of $100,000. This church was paid out in full in January, 1943.

In the intervening years since Reverend Hayward became identified as leader of this church, the membership grew from 200 to 600 members, many of whom are among the most prominent and influential residents of Monroe. The church is regarded as standing as a monument to the foresight, self-denial and spiritual influence of Reverand Hayward and his flock.

The retiring pastor stated Saturday that he will continue to reside at 301 College avenue, overlooking Northeast Junior College, and will endeavor as his physician advises to live a few more years in quiet retirement.

Reverend and Mrs. Hayward are parents of five children and have eight grandchildren. Their sons and daughters are: Edward F. Hayward, Jr., James Hayward and the former Miss Ann Hayward, now Mrs. Floyd Stone, Jr., all of Monroe; the former Miss Mary Hayward, now the wife of Dr. Webb in St. Louis, Mo., and the former Helena Hayward, now Mrs. Frank Morgan, of Atlanta, Ga.

Reverend Hayward is a native of Philadelphia, Pa., where he was educated and his first pastorate was in Camden, N. J., later going in 1912 to become a rector in Chippewa Falls, Wis. He then next went as rector to a church in Enid, Okla., then to Houston and on to Monroe.

EGYPT ANNOUNCES

Hashemite King (Abdullah of Trans-Jordan)."

Azzam Pasha predicted that fighting will reopen in Palestine unless Israeli troops withdraw from their newly won Negev battleground.

"We are still in the early phases of the struggle for liberation of Palestine," he said in a news conference. "We have still before us a long struggle which will take many forms."

The spokesman for the league, which represents seven Arab nations, spoke pointedly of the failure of some of those countries to help Egypt in the latest fight with Israel, and asserted:

"Although the Egyptian government has been forced for various reasons to accept a cease-fire (last June) while the Egyptian army had the initiative on the battlefield, there is no doubt the Zionists will not respect their pledges.

"Thus, this phase is similar to previous phases, and anybody who thinks battles will not be renewed in Palestine will be mistaken."

He said the fighting has brought out two points.

"One, which is regrettable, is the hesitation of some politicians in Arab countries." His reference obviously was to failure of some league members to join Egypt in the renewed fighting.

The other point, he added, was the way the Egyptian army, "supported by the Egyptian nation and some Arab forces such as Saudi Arabians and Palestinians," had "defended the right and stood firm for Allah."

He predicted this year would see the tide turn toward final Arab victory in the Holy Land.

The latest cease-fire order still leaves many explosive issues to be settled. Chief of these is the United Nations security council demand that Jewish forces withdraw in the Negev to the positions they held before the Israeli advance began on Oct. 14 during the truce.

Another question is what to do about Egyptian troops isolated at Faluja. The Egyptians contend the Israelis refuse to permit these troops to return to Egypt, and have attacked them repeatedly since they were trapped in mid-October.

Negotiation of an armistice to replace the Palestine truce is another knotty problem.

All of these are covered by the security council's orders of Nov. 4 and Nov. 16, or by plans worked out by Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, acting U. N. mediator, in his efforts to make the orders effective.

Egypt and Israel were miles apart in their interpretation of the orders, however, even before the last outburst of fighting in the Negev.

The Egyptian foreign office said recently that, just before the new fighting started on Dec. 21, Egypt offered to enter into negotiations with U. N. representatives for a permanent armistice within three days after the Jews would comply with the council's withdrawal orders.

(The Jews said they withdrew the reinforcements sent into the Negev on and after Oct. 14 and that this constituted compliance. However, they refused to withdraw from captured Beersheba or give up their siege of Faluja.)

Announcing yesterday's cease-fire order to its troops, Egypt said the order was conditional on "necessary measures" being taken to carry out the council's orders. Whether Egyptian participation in armistice negotiations will be conditioned, as before, on the prior withdrawal of Jewish forces in the Negev is not yet apparent. U. N. representatives here said they had no information as to what the next step would be.

the encircled forces. It also claimed the Reds were using poison gas.

(The Communist side, as heard in a broadcast by The Associated Press at San Francisco:

(That the nationalists lost 9,000 men in the first 19 hours of fighting and that the defenders were preparing to use poison gas. Both sides exaggerate casualties and both often accuse the other of using poison gas. This charge has never been proved.)

While the attacks mounted in intensity on the central front, reports reaching Nanking from the north said all fighting had ceased abruptly at Tientsin, which has been under heavy Red assault.

These reports aroused speculation in Nanking that some sort of a deal had been worked out for the surrender of the city.

Aside from the diplomatic maneuvering, peace proponents in Nanking also were busy.

Vice President Li Tsung-jen was reported in frequent sessions with Chang Chi-chung, minister without portfolio in the cabinet, and others who are supposed to be trying to form a "peace bloc."

Li has been mentioned as the one to take over the government and try to work out a peacable solution to the civil war should President Chiang Kai-shek step aside.

One well-informed source said Chiang would "retire" within the next few days, apparently convinced there is no other way to bring the Communists to the table of negotiations.

Former Premier Chang Chun, another who has been classed as a peace advocate, flew off to Hankow for a meeting with Gen. Pai Chung-ksi, commander in central China.

It was reported he went at Pai's request to have someone come to Hankow and see for himself that the commander had no intention of withdrawing his troops to south China.

Pai has been reported dissatisfied with President Chiang Kai-shek's peace offer. One unconfirmed account said he had withdrawn the troops he had left north of Nanking, for the purpose of moving into south China.

It was considered significant here that a close adviser to Vice President Li went along with the former premier. The adviser is Huang Shao-hsiung.

(Associated Press Correspondent Spencer Moosa in Peiping said there were reports that the long-heralded meeting between Hong Kong dissidents and Red leaders would be held at Shihkiachwang, regional Red capital 160 miles southwest of Peiping.)

The Hong Kong group is headed by Marshall Li Chishen, once Chiang's chief of staff who broke with him and fled into exile. Li says he is no Communist but is willing to work with the Reds in order to form a coalition government. He is believed on his way north now.

$24 in nickels taken, officers said. Investigators said the circumstances make it obvious that juveniles made the entrance.

Five cartons of cigarettes, two boxes of cigars, two cartons of gum, a carton of tums and two boxes of chocolate candy were reported stolen from Neal's grocery store, 1510 Cypress street, in West Monroe, West Monroe police said. Investigating officers said the prowlers pryed the rear door of the building open to break in.

Friday night's thievery made the second outbreak in West Monroe. Wednesday of last week three businesses were broken into, West Monroe police stated.

On Wednesday night the Strand Theater, Morrison and Heacock's garage and Calvert's hardware were victims. The total amount of cash stolen was $3 and several other small items were reported missing.

Eggs left for four days in a warm store or kitchen lose as much "freshness" as eggs kept for several weeks in the refrigerator in a covered container.

RECIPROCAL TRADE RENEWAL IS ASKED

Truman Urges Lifting Of Restrictions Placed On Agreements By G. O. P.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8—(AP)—President Truman today urged a before-April extension of the reciprocal trade agreements act minus "hampering restrictions" approved by the Republican-controlled 80th congress.

He also asked congress to extend the new act unitl Jun 12, 1951, in line with his request to the congress last year. The old congress extended the law only June 30, 1949, and inserted certain limitations opposed by the president.

In a letter to Senator George (D-Ga.) and Representative Doughton (D-N. C.), who will head the tariff-handling committees in the current congress, Mr. Truman said speedy action is needed because negotiations will start in April to expand the reciprocal program.

These negotiations are on proposed extension to 13 other nations the tariff-reduction agreement of 1947 signed by the United States and 22 other nations.

The president's letter today did not detail the "hampering restrictions" he said congress place in the law. But it was apparent he had in mind a clause giving the tariff commission greater powers over trade agreements.

Under this provision the president is required to furnish the commission a list of commodities to be covered in a prospective agreement. The commission then holds hearings and can suggest "peril points" beyond which it believes tariff cuts should not go lest they injure domestic industry. It has four months to make recommendations.

The president last year termed this provision "complicated, time-consuming and unnecessary procedure." The state department contended it could wreck the whole trade program.

"The trade agreements program," the president said today, "has proved itself to the people of the United States. It has justly earned their overwhelming support. We must be in a position to press that program forward with vigor."

He said extension of the 1947 agreement to other nations "is a practical cooperative effort to remove unnecessary obstacles to the building of a stable and prosperous world." he added:

"The restrictive provisions and limited extension of the present trade agreements law materially hamper the effectiveness of United States participation in this effort.

"That is why it is so important that the existing trade agreements act be promptliy repealed, and that the act as it existed on March 1, 1948, be extended ***."

Mr. Truman said unless nations can sell each other the products of their agriculture, labor and industry to the greatest possible extent "there can be no sure foundation for economic peace."

if the domestic stocks of American cotton are not going to pile up in proportions as large as those of the thirties, with the resultant pressure on prices. But the 1948 experience shows that, barring bad weather or heavy losses from infestation, no effective controls can be imposed unless the secretary is authorized to fix them below 23,500,000 acres.

Just how this will be accomplished will be the chief subject of discussion at the coming conferences. A spokesman for the department said that it has no specific proposals to make, but will draft its recommendations to congress after hearing from the committee representatives. It is generally agreed, however, that a complete revamping of the pre-war quotas, due to wartime acreage shifts and the rapid increase in per acre yields, is absolutely necessary.

There is some indication that an attempt will be made to reach a historic base upon which to allot individual farm quotas in the first control year, but there is no doubt that this will arouse a major controversy. For instance, advance reports received here indicate that cotton growers are planning to plant their largest acreage since before the war in 1949, hoping that this heavy acreage will be used in computing their acreage allotments for 1950. Some officials believe that 1949 acreage will have to be eliminated if any real historic base can be secured.

Officials of the department also plan to discuss with the growers at the conferences other problems which have arisen since the war. One of the major ones is a method of improving and speeding the classing of cotton offered for loan this year ,togther with the lack of sufficient classing facilities, created many complaints among the growers.

FRATERNITY HOUSE GUTTED BY FLAMES

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Members of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity at Louisiana State University were homeless and temporarily destitute tonight.

The fraternity house was gutted by fire this afternoon. None of the 25 occupants was injured, but the entire contents, including the students' clothes and other personal belongings, were destroyed.

The cause was not immediately determined. The fire apparently started in the attic and swept quickly through the two-story frame structure. No fraternity members were in the upstairs bedrooms, but some in the lower part of the house and others who were painting the exterior had to run to escape the flames.

The university announced arrangements to house them in dormitories and to make emergency loans to any who lacked cash.

name Paul G. Hoffman as Marshall plan administrator.

Hoffman had the vigorous support of Vandenberg.

Senator Taft of Ohio, top senate policy leader, announced at New Haven, Conn., that he "will certainly" vote for Acheson. That indicated that some of the Republicans are willing to go along on the nomination.

But Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the Republican floor leader, said he was surprised that the president did not consult with Vandenberg before making the appointment.

"So far as I personally am concerned, I have not changed my mind about Acheson," said Wherry, who fought Acheson's confirmation as undersecretary of state in September, 1945.

Despite the Republican uprising over the Democratic seizure of a three-man majority on the foreign relations committee, Senator Connally (D.-Texas), new chairman of the committee, predicted that Acheson would be confirmed. This seemed certain if only in view of the Democratic majority.

Besides it is customary for the senate to go along with a presidential cabinet choice.

Senator Smith (R.-N. J.) also urged that the foreign relations committee explore with Acheson his "views on the pending critical issues of our foreign policy."

Smith called Acheson and James Webb, named as undersecretary, "two distinguished Americans with a background of wide experience and important national service."

Senator Mundt (R.-S. D.), former member of the house committee investigating un-American activities, suggested that the senate foreign relations committee hear testimony from Whittaker Chambers, admitted former Communist courier, and Adolf A. Berle, Jr., former assistant secretary of state, on the Acheson appointment.

Mundt also urged that former Ambassador Lane be called as a witness, adding:

"I have no personal information or reasons for believing that Dean Acheson would not now support and favor a program designed to protect America and the free areas of the world against further oppressive invasions by the Communist conspiracy."

Mundt asserted that "like many other Americans," at one time Acheson "appeared to favor an appeasement program toward Russia which the march of events and an analysis of Communist objectives demonstrated to be an attitude dangerous to the preservation of peace and the protection of our national security."

Mundt did not explain in his statement why he thought the three men should be called.

Berle testified last August before the un-American activities committee, and went into state department behind-the-scenes affairs during 1944 when Russia was our wartime ally. He disclosed that two groups in the department were split in their views about Russia, one being "Mr. Acheson's group." Acheson was undersecretary of state.

Berle Adhered, he said, to a group which felt that the Russians were not going to be sympathetic or cooperative, while the "Acheson group" took an opposite position. One group, he said, favored a stronger policy toward Russia, and the other wanted to play down friction between Washington and Moscow.

Berle said that Alger Hiss belonged to the Acheson group. Hiss, then a state department official, now is under indictment for perjury in denying that he gave Chambers secret state department papers some six years before the policy situation described by Berle.

Arthur Bliss Lane, ambassabor to Poland in the period after the war, declined to comment on Mundt's suggestion that he be called.

Lane, in a book on his experiences, was critical of state department policy toward the Polish Communist government under Acheson. He described the policy as "financial appeasement" of Poland and other Red satellite states.

In June, 1947, Acheson attracted the anger of Russia by a speech in which he said Russian policy was retarding world recovery. He was bitterly assailed by the official Communist newspaper.

President Truman was asked yesterday whether the Acheson appointment portended any change in the stiff policy toward Aussia and he emphasized that it does not.

Vandenberg, who was chairman of the committee in the 80th congress, expressed deep regret in his statement at the retirement of Secretary Marshall, whom he called "one of the great Americans of all time."

The senator also said he was regretful over the retirement of undersecretary of State Robert Lovett.

The president's failure to consult with Vanderberg is likely to be seized upon by administration critics as another sign that the bipartisan foreign policy has been dealt a blow.

Capehart was outspoken in his criticism of the senate Democrats in voting themselves eight of the 13 seats on the foreign relations committee. The ratio in the Republican congress was 7 to 6.

Capehart, who has gone along reluctantly on some foreign affairs issues in the past, said he thinks the time has come for Republicans to speak up on foreign, as well as domestic, issues.

"It is just a fundamentally sound and right to debate, argue—and possibly disagree—on foreign policy as on domestic policy," he declared.

"If we are going to be the world's leader, then we must work out policies by debating them fully and deciding what is best to do. We can't just go along blindly with everything the administration proposes."

The change in party ratios on the committee was vigorously protested by Vandenberg and Senator Morse (R-Ore.), as well as other Republicans in the senate last week.

A prediction by Morse that it would put Vandenberg at a disadvantage in attempts to rally GOP members behind new administration programs seemed to have matured in Capehart's statement.

Vandenberg told the senate Thursday the shift was "implicit with hostility," indicating the Democrats didn't think Republicans were "trustworthy" in vital international questions.

Democrats, led by Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the vice-president elect, denied any such intent.

Friends quoted Vandenberg as having said privately that he no longer can accept the responsibility he has had in the past in helping push foreign proposals through congress and in aiding at international conferences.

It is his position, they said, that with Democrats certain of four-year control of the White House, he cannot be expected to be a front-rank burden bearer as he has been in the past.

Morse told a reporter he thinks the Democrats will find the Republicans in congress dealing with them "at arms length" as a result of the eight to five division they forced.

Senator Knowland, (R-Calif) said he thinks the Democratic action on the foreign relations committee lineup will make it difficult for Vandenberg to argue with some GOP colleagues that they sought to support the bipartisan foreign policy.

Agreeing, Senator Hicklenlooper (R-Iowa) said he doesn't think the action will affect Republican votes within the committee itself.

"It's on the floor that the effect will become apparent," he said.

Some Democrats said they thought the committee change a mistake. One of these, who didn't want to be quoted by name for obvious reasons, said Senator Connally could have demanded that the seven to six ratio be retained, but didn't.

dren who had been caught there by the storm. Mlady was in a party of four en route from Chamberlain, S. D., to the School of Mines in Rapid City.

They were caught by the full force of the blizzard 10 miles east of Wall. "The car crawled into Wall," Mlady said. The town was rapidly filling with motorists.

Townspeople opened their homes but by late Sunday night people were sleeping in cafe booths, on top of bars and stretched out on the floor of stores.

Food held up "pretty good," Mlady said. Milk and bread began to run out the last day.

Mlady and his group wore out four decks of cards. A small dance was organized Thursday. The dancers could find only a clarinet and trumpet for music. Next day the shut-ins located a pianist—and another dance was held.

In reaching Wall, plows bypassed many of the highway drifts and cut across fields and pastures.

At Wicksville, women baked bread and rolls as an adequate food supply was maintained.

Dr. N. E. Olson, Rapid City, described activity at Wicksville this way:

"We slept where we would not get stepped on, played every kind of card game imaginable and walked back and forth between the other two buildings, looking for a litte excitement."

When the snowplow arrived, a girl exclaimed:

"There's the most beautiful piece of machinery I have ever seen."

WISNER NEGRO HELD AFTER VICTIM DIES

HARRISONBURG, La., Jan. 8—(Special)— A 33-year-old Wisner Negro was being held in the Catahoula parish jail here tonight charged with murder after he admitted shooting another Negro shortly after midnight while the two were engaged in a gambling dispute at a Negro tavern, two miles south of Wisner, according to Catahoula parish Deputy Sheriff W. R. Stubbs.

According to witnesses, Bonnie Robinson, the man being held, shot L. V. Doyle, about 30, of Extension, La., after a heated argument, Stubbs said.

Stubbs added that Robinson admitted shooting Doyle shortly after his apprehension in Sicily Island approximately three hours after the fatal shot was fired. At the time, Robinson did not know Doyle was dead.

Doyle died a few minutes after being admitted to a Wisner clinic, according to Dr. H. E. Jones, deputy coroner of Franklin parish. Dr. Jones reported the victim to have been shot in the chest with a Spanish make, 38 calibre pistol.

Robinson was arrested by Catahoula parish authorities assisted by Sheriff Hiram Waller and Deputy Ellis Tarver, of Franklin parish.

Waller was notified of the shooting by Dr. Jones when Doyle was taken to the clinic.

Sheriff Waller made a preliminary investigation and summoned Catahoula parish officials. The shooting occured just inside Catahoula parish near the Franklin parish line.

Robinson told arresting officers he had shot Doyle in self defense. Witnesses, denying Robinson's statement, told investigating officers there was no evidence of self defense.

LEWIS LAUNCHES UMW 'SECURITY' PROGRAM

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—(AP)—John L. Lewis began today to put into operation the United Mine Workers' far-reaching program of free hospital and medical service to ailing coal miners.

The service will be provided by the U. M. W. welfare and retirement fund, of which Lewis is chief trustee. A 20-cent royalty on each ton of coal finances the fund, now building up at $100,000,000 a year.

From this, Lewis, the union's president, has announced he plans eventually to finance all medical and hospital care for the 400,000 soft coal miners. A separate fund is being used for Pennsylvania's 80,000 hard coal diggers.

As a start, activities will be directed to the hospitalization of miners who are already receiving disability benefits and pensions. These men, because they are not working, are unable to obtain services through an existing wage check-off system.

Also among the first to be cared for will be those with serious ailments who are unable to get adequate treatment in their communities.

Besides the hospital and medical program, the huge welfare fund finances monthly pensions of $100 to 62-year-old miners who have worked 20 years.

GUN BATTLE ENDS WITH DEATH OF HOLDUP MAN

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 8. —(AP)— A gun battle through the window of a crowded bus ended today in the death of a negro holdup man.

None of the 41 bus passengers, who cringed in terror on the floor, was hurt seriously.

A poultry store operator, who loaded his shotgun and gave chase after the man had robbed a neighboring store on the east side, was the winner in the gun fight.

Orville G. Barnes, a grocer, ran into Kenneth Smiser's shop and told of being robbed at gunpoint of between $75 and $100.

Smiser and his father, Fletcher, began the chase after getting a shotgun from their nearby home.

Finding no trace of the fugitive, the Smisers asked Robert Koss, who thought the negro might have caught a bus, to chase the bus, which was forced into a curb.

The Smisers asked the bus driver, Harold E. Curry, if a negro man had boarded the bus a few blocks back and the fugitive started shooting.

Amid the screams of the passengers who had ducked to the floor after the first glass-shattering shot, the negro and Smiser exchanged shots.

The fugitive then ran out of the bus and after more shooting collapsed on a nearby lawn. He made one last effort to pick up his revolver before he died, but Smiser kicked it out of reach.

"He fired two shots at me too close for comfort," Smiser said. "I could hear the bullets whiz by."

At least two passengers suffered minor injuries. Police said two shotgun pellets struck Robert Howard in the leg and Mrs. George Harris suffered a cut over the eye from flying glass.

Police said the holdup man was identified tentatively as an Indianapolis man with a criminal record but they were not positive of the identification.

SOUTHERN RIVERS BEGIN TO RECEDE

Luxapalilia, Tombigbee Start Downward After Forcing 3,000 From Homes

COLUMBUS, Miss., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Two rivers flanking Columbus kept receding tonight from near-record crests that drove 3,000 persons from their flooded homes.

A prediction of showers for tomorrow caused some concern, but U. S. weather bureau forecaster W. R. Stevens said in New Orleans that "no great amount" of rain was expected.

Across the state in the rich delta country, 100 prisoners from the penitentiary at Parchman arrived to strengthen a ring levee around Greenwood in the face of a flood threat from the Yazoo river.

A crest of 39 feet, four above flood stage, is predicted fo rthe Yazoo at Greenwood next Tuesday.

Mayor Allen D. Saffold of Greenwood described the levee work as "precautionary," and said that, barring excessive rainfall, the levees are expected to handle the floodwaters. They protected the city from a crest of 40 feet last February.

The Red Cross said about 45 families had been evacuated from lowland areas and housed at the Greenwood air base.

No casualties were reported from the floods in the Columbus area, but damages to livestock, lands and homes remained to be counted.

The Tombigbee river to the west of Columbus crested yesterday at 39.7 feet, 10.7 feet above flood stage and the highest on record except for 43.5 in 1892. The Luxapalila on the eastern edge of Columbus, smaller and usually quiet, touched its highest point in 22 years and flooded a number of suburban homes and industrial and business establishments.

Traffic conditions improved slightly as the water receded. The Frisco railroad maintained schedules to the north by detouring over Gulf, Mobile and Ohio lines through Artesia and Tupelo. Travel to the south over the Frisco was normal.

Passenger and freight service was held up 12 hours Friday night over the G. M. and O. when a freight train was derailed in the Columbus yards. A broken rail was blamed.

The Columbus and Greenville railway is still out, but officials said traffic would be normal by tomorrow. Frisco schedules between here and Amory, stopped by water over the tracks, is expected to be resumed by Sunday night.

Highway 82 to the west remains closed, but Highways 82 to the east and 45 northward are open.

No rain has fallen since Wednesday morning.

Residents of New York state own more life insurance than those of any other state. Pennsylvanians are second.

INVITATIONS OUT FOR N. J. C. CAGE TOURNEY

PREP TEAMS HERE FOR 3 DAYS' PLAY DURING FEBRUARY

Entry Deadline January 21; Extra Day Permits More Girls To Play

Invitations were sent yesterday and Friday to coaches of high school basketball clubs throughout northeast Louisiana to participate in the eleventh annual Northeast Junior College Basketball Tournament here February 10-12. The announcement was made by A. S. Huffman, head of the health and physical education department of the college, following receipt of a letter from W. L. Colvin, president of the Louisiana High School Athletic Association, giving approval of this annual sports feature.

Dates for the girls' division are February 11 and 12. Heretofore, in order to comply with L. H. S. A. A. regulations, which limits playing time in the girls' games to 60 minutes daily, it was necessary to limit the number of entries to 16 teams. By securing permission this year to start the girls' division on Thursday afternoon, February 10, more teams can be accommodated, Huffman explained. As only a few more clubs can be cared for through this regulation, Huffman pointed out the importance of early replies from teams in that division.

Entries must be mailed not later than January 21. Schools that fail to receive invitations are asked to get in touch with Huffman or Miss Ada Bess Hart, director of health and physical education for women at N. J. C.

Drawings for both divisions will be made January 23, then clubs will be notified immediately as to the team, time and place that they will play.

Northeast Junior College students who are majoring in physical education will be instrumental in carrying out the work connected with the project. Members of the Men's Physical Education Club and the Women's Recreation Association are planning to have a big share of the responsibility in making the event run smoothly. Student officals will work with outside officials in calling preliminary games, and well qualified persons will be chosen to call the semi-final and final games, Huffman said.

Following the practice of former years, the tourney will be conducted for both girls and boys under regulations of the Louisiana High School Athletic Association. Huffman will be in charge of the boys and Miss Hart will direct all girls' games. A health certificate is required of all girls participating in the tourney. These will be accepted upon registration, Miss Hart said.

New champions were crowned in last year's Tournament, but it was old stuff for the winners—Ouachita Parish High School boys of Monroe and the Baskin High School girls who had been in the winners circle in the event on two previous occasions.

The Ouachita Lions defeated the Lake Providence Panthers in the boys' finals, 42 to 31, after conquering the defending champion, Winnsboro Wildcats, 37 to 34, in the semi-finals.

Baskin's girls beat out the Pioneer High School girls in the championship finals of their own division, 53 to 32, with Mildred Ragsdale, the tourney's high scorer, leading the Baskin sextet to its third N. J. C. championship.

The Baskin girls won the tourney title in 1945 and 1946, but lost out in the finals in 1947 to Ogden, which didn't defend last year. Coach Herbert H. Holliman's Ouachita boys were champions of the tournament in 1942 and 1945.

Consolation, third place awards, were claimed by Oak Ridge in the boys' division and Monticello in the girls' section.

Individual high scoring honors of the tournament went to Baskin's Mildred Ragsdale, with 131 points in four games. She also had the best and second best high score in single game competition as she registered 38 points in the defeat of Pioneer in the finals, and 37 points in defeating Waterproof in a game on Friday preceding the finals.

J. Brown, Lake Providence, was the leading scorer in the boys' division. The Panther pivotman scored 64 points in five games, but top honors for the most points in a single boys' game went to C. Edminston, Simsboro High School center, who piled up 26 points in a game with Gilbert the day before the finals.

Closest approach to Miss Ragsdale in the girls' total scoring was 69 points in four games for Miss Coulter of Monticello High School. Second best total scoring in the boys' class went to Ernest (Buster) King, Ouachita, with 59 points in five games, and Edminston, Simsboro, getting in only three games, had 54 points. The Simsboro star had the best scoring average per game among the boys with an 18-point per contest average.

The Ouachita Parish High School boys' championship team comprised the following: Buddy Clifford, forward; Mark Boatright, guard; Johnny Goodwin, center; Ernest (Buster) King, center; Ralph McKay, forward; Jimmy George, guard; Lawson Fleming, guard; Wayne McDonald, guard; Charles Page, forward; Robert Kirby, forward; Jarrell Matkins, forward.

Baskin High School girl champions were: Avis Shuff, forward; Wanda Templeton, guard; Maudie Bradshaw, guard; Doris Wilson, forward; Dixie Baskin, forward; Earline Sikes, guard; Juanita Glass, forward; Mildred Ragsdale, forward; Patsy Stephens, guard; Frances Deggans, guard; Zelma McNair, forward.

Fifty-four teams entered last year's show, which attracted big crowds during the three days it was in progress in three gymnasiums. Trophies will be presented to the three winning teams in each division of the tourney this year, according to tradition.

The margin was a head as Jockey Edward Arcaro shot his mount across the wire after a thrilling stretch duel. The time for the mile and one-eighth was 1:48 4/5. Solidarity, coupled with On Trust, was third.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

by Hugh S. Fullerton, jr.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Fred Wilt, the former Indiana runner, provided a pleasant preview for the indoor track season last Wednesday when he ran a 9:18.1 two miles on a flat armory floor. . . . Tonight comes the traditional, but not formal opening, with the Brooklyn Knights of Columbus meet in a big, bare drillshed on Bedford avenue. . . . Besides Wilt, Mal Whitfield and "Bones" Dillard will be on hand. . . . There'll be a meet a week from here on and it looks like a promising season. . . . Bob Feerick, John Norlander and Matt Zunic, three regulars on the Washington Caps in the Professional Basketball Association of America, played at the Norfolk Naval Training Station during the war. Cap Coach Red Auerbach also was stationed at the Norfolk base. They must have learned to sink the opposition.

Seeing Is Believing

During the press showing of the World Series movie at Boston (and incidentally, the demand for the films is some four months ahead of the supply) Coach Hughey Duffy of the Red Sox found himself at a table with a lot of umpires. . . . A wandering scribe noted this as he passed and wisecracked: "No wonder you hit .438, Duff. You must have hung around with the umpires then."

Sportspourri

Ted Schroeder, back in chilly California after the also-chilly Sugar Bowl tennis tournament, reports he didn't think much of the football game but the basketball was worth the trip. In Ted's tennis language, North Carolina vs. Oklahoma would be just a foot fault. . . . Maybe that explains the story that specs were asking $25 for football ducats and $30 for Kentucky vs. St. Louis. . . . Harold Evans, Bucknell golf coach, was a country club pro at the age of 16. He must have personified the P. G. A. youth program. . . . Tug Wilson of the N. C. A. A. will huddle with the major league baseball executive committee in New York next month in an effort to arrange some "protection" against signing college players. He may offer a suggestion from the college coaches to let the boys stay in school through their sophomore year.

Weak End Notes

Boxing managers expect to collect $2,500 a show for their fighters from the television end of the Tournament of Champions promotions. . . . Eddie Waitkus, who'll make his first Florida training trip this year, opines: "Now I'll find out which Chamber of Commerce is wrong."

Trainer Jim Griffith of El Dorado; and student managers Jack Lowman of Cabot; Russell Miller of DeWitt, and Leon Cowling of Mineral Springs are also eligible for the purple and gold "O."

LONG OF RAZORBACKS TO GET NELSON AWARD

BOSTON, Jan. 8.—(AP)—For going to the aid of an official in the face of angry spectators after a decision had cost his team a vital football game. Gordon Long of Monett, Mo., University of Arkansas athlete, was selected tonight as winner of the third annual Swede Nelson sportsmanship award.

The game was between Arkansas, and S. M. U. on November 13, 1948. S. M. U. won 14-12.

Selection of Long, a senior, was announced by Herb Kopf of the Boston College coaching staff, as chairman of a 12-man committee of the gridiron Club of Boston which will present the trophy to the Arkansas athlete at a Boston dinner next Saturday.

More than 600 sports writers and radio announcers were invited to nominate boys for the trophy, named for Nils V. (Swede) Nelson, Boston cotton merchant, who was a member of Harvard's Rose Bowl squad 30 years ago.

SEEK FORMATION OF STRONG LOOP FOR '49 SEASON

Questionnaires Mailed To Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi Clubs

WINNSBORO, La., Jan. 8.—(Special)—The Franklin Parish Baseball Club, which last season turned out the state championship semi-pro team, is launching a campaign to organize a semi-pro league for 1949, calling on civic interests in towns throughout northeast Louisiana and some in Arkansas and Mississippi to help support a well organized semi-pro circuit.

D. K. Mayer and B. I. Berry, serving on an organization committee here and representing the baseball interests of Winnsboro and Franklin parish, have mailed questionnaires to groups throughout the area, inviting them to join in the program for sport and recreation.

"The Franklin Parish Baseball Club is anxious to organize a good semi-pro league for 1949," Mayer and Berry said. "It is our purpose to determine what other towns and communities will join us in the formation of a good league."

Questionnaires have been sent to Crossett, Ark., Tallulah, Oak Grove, Lake Providence, Ferriday, Waterproof, Delhi, Mangham, Rayville, Bastrop, Monroe, West Monroe, Columbia, Clarks, Olla, Urania, Jonesville, Jena, Ruston, Jonesboro, Hodge, Bernice, Dubach, Winnfield, Farmerville, Bonita, and Vicksburg, Miss.

These are the questions being asked:

1. Do you wish all home-talent baseball?
2. Do you prefer to limit class-players?
3. What salary limits to players would you favor? Maximum, number of players on a roster?
4. How many games per week do you think your community would support, two, three, or four?
5. Will you be equipped to play night baseball in 1949?
6. Will your community be represented at a meeting for the formation of a league at a later date?

The movement is endorsed and supported by the Winnsboro Lions Club, and most of the questionnaires were directed at Lions Clubs in the towns named.

Persons getting questionnaires are urged to act on them and return to Mayer or Berry as soon as possible.

Mayer said today that he or representatives of the Winnsboro club would be available to appear before any civic group or other parties in any interested towns to explain the semi-pro program as it is worked at Winnsboro.

"We, or competent representatives, are available at any time to visit with any club or other group desiring to know more about the semi-pro league program," Mayer said. "Just call on us."

TRAUTMAN SLATES EXECUTIVE SCHOOL

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 8.—(AP)—The second annual baseball executives' conference, better known as "Trautman's College," had an assured student body of at least 230 today.

And the annual conclave here for teaching front office procedure to officials of 456 clubs in the minor loops also has a top-flight faculty for the Jan. 17-21 sessions.

George M. Trautman, prexy of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues who launched the school a year ago because one of every three reports and contracts reaching his office had to be returned for corrections, said reservations had been received from 37 states and Canada, 14 of the 16 major league teams, and headquarters of nine minor loops.

The red-haired boss of the bushers said he expected the registration to reach 300, at least half of them repeaters from last year seeking a post-graduate refresher course. The Brooklyn Dodgers are sending 30 representatives—the No. 1 turnout.

Trautman and two of his associates — Publicity Director Robert L. Finch and assistant to the president, Phillip Piton—will play leading roles in the five-day conference, but other hot-shot instructors have been recruited from all parts of baseball.

Such subjects as "Development and Value of Good Will," "Making Concessions Pay," "Promotions by a Second-Division Club," "Club-Press Relationships," "Selection and care of Equipment," "Insurance," "Budget Analysis," "Park Maintenance and Lighting," "Handling Crowds" and "Radio and Television" will be discussed.

JAX GIRLS' BASKETBALL TEAM WON'T COME HERE

The Jax girls' basketball team of New Orleans, dated for an appearance here January 17, will not make the appearance, it was announced yesterday by Veterans of Foreign Wars who had undertaken to sponsor the contest against a local men's team.

It has been planned to use a men's combination from the local City League until the Monroe players were advised that an appearance against the professional girls team would make them ineligible for continued participation in the local organization which is an amateur group.

ON THE TRAIL

WITH BILL GEAGAN

AP Newsfeatures

Winter's cold hand has swept across the land. Lakes, ponds, and streams are locked in bonds of ice, and forests and fields are cloaked in a deep, white blanket. The land sleeps, but save for the few species of wildlife that hibernate, the creatures in feathers and fur do not sleep with it. Instead they must be constantly on the move in search for what is at best scanty fare so they may fend off hunger and starvation.

Those species of birds and animals which during the hunting seasons provide the sportsman with thrills and meat are in many sections well cared for through the long, cold winter months. Food of various kinds is brought into the covers at regular intervals to supplement the slim natural supply, and as a result those creatures do not suffer much from hunger and the cold.

But there are other little wild things who, although not game for the hunter, are his friends, and the friends of all other humans on earth. They are the song birds who during summer sweeten our lives with their singing, and protect us and our gardens from stinging and destructive insects.

They must search hard for food during the winter, and many are unable to find enough to keep strong and warm and finally succumb to the fierce cold or starve to death.

It is encouraging, however, to learn that more and more kind and thoughtful persons are establishing small backyard feeding stations where the birds can feed unmolested on grains, seeds, crumbs, suet, etc. But many more such stations are needed across the land, not only in the backyards but in the farming areas and in the woods.

In a pleas to the country's nature lovers, sportsmen, and other conservationists to feed the wildlife while the supply of natural food is greatly reduced by winter weather, the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service suggests that for the song birds table scraps, seeds, grains, fruits and other food wastes be thrown on the ground or snow or heaped on feeding trays. Suet should be nailed to a post or wired to a tree.

The Service also suggests that the fir and spruce trees used in the homes during the Christmas holidays be stuck into the snow and trimmed with bits of food, and that other food be thrown into cleared places at their bases.

Farmers are asked to deposit excess stores of shocked corn or threshed grain, weed seeds, and dried fruits and berries in pits dug in the snow, in natural windbreaks or shelters, on haystacks, hard-packed roads, and railroad tracks.

The Service points out that feeding stations either in the woods or backyards should be placed so that easy access to good protective cover and effective means of escape will be afforded. They should be sheltered from drifting snow, wind, and sleet, and should not constitute traps where the birds, both the song and game species, can be cornered by predators.

Conservation Bulletin No. 12, "Feeding Wildlife in Winter," which provides full details on the subject, can be obtained free by writing to the Division of Information, Fish and Wildlife Service, Washington 25, D. C.

CEDARS FEED DEER

Cedars felled by sportsmen in the snow-packed swamps will provide hungry yarded deer with the lacy green browse which is their favorite winter food in the north. Cruising in many such yards I have found in the dead of winter all of the cedars completely cleaned of the browse as far up as the largest deer could reach by standing on its hind legs.

When this happens many of the smaller ones suffering from malnutrition either contract pneumonia and die or just slowly starve to death. I have on several occasions upon examining dead deer, found sections of sharp tree branches that had punctured the walls of the stomach.

Sportsmen, and all others who enjoy being in the woods in winter, can help save many deer in such overbrowsed yards by felling the cedars and also carrying in vegetables, cedar browse, vegetable tops, apples, etc.

The food problem of the rabbits and hares can also be eased during unusually severe winters by chopping down a few poplar saplings here and there through the covers.

And it should be remembered when putting out food for the birds, large and small, that all must also have grit. A little gravel heaped near the free lunch counters will be greately appreciated by the feathered things.

CAMPFIRE SPARKS

Don't rush the winter fishing season . . . This is a good time to give last summer's fishing tackle a thorough going-over . . . Remove fly lines from the reels and loop loosely for the winter . . . Hang the fly rod in the cloth case not in the metal tube . . . Check and oil reels, and don't forget to put mothballs into the feathered lures . . . Pack baskets that are varnished will last a lot longer . . American fur trappers and fur farmers produce about 30 million pelts each year . . . Muskrats rates highest in wild fur production . . . Although the United States is one of the chief fur-producing countries in the world, it does not produce enough furs to meet more than half its own demand. Don't run your hound when the woods and fields are coated with crusted snow and ice . . . It will ruin his feet in time. . . The Maine Trappers Association is expected to file a bill in the State Legislature this winter calling for an increase of the bobcat bounty from $15 to $25 . . . With many trappers inactive due to very low fur prices, conservation dept. officials in some states fear a heavy kill by foxes and other furred predators of small game birds and animals . . . Make sure on that rabbit hunt that the muzzle of the shotgun does not become plugged tight with dirt or mud!

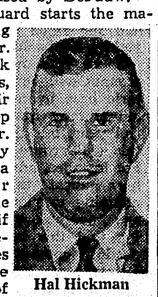

SET SHOTS and LAY-UPS, TOO

(Another of a series by foremost coaches written for NEA Service.)

By Hal Hickman
DePauw Coach

GREENCASTLE, Ind.—(NEA)—This play is a variation of one of the normal pivot plays used by DePauw.

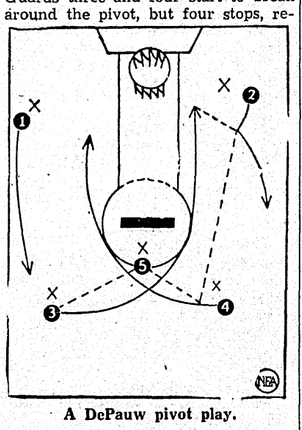

Ordinarily, a guard starts the maneuver by passing in to the center. Both guards break with the pass, peeling off their men as they sweep past the center. The center usually pivots and loops a pass to either guard under the basket, or, if they are too closely guarded, passes back to one of the forwards, both of whom have moved out in the court.

Hal Hickman

The play illustrated in the accompanying diagram varies a bit.

Three passes to five, the pivot. Guards three and four start to break around the pivot, but four stops, receiving a backward pass from five, as three continues toward the goal.

A DePauw pivot play.

Four passes to two, who loops a pass to three under the basket.

Four and two follow through as normally.

This gives the play balance, and protection in case the other team should gain possession.

GRAYSON'S SCOREBOARD

By Harry Grayson

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—(NEA)—David Shapiro is offered $1000 to throw a George Washington University game to Manhattan College at Madison Square Garden, and immediately there is a clamor to return basketball to the campus, where it belongs, of course.

The answer to that one, however, is that the colleges would like to confine the game to field houses, if they had them.

And this is as good a time as any to say that if the colleges were not suffering from the general housing problem, possessed the required stadia, such a pleasant situation would not put an end to the wide-spread gambling on varsity basketball.

The bookmakers' nightly line would still include prices on every game played—from Slippery Rock Teachers to Harvard.

And the bookmaker would still be the first to lay off if he suspected anything was fixed.

His line on the operatives, and take or give spread, six to eight points, for example, gives them all the best of it. All he has to do is balance his book.

It's the tinhorns and cheaters like Levy, Aronowitz, Klein and Rivlin, the four jalled in the Dave Shapiro case, who are despicable enough to approach a college boy.

And anyone capable of stooping that low couldn't be concerned about the locale of the game.

Young Shapiro, for example, was first propositioned at a summer camp in the Adirondacks in August, and the quartet who imagined they were sharpshooters first wanted action on a George Washington-North Carolina game, then one between the Colonials and Virginia.

Neither of those engagements was booked at Madison Square Garden or a comparative metropolitan arena.

The Four Bunglers could have gotten just as much action had George Washington been appearing against Bowling Green in Ohio, for instance—perhaps more, for the Falcons, you see, are very good, indeed.

Getting back to the deplorable lack of accommodations for the collegiate basketball clientele, let's look at New York and Chicago alone.

Then you will understand why college teams are performing at Madison Square Garden, the Chicago Stadium, Philadelphia's Convention Hall, the Boston Garden, the Buffalo Auditorium, Cleveland Arena, the Kansas City Auditorium, Los Angeles' Pan-Pacific Auditorium, San Francisco's Cow Palace and other public buildings.

In New York, New York University's gymnasium has been condemned, and there are 11,000 undergraduates alone at NYU. Fordham's gym is practically gigantic, seating all of 3500. Columbia's holds 2500.

Basketball long ago outgrew City College and Brooklyn College plants, where 1200 could be packed in. Brooklyn College's team now plays in an armory. If Brooklyn St. John's and Long Island University had to play all their games on the home courts, no more than 900 could get in at a sitting. No more than 500 in the cases of Manhattan and Brooklyn St. Francis.

So they bring in outside teams, and play at Madison Square Garden, where the spectators are comfortable, and everybody does well.

College double-headers are played at the Chicago Stadium under an arrangement between Northwestern University, which has no gymnasium, and Chicago DePaul.

All Western Conference teams appear there. The Illinois gym, to list another Big Nine schools, accommodates 7000, but even so students can attend only one game in three.

Plans have been laid for more field houses than you could shake a stick at.

But you undoubtedly have become acquainted with the cost of building today.

And everything else.

INVITATIONS OUT FOR N. J. C. CAGE TOURNEY

Entry Deadline January 21; Extra Day Permits More Girls To Play

Invitations were sent yesterday and Friday to coaches of high school basketball clubs throughout northeast Louisiana to participate in the eleventh annual Northeast Junior College Basketball Tournament here February 10-12. The announcement was made by A. S. Huffman, head of the health and physical education department of the college, following receipt of a letter from W. L. Colvin, president of the Louisiana High School Athletic Association, giving approval of this annual sports feature.

Dates for the girls' division are February 11 and 12. Heretofore, in order to comply with L. H. S. A. A. regulations, which limits playing time in the girls' games to 60 minutes daily, it was necessary to limit the number of entries to 16 teams. By securing permission this year to start the girls' division on Thursday afternoon, February 10, more teams can be accommodated, Huffman explained. As only a few more clubs can be cared for through this regulation, Huffman pointed out the importance of early replies from teams in that division.

Entries must be mailed not later than January 21. Schools that fail to receive invitations are asked to get in touch with Huffman or Miss Ada Bess Hart, director of health and physical education for women at N. J. C.

Drawings for both divisions will be made January 28, then clubs will be notified immediately as to the team, time and place that they will play.

Northeast Junior College students who are majoring in physical education will be instrumental in carrying out the work connected with the project. Members of the Men's Physical Education Club and the Women's Recreation Association are planning to have a big share of the responsibility in making the event run smoothly. Student offiicals will work with outside officials in calling preliminary games, and well qualified persons will be chosen to call the semi-final and final games, Huffman said.

Following the practice of former years, the tourney will be conducted for both girls and boys under regulations of the Louisiana High School Athletic Association. Huffman will be in charge of the boys and Miss Hart will direct all girls' games. A health certificate is required of all girls participating in the tourney. These will be accepted upon registration, Miss Hart said.

New champions were crowned in last year's Tournament, but it was old stuff for the winners—Ouachita Parish High School boys of Monroe and the Baskin High School girls who had been in the winners circle in the event on two previous occasions.

The Ouachita Lions defeated the Lake Providence Panthers in the boys' finals, 42 to 31, after conquering the defending champion, Winnsboro Wildcats, 37 to 34, in the semi-finals.

Baskin's girls beat out the Pioneer High School girls in the championship finals of their own division, 53 to 32, with Mildred Ragsdale, the tourney's high scorer, leading the Baskin sextet to its third N. J. C. championship.

The Baskin girls won the tourney title in 1945 and 1946, but lost out in the finals in 1947 to Ogden, which didn't defend last year. Coach Herbert H. Holliman's Ouachita boys were champions of the tournament in 1942 and 1945.

Consolation, third place awards, were claimed by Oak Ridge in the boys' division and Monticello in the girls' section.

Individual high scoring honors of the tournament went to Baskin's Mildred Ragsdale, with 131 points in four games. She also had the best and second best high score in single game competition as she registered 38 points in the defeat of Pioneer in the finals, and 37 points in defeating Waterproof in a game on Friday preceding the finals.

J. Brown, Lake Providence, was the leading scorer in the boys' division. The Panther pivotman scored 64 points in five games, but top honors for the most points in a single boys' game went to C. Edminston, Simsboro High School center, who piled up 26 points in a game with Gilbert the day before the finals.

Closest approach to Miss Ragsdale in the girls' total scoring was 69 points in four games for Miss Coulter of Monticello High School. Second best total scoring in the boys' class went to Ernest (Buster) King, Ouachita, with 59 points in five games, and Edminston, Simsboro, getting in only three games, had 54 points. The Simsboro star had the best scoring average per game among the boys with an 18-point per contest average.

The Ouachita Parish High School boys' championship team comprised the following: Buddy Clifford, forward; Mark Boatright, guard; Johnny Goodwin, center; Ernest (Buster) King, center; Ralph McKay, forward; Jimmy George, guard; Lawson Fleming, guard; Wayne McDonald, guard; Charles Page, forward; Robert Kirby, forward; Jarrell Matkins, forward.

Baskin High School girl champions were: Avis Shuff, forward; Wanda Templeton, guard; Maudie Bradshaw, guard; Doris Wilson, forward; Dixie Baskin, forward; Earline Sikes, guard; Juanita Glass, forward; Mildred Ragsdale, forward; Patsy Stephens, guard; Frances Deggans, guard; Zelma McNair, forward.

Fifty-four teams entered last year's show, which attracted big crowds during the three days it was in progress in three gymnasiums. Trophies will be presented to the three winning teams in each division of the tourney this year, according to tradition.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

by Hugh S. Fullerton, jr.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Fred Wilt, the former Indiana runner, provided a pleasant preview for the indoor track season last Wednesday when he ran a 9:18.1 two miles on a flat armory floor. . . . Tonight comes the traditional, but not formal opening, with the Brooklyn Knights of Columbus meet in a big, bare drillshed on Bedford avenue. . . . Besides Wilt, Mal Whitfield and "Bones" Dillard will be on hand. . . . There'll be a meet a week from here on and it looks like a promising season. . . . Bob Feerick, John Norlander and Matt Zunic, three regulars on the Washington Caps in the Professional Basketball Association of America, played at the Norfolk Naval Training Station during the war. Cap Coach Red Auerbach also was stationed at the Norfolk base. They must have learned to sink the opposition.

Seeing Is Believing

During the press showing of the World Series movie at Boston (and incidentally, the demand for the films is some four months ahead of the supply) Coach Hughey Duffy of the Red Sox found himself at a table with a lot of umpires. . . . A wandering scribe noted this as he passed and wisecracked: "No wonder you hit .438, Duff. You must have hung around with the umpires then."

Sportspourri

Ted Schroeder, back in chilly California after the also-chilly Sugar Bowl tennis tournament, reports he didn't think much of the football game but the basketball was worth the trip. In Ted's tennis language, North Carolina vs. Oklahoma would be just a foot fault. . . . Maybe that explains the story that specs were asking $25 for football ducats and $30 for Kentucky vs. St. Louis. . . . Harold Evans, Bucknell golf coach, was a country club pro at the age of 16. He must have personified the P. G. A. youth program. . . . Tug Wilson of the N. C. A. A. will huddle with the major league baseball executive committee in New York next month in an effort to arrange some "protection" against signing college players. He may offer a suggestion from the college coaches to let the boys stay in school through their sophomore year.

Weak End Notes

LONG OF RAZORBACKS TO GET NELSON AWARD

BOSTON, Jan. 8.—(AP)—For going to the aid of an official in the face of angry spectators after a decision had cost his team a vital football game, Gordon Long of Monett, Mo., University of Arkansas athlete, was selected tonight as winner of the third annual Swede Nelson sportsmanship award.

The game was between Arkansas and S. M. U. on November 13, 1948. S. M. U. won 14-12.

Selection of Long, a senior, was announced by Herb Kopf of the Boston College coaching staff, as chairman of a 12-man committee of the gridiron Club of Boston which will present the trophy to the Arkansas athlete at a Boston dinner next Saturday.

More than 600 sports writers and radio announcers were invited to nominate boys for the trophy, named for Nils V. (Swede) Nelson, Boston cotton merchant, who was a member of Harvard's Rose Bowl squad 30 years ago.

SEEK FORMATION OF STRONG LOOP FOR '49 SEASON

Questionnaires Mailed To Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi Clubs

WINNSBORO, La., Jan. 8.—(Special)—The Franklin Parish Baseball Club, which last season turned out the state championship semi-pro team, is launching a campaign to organize a semi-pro league for 1949, calling on civic interests in towns throughout northeast Louisiana and some in Arkansas and Mississippi to help support a well organized semi-pro circuit.

D. K. Mayer and B. I. Berry, serving on an organization committee here and representing the baseball interests of Winnsboro and Franklin parish, have mailed questionnaires to groups throughout the area, inviting them to join in the program for sport and recreation.

"The Franklin Parish Baseball Club is anxious to organize a good semi-pro league for 1949," Mayer and Berry said. "It is our purpose to determine what other towns and communities will join us in the formation of a good league."

Questionnaires have been sent to Crossett, Ark., Tallulah, Oak Grove, Lake Providence, Ferriday, Waterproof, Delhi, Mangham, Rayville, Bastrop, Monroe, West Monroe, Columbia, Clarks, Olla, Urania, Jonesville, Jena, Ruston, Jonesboro, Hodge, Bernice, Dubach, Winnfield, Farmerville, Bonita, and Vicksburg, Miss.

These are the questions being asked:

1. Do you wish all home-talent baseball?
2. Do you prefer to limit class-players?
3. What salary limits to players would you favor? Maximum, number of players on a roster?
4. How many games per week do you think your community would support, two, three, or four?
5. Will you be equipped to play night baseball in 1949?
6. Will your community be represented at a meeting for the formation of a league at a later date?

The movement is endorsed and supported by the Winnsboro Lions Club, and most of the questionnaires were directed at Lions Clubs in the towns named.

Persons getting questionnaires are urged to act on them and return to Mayer or Berry as soon as possible.

Mayer said today that he or representatives of the Winnsboro club would be available to appear before any civic group or other parties in any interested towns to explain the semi-pro program as it is worked at Winnsboro.

"We, or competent representatives, are available at any time to visit with any club or other group desiring to know more about the semi-pro league program," Mayer said. "Just call on us."

TRAUTMAN SLATES EXECUTIVE SCHOOL

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 8.—(AP)—The second annual baseball executives' conference, better known as "Trautman's College," had an assured student body of at least 230 today.

And the annual conclave here for teaching front office procedure to officials of 456 clubs in the minor loops also has a top-flight faculty for the Jan. 17-21 sessions.

George M. Trautman, prexy of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues who launched the school a year ago because one of every three reports and contracts reaching his office had to be returned for corrections, said reservations had been received from 37 states and Canada, 14 of the 16 major league teams, and headquarters of nine minor loops.

The red-haired boss of the bushers said he expected the registration to reach 300, at least half of them repeaters from last year seeking a post-graduate refresher course. The Brooklyn Dodgers are sending 30 representatives—the No. 1 turnout.

Trautman and two of his associates — Publicity Director Robert L. Finch and assistant to the president, Phillip Piton—will play leading roles in the five-day conference, but other hot-shot instructors have been recruited from all parts of baseball.

Such subjects as "Development and Value of Good Will," "Making Concessions Pay," "Promotions by a Second-Division Club," "Club-Press Relationships," "Selection and care of Equipment," "Insurance," "Budget Analysis," "Park Maintenance and Lighting," "Handling Crowds" and "Radio and Television" will be discussed.

JAX GIRLS' BASKETBALL TEAM WON'T COME HERE

The Jax girls' basketball team of New Orleans, dated for an appearance here January 17, will not make the appearance, it was announced yesterday by Veterans of Foreign Wars who had undertaken to sponsor the contest against a local men's team.

It has been planned to use a men's combination from the local City League until the Monroe players were advised that an appearance against the professional girls team would make them ineligible for continued participation in the local organization which is an amateur group.

ON THE TRAIL

AP Newsfeatures

Winter's cold hand has swept across the land. Lakes, ponds, and streams are locked in bonds of ice, and forests and fields are cloaked in a deep, white blanket. The land sleeps, but save for the few species of wildlife that hibernate, the creatures in feathers and fur do not sleep with it. Instead they must be constantly on the move in search for what is at best scanty fare so they may fend off hunger and starvation.

Those species of birds and animals which during the hunting seasons provide the sportsman with thrills and meat are in many sections well cared for through the long, cold winter months. Food of various kinds is brought into the covers at regular intervals to supplement the slim natural supply, and as a result those creatures do not suffer much from hunger and the cold.

But there are other little wild things who, although not game for the hunter, are his friends, and the friends of all other humans on earth. They are the song birds who during summer sweeten our lives with their singing, and protect us and our gardens from stinging and destructive insects.

They must search hard for food during the winter, and many are unable to find enough to keep strong and warm and finally succumb to the fierce cold or starve to death.

It is encouraging, however, to learn that more and more kind and thoughtful persons are establishing small backyard feeding stations where the birds can feed unmolsted on grains, seeds, crumbs, suet, etc. But many more such stations are needed across the land, not only in the backyards but in the farming areas and in the woods.

In a pleas to the country's nature lovers, sportsmen, and other conservationists to feed the wildlife while the supply of natural food is greatly reduced by winter weather, the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service suggests that for the song birds table scraps, seeds, grains, fruits and other food wastes be thrown on the ground or snow or heaped on feeding trays. Suet should be nailed to a post or wired to a tree.

The Service also suggests that the fir and spruce trees used in the homes during the Christmas holidays be stuck into the snow and trimmed with bits of food, and that other food be thrown into cleared places at their bases.

Farmers are asked to deposit excess stores of shocked corn or threshed grain, weed seeds, and dried fruits and berries in pits dug in the snow, in natural windbreaks or shelters, on haystacks, hard-packed roads, and railroad tracks.

The Service points out that feeding stations either in the woods or backyards should be placed so that easy access to good protective cover and effective means of escape will be afforded. They should be sheltered from drifting snow, wind, and sleet, and should not constitute traps where the birds, both the song and game species, can be cornered by predators.

Conservation Bulletin No. 12, "Feeding Wildlife in Winter," which provides full details on the subject, can be obtained free by writing to the Division of Information, Fish and Wildlife Service, Washington 25, D. C.

CEDARS FEED DEER

Cedars felled by sportsmen in the snow-packed swamps will provide hungry yarded deer with the lacy green browse which is their favorite winter food in the north. Cruising in many such yards I have found in the dead of winter all of the cedars completely cleaned of the browse as far up as the largest deer could reach by standing on its hind legs.

When this happens many of the smaller ones suffering from malnutrition either contract pneumonia and die or just slowly starve to death. I have on several occasions upon examining dead deer, found sections of sharp tree branches that had punctured the walls of the stomach.

Sportsmen, and all others who enjoy being in the woods in winter, can help save many deer in such overbrowsed yards by felling the cedars and also carrying in vegetables, cedar browse, vegetable tops, apples, etc.

The food problem of the rabbits and hares can also be eased during unusually severe winters by chopping down a few poplar saplings here and there through the covers.

And it should be remembered when putting out food for the birds, large and small, that all must also have grit. A little gravel heaped near the free lunch counters will be greatly appreciated by the feathered things.

CAMPFIRE SPARKS

Don't rush the winter fishing season . . . This is a good time to give last summer's fishing tackle a thorough going-over . . . Remove fly lines from the reels and loop loosely for the winter . . . Hang the fly rod in the cloth case not in the metal tube . . . Check and oil reels, and don't forget to put mothballs into the feathered lures . . . Pack baskets that are varnished will last a lot longer . . American fur trappers and fur farmers produce about 30 million pelts each year . . . Muskrats rates highest in wild fur production . . . Although the United States is one of the chief fur-producing countries in the world, it does not produce enough furs to meet more than half its own demand. Don't run your hound when the woods and fields are coated with crusted snow and ice . . . It will ruin his feet in time. . . The Maine Trappers Association is expected to file a bill in the State Legislature this winter calling for an increase of the bobcat bounty from $15 to $25 . . . With many trappers inactive due to very low fur prices, conservation dept. officials in some states fear a heavy kill by foxes and other furred predators of small game birds and animals . . . Make sure on that rabbit hunt that the muzzle of the shotgun does not become plugged tight with dirt or mud!

SET SHOTS and LAY-UPS, TOO

(Another of a series by foremost coaches written for NEA Service.)

By Hal Hickman
DePauw Coach

GREENCASTLE, Ind.—(NEA)—This play is a variation of one of the normal pivot plays used by DePauw.

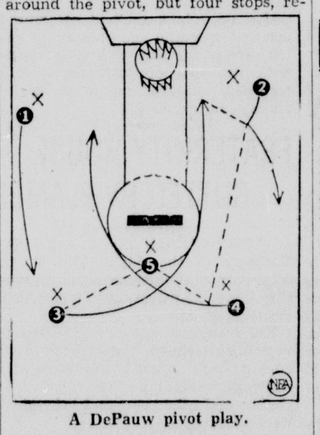

Ordinarily, a guard starts the maneuver by passing in to the center. Both guards break with the pass, peeling off their men as they sweep past the center. The center usually pivots and loops a pass to either guard under the basket, or, if they are too closely guarded, passes back to one of the forwards, both of whom have moved out in the court.

Hal Hickman

The play illustrated in the accompanying diagram varies a bit.

Three passes to five, the pivot. Guards three and four start to break around the pivot, but four stops, receiving a backward pass from five, as three continues toward the goal.

A DePauw pivot play.

Four passes to two, who loops a pass to three under the basket.

Four and two follow through as normally.

This gives the play balance, and protection in case the other team should gain possession.

It can be worked to either side.

WEAVER TO JOIN STAFF AT TULSA

Maroon Line Coach Named As Golden Hurricane Associate Mentor

TULSA, Okla., Jan. 8.—(AP)—DeWitt Weaver, line coach at Mississippi State College for the last three years, has been named as associate football coach at the University of Tulsa, it was announced tonight.

GRAYSON'S SCOREBOARD

By Harry Grayson

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—(NEA)—David Shapiro is offered $1000 to throw a George Washington University game to Manhattan College at Madison Square Garden, and immediately there is a clamor to return basketball to the campus, where it belongs, of course.

The answer to that one, however, is that the colleges would like to confine the game to field houses, if they had them.

And this is as good a time as any to say that if the colleges were not suffering from the general housing problem, possessed the required stadia, such a pleasant situation would not put an end to the wide-spread gambling on varsity basketball.

The bookmakers' nightly line would still include prices on every game played—from Slippery Rock Teachers to Harvard.

And the bookmaker would still be the first to lay off if he suspected anything was fixed.

His line on the operatives, and take or give spread, six to eight points, for example, gives them all the best of it. All he has to do is balance his book.

It's the tinhorns and cheaters like Levy, Aronowitz, Klein and Rivlin, the four jailed in the Dave Shapiro case, who are despicable enough to approach a college boy.

And anyone capable of stooping that low couldn't be concerned about the locale of the game.

Young Shapiro, for example, was first propositioned at a summer camp in the Adirondacks in August, and the quartet who imagined they were sharpshooters first wanted action on a George Washington-North Carolina game, then one between the Colonials and Virginia.

Neither of those engagements was booked at Madison Square Garden or a comparative metropolitan arena.

The Four Bunglers could have gotten just as much action had George Washington been appearing against Bowling Green in Ohio, for instance—perhaps more, for the Falcons, you see, are very good, indeed.

Getting back to the deplorable lack of accommodations for the collegiate basketball clientele, let's look at New York and Chicago alone.

Then you will understand why college teams are performing at Madison Square Garden, the Chicago Stadium, Philadelphia's Convention Hall, the Boston Garden, the Buffalo Auditorium, Cleveland Arena, the Kansas City Auditorium, Los Angeles' Pan-Pacific Auditorium, San Francisco's Cow Palace and other public buildings.

In New York, New York University's gymnasium has been condemned, and there are 11,000 undergraduates alone at NYU. Fordham's gym is practically gigantic, seating all of 3500. Columbia's holds 2500.

Basketball long ago outgrew City College and Brooklyn College plants, where 1200 could be packed in. Brooklyn College's team now plays in an armory. If Brooklyn St. John's and Long Island University had to play all their games on the home courts, no more than 900 could get in at a sitting. No more than 500 in the cases of Manhattan and Brooklyn St. Francis.

So they bring in outside teams, and play at Madison Square Garden, where the spectators are comfortable, and everybody does well.

College double-headers are played at the Chicago Stadium under an arrangement between Northwestern University, which has no gymnasium, and Chicago DePaul.

All Western Conference teams appear there. The Illinois gym, to list another Big Nine schools, accommodates 7000, but even so students can attend only one game in three.

Plans have been laid for more field houses than you could shake a stick at.

But you undoubtedly have become acquainted with the cost of building today.

And everything else.

Committee Reports 17 Of 50 Bowls Respond To Questionnaires

By Russ Newland

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Post-season bowl games came under scrutiny of the National Collegiate Athletic Association today. But contrary to expectations, the executive committee report made no specific recommendations to curtail the number of these games.

The committee, however, left the way open for action on this subject at the 1950 convention.

The bowl committee, consisting of Victor O. Schildt, commissioner of the Pacific Coast Conference, as chairman; Bernie Moore, commissioner of the Southeastern Conference, and Horace Renegar, Tulane, presented its report after sending out questionnaires to fifty bowl game sponsors.

It received replies from only 17. These were the Rose, Orange, Sugar, Cotton, Sun, Junior Rose, East-West Shrine game, 'Gator, Glass, Pear, Salad, Raisin, Tangerine, Great Lakes, Gold Dust, Alamo and Burley bowls.

The Aloha Bowl, Honolulu, said it had sent in its reply but the committee said it hadn't found it.

Additional study of the many bowls was recommended by the committee, which urged that "except for games in November or December, 1949, and January, 1950, this association * * * request its member institutions and conferences to make or renew no commitments to engage in any bowl games between the date of this convention and the date of any action on these subjects at the 1950 convention, that if the next convention should legislate upon this subject so as to exclude prior commitments, that it attach a requirement of good faith and consider any failure to honor this request as a breach of good faith."

The report added "one of the objections made to bowl games is their post-season character. The existence of this subject requires neither study nor examination, as all so-called bowl games are post-season games.

"Other possible characteristics of the bowl games which the N. C. A. A. might wish to be informed upon are the sponsorship of the games (a matter inquired into and reported by the previous committee), the management of the games, and the distribution of the receipts of the games.

"After a study of the report of the original committee it is felt by the present committee that a further study could well be made to attempt to ascertain: 1—The actual game management—that is, whether it was collegiate or otherwise; 2—The actual breakdown of receipts by others than the competing institutions; 3—The amounts spent on promotion and publicity; 4—Some information concerning the stadia in which the games were played."

The committee found "whatever form the charges and expenses against the games may take, the most significant results are shown by the percentages of gross receipts actually distributed to the two competing schools. * * *

"Among the larger bowls, the Cotton Bowl distributed 75 per cent of all gross income to the participating institutions; the Rose Bowl 70 per cent; the Sugar Bowl 55 per cent; the Orange Bowl 38 per cent.

"Others are the Salad Bowl, 87 per cent; Glass, 85; Pear, 82; Tangerine, 76; 'Gator 70; Gold Dust, 46; Raisin, 47; Burley, 40; Junior Rose Bowl, 33 per cent. The Shrine East-West game of San Francisco is an All-Star charity game and there were, therefore, no participating institutions in that game."

Only three of the responding bowl games, the conference found, "appeared to be actually operated by intercollegiate conferences or competing institutions; namely, the Rose, Cotton and Glass bowls."

It said "only five of the responding bowls were played in college or junior college stadia. These were the Sugar, Raisin, Gold Dust, Glass and Sun Bowls."

The report continued: "Some of the bowls are operated by agencies which conduct a civic festival of which the football game is a part and part of the income of the football game finances the civic activities.

"In one case a civic organization is the long-term lessee of the stadium upon which it charges a rental for the football game substantially in excess of the rental which it pays to the owner of the stadium, and which excess it employs to finance a civic festival.

"The breakdown of the various items of game expenses showed an over-preponderance of expenses charged to promotion, publicity and public relations.

"In the majority of cases these represented a much larger amount than the aggregate of all other games expenses, reaching as high in some cases as 50 per cent or more of the amount paid to the competing institutions, and reaching in several instances as high as 20 to 30 per cent of gross receipts.

"It also was discovered that in some cases the income from program or radio rights formed no part of the proceeds in which the competing institutions participated.

"Instances have been reported to some members of this committee in which institutions have been inducted by political and other pressures to compete in bowl games which they did not approve."

Mangrum, Monti Tied For Lead In Los Angeles Open

STEDDUM, MOBLEY IN ANOTHER TAG GO WITH CURTIS BROTHERS

Texas Villains To Supply Own Referee For Tuesday Night Card

"Wild Bill" Steddum and Rex Mobley, dissatisfied with the work of referee in their relay scramble with the Curtis brothers, Jack and George, here last week, have been granted a rematch with the privilege of furnishing their own referee, Promoter Gus Kallio announced last night.

So it will be another tag scramble at Kallio's Arena here Tuesday night with Champion Jack Curtis and his kid brother squaring off against the Texas villains once more in a winner-take-all scrap.

Arrangements for the event were made after lengthy bickering, mostly between Steddum and Promoter Kallio.

Steddum won out on all points, the rematch, his furnishing of the referee, and a match on a winner-take-all basis. And Steddum refused to name the referee, getting by with that also with the explanation, "You'll find out Tuesday."

"It sounds like a funny deal," was Jack Curtis' comment, "But let them have their way. George and I may learn something new. I would rather like to find out what is going to happen in a match like that."

Blaming the loss to the Curtis brothers last week on the officiating, Steddum approached Kallio with the request that he be permitted to do the match-making for this week.

"I like Mobley for my partner," Steddum said, "and we want a return tag match with the Curtis boys with the understanding that I bring in the referee.

"This referee I have in mind will give a square deal all the way. He knows what wrestling is and don't listen to the crowd and favor the man who the crowd is for.

"The reason we lost this last match was because the referee wanted to be a hero with the fans, not caring about the wrestlers."

Steddum also declared "Monroe is the hardest town on a referee that I've ever been in. If their favorite wins the crowd is O. K., but just let another wrestler win for a change and the howling starts. Monroe might be a good wrestling town, but its fans are certainly poor sports."

"Well, there are lots of things I can't help," Kallio answered. 'I just do the best I can. I like to be fair with you all, but it seems that I can't please everybody. I may be making a big mistake in letting you bring in a referee, but since the Curtis boys agree we'll give it a try.

The tag feature will have a time limit of 90 minutes with victory going to the team first to win two falls.

Two one-fall preliminaries will start the night's fireworks at 8 o'clock with the Curtis boys getting their tuneups against one of the other main event principals.

EX-HEAVY FIGHTER HELD FOR KILLING

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 8.—(AP)—A former heavyweight boxer who said he was tired of being taunted and called "punch drunk" was accused today of beating a fellow brewery employe to death.

Gus Dorazio, a leading challenger for the heavyweight crown eight years ago, was arraigned and held without bail in connection with the slaying of 33-year-old Albert Blomeyer.

Arrested shortly after Blomeyer died in Homeopathic Hospital yesterday, Dorazio was quoted by detectives as saying:

"People have been taunting me. They called me punch drunk. They'd call me up on the phone just to heckle me."

Unshaven and wearing a blue jacket and overalls, a silent Dorazio was arraigned before Magistrate George Levin who told the fighter:

"This is a bad ending for a fellow like you. I will have to hold you without bail for the coroner."

Dorazio fought champion Joe Louis in Philadelphia's Convention Hall Feb. 17, 1941, and was knocked out in the second round. He later came back to whip Joe Baksi, a current title contender.

Detectives James Martin and Thomas Blong said the victim suffered fatal injuries in a fight in the engineering department of the C. Schmidt & Sons, Inc., brewery.

N. J. C. SPONSORS SECOND SESSION ON CAGE RULES

Basketball Officials, Coaches, Players Invited To Wednesday Meet

Determined to have a uniform understanding of the current basketball rules, Coach A. S. Huffman of Northeast Junior College has called the second meeting this year for Wednesday evening at the Northeast Junior College gymnasium at 6:30 o'clock.

"The growth of basketball over the period of years in the northern Louisiana area makes it necessary to have a uniform interpretation of current basketball rules," Huffman said. "The reason is easily seen when two competing teams from different sections clash on the hardwood floor. If the situation arises where the officials and team members have conflicting viewpoints on a rule that has developed during the game it would be too late then to get a uniform interpretation of the rule in question."

It was pointed out by Coach Huffman that this condition has confronted basketball officials many embarrassing times, and that an organization of the officials would be an aid to relieve these situations.

The first part of the program will be the demonstration of the new rules followed by question and answer session and then a discussion of rules in any part of the book. Coach Huffman said that a group of college boys will be on hand to give a live demonstration of any rule in question. As the business of the meeting comes to a close, all officials wishing to create an organization for this purpose will be asked to remain and work out plans for the future. Several officials have been notified of the plan and have showed a lot of enthusiasm toward organizing.

Nathan (Buddy) Blair, manager of the Vicksburg baseball club of the Southeastern League, will play host at the meeting and interpret the rules. "Buddy" is well qualified for his duties, being an official himself since his college playing days as a member of the Louisiana State University basketball Bengels.

Assisting Coach Huffman at the meeting will be Jack Hesketh, director of the Monroe recreation department. Hesketh has charge of the Monroe recreation basketball leagues and is well aware of the problems the high schools are fronted with because of different interpretations of the rules in different parts of the state. In Hesketh's own local league many problems arise from the different conceptions of the cage rules. He stated that it would instill more interest in basketball and make a better game for the spectator to watch if the officials in this area were organized and worked out these problems beforehand.

The cage clinic conducted before the Christmas holidays met with great success. Everyone attending was well pleased with Woodrow Turner, the Columbia High School coach, in his demonstrations of the new rules at this first meeting. This program will be based on the same principles, and the basketball fans of northern Louisiana, coaches and their players, and especially the officials are cordially invited to attend.

FAVORED HOGAN SLIPS 8 STROKES BEHIND LEADERS

'Dutch' Harrison, Leader First Round, Falls Two Licks Off Pace

By Bob Myers

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Lloyd Mangrum and his protege, Eric Monti, were tied at 138 today to lead the field at the midway mark of the $15,000 annual Los Angeles Open Golf tournament.

Mangrum, of Chicago, United States Open king in 1946, blasted the par 71 Riviera Country Club course for a five-under-par 66—the finest display in the tournament—and a 36-hole score of 138.

Monti, of Santa Monica, the 30-year-old professional who has been coached in the game by Mangrum, came in with a 67 and 138.

Ben Hogan, gunning for his fourth triumph in this event and his third in succession, all but bowed out of top contention. He took 74 blows yesterday, and 72 today for a 146, eight strokes behind the leaders.

E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of Little Rock, Ark., whose 69 set the first-round pace, dropped back with a 71 for 140, tied with Marty Furgol of Albuquerque, N. M., whose score reads 71-69 going into tomorrow's round of 18 holes.

Sam Snead signaled a temporary threat with a par 35 on the first nine holes today, but blew the works on the way home for a 39 and a 74 to go with his first-round 71 for a total of 145. Par for the course is 35-36—71. Snead missed three short putts—one of one foot—in the last four holes.

An estimated 9,000 were in the galleries for the 23rd edition of the tournament, a fixture on the midwinter circuit.

OUACHITA CAGERS MEET OAK RIDGE HERE WEDNESDAY

Lions Groom For 2nd Scrap After Losing Opener To Fair Park

The Ouachita Parish High School Lions, who dropped their basketball season opener to the Fair Park Indians of Shreveport here Friday night, will meet the Oak Ridge quintet here Wednesday night at 8 o'clock in the O. P. H. S. gymnasium.

The Oak Ridge game is the only contest on tap for the Lions this week, but Coach Herbert H. Holliman said he wouldn't be opposed to a game Tuesday if some interested school would contact him not later than tomorrow.

"We need the action and are ready to accept a few additional games," he said.

The Lions will be entertained at their annual football banquet Friday night with the Lionettes, girls' organization, as hostesses.

The Lions, after two weeks' practice, lost to Fair Park, 48 to 45, in a hard fought battle that saw Ouachita closing with a rush after trailing most of the way. It was the fifteenth game of the season for the Indians whose additional experience didn't look too impressive over Holliman's boys.

The locals scored first and held a five-point lead before the Tribe forged ahead midway of the first quarter. The Lions began closing in with a better brand of ball in the last half and the driving force carried them into the lead, 41-40, with four minutes to go. But the Tribe hit the nets with three field goals and a foul shot in the remaining time to sew up the game.

Georgia came back to take the lead on goals by Scholoss and Farr.

Georgia continued to hit the basket and led 27-20 when the half ended.

Midway in the second half, the Bulldogs led 34-33. McKenzie put Alabama in the lead with a goal, but Jordan's free throw tied the score, 35-35.

MULLOY GAINS FINALS OF DIXIE NET TOURNEY

TAMPA, Fla., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Gardnar Mulloy, the Davis Cupper from Miami, got his revenge today on Ricardo Balbiers of Chile by ousting him in the semi-finals of the Dixie Tennis Tournament.

Mulloy, who went out of the recent Sugar Bowl tourney at the hands of Balbiers, whipped the South American 6-2, 12-10, 7-5.

In the other semi-finals match Gardnar Larned whipped his rolling college teammate, Buddy Behrens, 7-5, 1-6, 6-0, 7-5.

The Mulloy-Balbiers match was one of the best of the tournament. Each was equally good in back court play. Both had good forehand shots working. Mulloy's victory came as he went to the net more often and had better play there.

Larned's better generalship and steadiness beat the temperamental Behrens.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Tennessee ended its non-conference basketball play with a convincing 73-57 victory over the Wolfpack of Loyola of the South here tonight before 2,000 fans.

The New Orleans team took a 3-0 lead in the first two minutes, but the Vols, working better as a unit than at any time this season, soon overtook the Wolfpack and were never headed.

Tennessee reserves were sent in after the Vols gained a 25-point lead in the second half.

The Loyola attack was led by Center Hewitte Thian, with 11 points, Guard Clyde Poche, with 10, and Guard Robert Rehm, with nine.

TEXAS LEAGUERS FORECAST BIGGER CROWDS FOR 1949

FORT WORTH, Tex., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Texas League club owners today predicted an attendance of 2,750,000 in the 1949 race as they wound up their annual winter meeting by adopting a 154-game schedule.

Such a figure would better by almost three-quarters of a million the all-time record of 2,041,043 set last season.

Houston, which set the one-club record for home attendance last year with 401,383, forecast 500,000 for the 1948 while Dallas, Fort Worth and San Antonio each predicted 400,000. Oklahoma City said it expected 350,000, Beaumont and Shreveport 225,000 each and Tulsa 250,000.

Enlarged parks will mean the eight cities can handle a total of 78,550 fans. Dallas has increased its capacity the most, putting in about 4,500 more seats.

The 154-game schedule will cover a period of 151 days opening April 13 and closing Sept. 11. Opening games will be Dallas at Oklahoma City, Fort Worth at Tulsa, Houston at San Antonio and Beaumont at Shreveport. They change these stands April 15. Holiday double-headers will be played July 4 and Labor Day, with Dallas at Oklahoma City, Fort Work at Tulsa, Shreveport at San Antonio and Beaumont at Houston for the former and a reversal for the latter.

WHITE SOX GET BEVENS ON CONDITIONAL TERMS

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Baseball's busiest rebuilders, the Chicago White Sox, today had salvaged Floyd (Bill) Bevens, loser of a one-hitter in the 1947 World Series, from the New York Yankees.

He comes to the Sox's mound staff conditionally, and can be returned if his sore shoulder does not work into shape. The 31-year-old righthander twirled 8 2-3 hitless innings against Brooklyn in the 1947 series only to lose, 2 to 1, when Cookie Lavagetto doubled in two runs.

Late in 1947 he strained a right leg ligament officiating a basketball game. This and his shoulder trouble left him useless to the Yanks last season. During 1948 he pitched some semi-pro ball and appeared in only eight innings for Newark of the International League in mid-season.

CONZELMAN TO LEAVE PRO GRID CARDINALS

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—(AP)—A St. Louis advertising firm has pulled the biggest coup of the season on the high-bidding pro football market by luring Jimmy Conzelman out of his Chicago coaching job and into the business world.

Conzelman, 49, said in his letter of resignation that he decided to get out of football and settle down to a more normal family life. He will be an account executive for the D'Arcy Advertising Company.

Jimmy's Cardinal contract, signed in 1948, had one more year to go.

Jerome Davies of the Chicago Cards made the longest punt return of the National Football League 1948 season when he lugged one back 70 yards to a touchdown against New York.

Mackenzie's Column

By DeWitt Mackenzie

(Associated Press Foreign Affairs Analyst)

Selection of a United States secretary of state in these dark and dangerous days of communism's global revolution is a momentous decision.

He must be a man of international vision and vast common sense. Wars and peace-treaties more often than not start in foreign offices.

For this reason President Truman's appointment of Dean Acheson as secretary of state is of supreme importance not only to America but to the world at large. The chancelleries of the major nations have been awaiting Mr. Truman's choice anxiously ever since it became apparent that General George Marshall would retire as secretary because of ill health.

Prior to the appointment there had been much diplomatic speculation whether it would involve any change in Uncle Sam's cold war strategy. The answer to that is in the negative.

President Truman has declared that America's policy in this respect will not be changed by his selection. Moreover, Acheson's deeds confirm this estimate.

During his long service as assistant secretary and undersecretary of state, Acheson had a big hand in framing America's policy for holding the Bolshevist aggression in check. He helped develop the "Truman doctrine" for helping free nations (like Greece and Turkey) resist the Red aggression. He also drafted the Marshall plan for European rehabilitation.

In announcing Acheson's appointment, President Truman took occasion to declare there is no foundation to reports that he wanted to soften America's "tough" policy in dealing with Moscow. This statement was in answer to a published story to the effect that he was engaged in a fight within his cabinet to soften American policy towards Russia.

The article in question was by Jay Franklin and was published in Life magazine. The president said it is without foundation in fact in nearly every instance and paragraph. Franklin is a newspaper columnist and was among writers who helped prepare Mr. Truman's campaign speeches last fall.

Thus the president has given double assurances regarding the steadfastness of America's policy towards Russia. He not only has reaffirmed the policy by word of mouth but has put his seal on it by appointing as secretary a man who had much to do with developing it.

First foreign reaction to Acheson's appointment came from London. High government officials privately expressed enthusiasm, although they were sorry to see Marshall retiring after "his fine and outstanding work for the good of humanity." Western Europe generally welcomed the appointment.

One would expect that to represent the consensus among anti-Communist nations. In this connection it is interesting to note that Acheson is perhaps the American best known personally in the chancellories of some 44 countries. He acquired this status through his leadership of the American delegation to the United Nations relief and rehabilitation administration conferences of 1943 and 1944.

The 55-year-old lawyer already had made his fortune when he became President Roosevelt's first undersecretary of the treasury in 1933. This service was followed by a variety of other government positions.

The wiry, six-foot-one secretary looks capable and talks a shirt-sleeve language that most folks have no difficulty in understanding—for example: "If totalitarian aggression * * * is to be kept out of the United States, it must be kept out of this hemisphere."

IN MOVIELAND

By Bob Thomas

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Hello, out there! Anybody want to read my memoirs?

People ask Hal Boyle to write about himself, but nobody ever asks me. This would be a good day for it, since it marks the beginning of my fifth year on the Hollywood beat. But nobody asked me.

I had hoped that someone would write in and ask, "Do you get tired interviewing movie stars?". I would answer yes, I do. Any work, even wine sipping, can get tiresome. Interview "can get scarce and stars can get dull. But the movies are a fascinating business, and something always turns up.

If anybody asked me, I could tell them that interviewing Bing Crosby is like pulling teeth and interviewing June Allyson is like two weeks' vacation with pay.

I could also regale whoever might listen with tales of my experiences. How I got bawled out by George Jessel for calling him and Eddie Cantor "hams." How Director Eddie Buzzell tossed me out of an M.-G.-M. pool just as Esther Williams was giving me a swimming lesson.

How I got the brush-off from Hedy Lamarr who told me through a flunky that she was too tired to talk any more. How I got whipped 6-0, 6-0 in a tennis match with Jinx Falkenburg. How I did a story on a campagne tour of the night clubs with Maria Montez. And kissed June Haver just to report what it was like.

I could report on how well I know the stars, except that Gary Cooper and Irene Dunne sometimes call me Danny, which is not my name. And others can meet anybody a dozen times and think each time is the first.

Wouldn't you suppose that somebody would be interested in the fact that I discovered Robert Mitchum when he did a bit in "30 Seconds Over Tokyo"? (Look at him now!) Or that I knew Peter Lawford when he rode a motor scooter instead of a Cadillac?

You'd think that Constant Reader of Pismo Beach would have written in to ask if I think Hollywood is an especially wicked place. (I don't.) Or if I think movies are going to get any better. (I do.) Or if I am happy in my work. (I am.)

All this information could have been yours for the asking. Hello, out there!

BELIEVE AGE-CLOCK FOUND IS CHEMICAL

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Discovery of a mysterious chemical called X, which seems to time how fast you grow old, was described to the Terontological Society here today.

X is something that parents transmit to their offspring. It is set, like a clock, either for a long or short life.

The report was by Dr. A. I. Lansing of the Washington University School of Medicine, St. Louis. The Gerontological Society is an organization of scientists and doctors who study old age. Their annual meeting was held today.

The age clock was found in rotifers, but a little human evidence was cited. Rotifers are microscopic water bugs, swimming with long lashes that make them look like whirling dervishes.

Wah Wah Jones, Kentucky basketball and football ace, caught more touchdown passes during the football season than any other Southeastern Conference player.

N. C. A. A. SPURS BOWL-GAME INVESTIGATIONS

By Russ Newland

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Post-season bowl games came under scrutiny of the National Collegiate Athletic Association today. But contrary to expectations, the executive committee report made no specific recommendations to curtail the number of these games.

The committee, however, left the way open for action on this subject at the 1950 convention.

The bowl committee, consisting of Victor O. Schildt, commissioner of the Pacific Coast Conference, as chairman; Bernie Moore, commissioner of the Southeastern Conference, and Horace Renegar, Tulane, presented its report after sending out questionnaires to fifty bowl game sponsors.

It received replies from only 17. These were the Rose, Orange, Sugar, Cotton, Sun, Junior Rose, East-West Shrine game, 'Gator, Glass, Pear, Salad, Raisin, Tangerine, Great Lakes, Gold Dust, Alamo and Burley bowls.

The Aloha Bowl, Honolulu, said it had sent in its reply but the committee said it hadn't found it.

Additional study of the many bowls was recommended by the committee, which urged that "except for games in November or December, 1949, and January, 1950, this association * * * request its member institutions and conferences to make or renew no commitments to engage in any bowl games between the date of this convention and the date of any action on these subjects at the 1950 convention, that if the next convention should legislate upon this subject so as to exclude prior commitments, that it attach a requirement of good faith and consider any failure to honor this request as a breach of good faith."

The report added "one of the objections made to bowl games is their post-season character. The existence of this subject requires neither study nor examination, as all so-called bowl games are post-season games.

"Other possible characteristics of the bowl games which the N. C. A. A. might wish to be informed upon are the sponsorship of the games (a matter inquired into and reported by the previous committee), the management of the games, and the distribution of the receipts of the games.

"After a study of the report of the original committee it is felt by the present committee that a further study could well be made to attempt to ascertain: 1—The actual game management—that is, whether it was collegiate or otherwise; 2—The actual breakdown of receipts by others than the competing institutions; 3—The amounts spent on promotion and publicity; 4—Some information concerning the stadia in which the games were played."

The committee found "whatever form the charges and expenses against the games may take, the most significant results are shown by the percentages of gross receipts actually distributed to the two competing schools. * * *

"Among the larger bowls, the Cotton Bowl distributed 75 per cent of all gross income to the participating institutions; the Rose Bowl 70 per cent; the Sugar Bowl 55 per cent; the Orange Bowl 38 per cent.

"Others are the Salad Bowl, 87 per cent; Glass, 85; Pear, 82; Tangerine, 76; 'Gator 70; Gold Dust, 46; Raisin, 47; Burley, 40; Junior Rose Bowl, 33 per cent. The Shrine East-West game of San Francisco is an All-Star charity game and there were, therefore, no participating institutions in that game."

Only three of the responding bowl games, the conference found, "appeared to be actually operated by intercollegiate conferences or competing institutions; namely, the Rose, Cotton and Glass bowls."

It said "only five of the responding bowls were played in college or junior college stadia. These were the Sugar, Raisin, Gold Dust, Glass and Sun Bowls."

The report continued: "Some of the bowls are operated by agencies which conduct a civic festival of which the football game is a part and part of the income of the football game finances the civic activities.

"In one case a civic organization is the long-term lessee of the stadium upon which it charges a rental for the football game substantially in excess of the rental which it pays to the owner of the stadium, and which excess it employs to finance a civic festival.

"The breakdown of the various items of game expenses showed an over-preponderance of expenses charged to promotion, publicity and public relations.

"In the majority of cases these represented a much larger amount than the aggregate of all other games expenses, reaching as high in some cases as 50 per cent or more of the amount paid to the competing institutions, and reaching in several instances as high as 20 to 30 per cent of gross receipts.

"It also was discovered that in some cases the income from program or radio rights formed no part of the proceeds in which the competing institutions participated.

"Instances have been reported to some members of this committee in which institutions have been inducted by political and other pressures to compete in bowl games which they did not approve."

STEDDUM, MOBLEY IN ANOTHER TAG GO WITH CURTIS BROTHERS

Texas Villains To Supply Own Referee For Tuesday Night Card

"Wild Bill" Steddum and Rex Mobley, dissatisfied with the work of referee in their relay scramble with the Curtis brothers, Jack and George, here last week, have been granted a rematch with the privilege of furnishing their own referee, Promoter Gus Kallio announced last night.

So it will be another tag scramble at Kallio's Arena here Tuesday night with Champion Jack Curtis and his kid brother squaring off against the Texas villains once more in a winner-take-all scrap.

Arrangements for the event were made after lengthy bickering, mostly between Steddum and Promoter Kallio.

Steddum won out on all points, the rematch, his furnishing of the referee, and a match on a winner-take-all basis. And Steddum refused to name the referee, getting by with that also with the explanation, "You'll find out Tuesday."

"It sounds like a funny deal," was Jack Curtis' comment, "But let them have their way. George and I may learn something new. I would rather like to find out what is going to happen in a match like that."

Blaming the loss to the Curtis brothers last week on the officiating, Steddum approached Kallio with the request that he be permitted to do the match-making for this week.

"I like Mobley for my partner," Steddum said, "and we want a return tag match with the Curtis boys with the understanding that I bring in the referee.

"This referee I have in mind will give a square deal all the way. He knows what wrestling is and don't listen to the crowd and favor the man who the crowd is for.

"The reason we lost this last match was because the referee wanted to be a hero with the fans, not caring about the wrestlers."

Steddum also declared "Monroe is the hardest town on a referee that I've ever been in. If their favorite wins the crowd is O. K., but just let another wrestler win for a change and the howling starts. Monroe might be a good wrestling town, but its fans are certainly poor sports."

"Well, there are lots of things I can't help," Kallio answered. 'I just do the best I can. I like to be fair with you all, but it seems that I can't please everybody. I may be making a big mistake in letting you bring in a referee, but since the Curtis boys agree we'll give it a try.

The tag feature will have a time limit of 90 minutes with victory going to the team first to win two falls.

Two one-fall preliminaries will start the night's fireworks at 8 o'clock with the Curtis boys getting their tuneups against one of the other main event principals.

EX-HEAVY FIGHTER HELD FOR KILLING

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 8.—(AP)—A former heavyweight boxer who said he was tired of being taunted and called "punch drunk" was accused today of beating a fellow brewery employe to death.

Gus Dorazio, a leading challenger for the heavyweight crown eight years ago, was arraigned and held without bail in connection with the slaying of 33-year-old Albert Blomeyer.

Arrested shortly after Blomeyer died in Homeopathic Hospital yesterday, Dorazio was quoted by detectives as saying:

"People have been taunting me. They called me punch drunk. They'd call me up on the phone just to heckle me."

Unshaven and wearing a blue jacket and overalls, a silent Dorazio was arraigned before Magistrate George Levin who told the fighter:

"This is a bad ending for a fellow like you. I will have to hold you without bail for the coroner."

Dorazio fought champion Joe Louis in Philadelphia's Convention Hall Feb. 17, 1941, and was knocked out in the second round. He later came back to whip Joe Baksi, a current title contender.

Detectives James Martin and Thomas Blong said the victim suffered fatal injuries in a fight in the engineering department of the C. Schmidt & Sons, Inc., brewery.

N. J. C. SPONSORS SECOND SESSION ON CAGE RULES

Basketball Officials, Coaches, Players Invited To Wednesday Meet

Determined to have a uniform understanding of the current basketball rules, Coach A. S. Huffman of Northeast Junior College has called the second meeting this year for Wednesday evening at the Northeast Junior College gymnasium at 6:30 o'clock.

"The growth of basketball over the period of years in the northern Louisiana area makes it necessary to have a uniform interpretation of current basketball rules," Huffman said. "The reason is easily seen when two competing teams from different sections clash on the hardwood floor. If the situation arises where the officials and team members have conflicting viewpoints on a rule that has developed during the game it would be too late then to get a uniform interpretation of the rule in question."

It was pointed out by Coach Huffman that this condition has confronted basketball officials many embarrassing times, and that an organization of the officials would be an aid to relieve these situations.

The first part of the program will be the demonstration of the new rules followed by question and answer session and then a discussion of rules in any part of the book. Coach Huffman said that a group of college boys will be on hand to give a live demonstration of any rule in question. As the business of the meeting comes to a close, all officials wishing to create an organization for this purpose will be asked to remain and work out plans for the future. Several officials have been notified of the plan and have showed a lot of enthusiasm toward organizing.

Nathan (Buddy) Blair, manager of the Vicksburg baseball club of the Southeastern League, will play host at the meeting and interpret the rules. "Buddy" is well qualified for his duties, being an official himself since his college playing days as a member of the Louisiana State University basketball Bengels.

Assisting Coach Huffman at the meeting will be Jack Hesketh, director of the Monroe recreation department. Hesketh has charge of the Monroe recreation basketball leagues and is well aware of the problems the high schools are fronted with because of different interpretations of the rules in different parts of the state. In Hesketh's own local league many problems arise from the different conceptions of the cage rules. He stated that it would instill more interest in basketball and make a better game for the spectator to watch if the officials in this area were organized and worked out these problems beforehand.

The cage clinic conducted before the Christmas holidays met with great success. Everyone attending was well pleased with Woodrow Turner, the Columbia High School coach, in his demonstrations of the new rules at this first meeting. This program will be based on the same principles, and the basketball fans of northern Louisiana, coaches and their players, and especially the officials are cordially invited to attend.

CHICAGO BLACKHAWKS TIED BY MAPLE LEAFS

TORONTO, Jan. 8.—(AP)—The Toronto Maple Leafs moved into a fourth-place tie in the National Hockey League race tonight when they came from behind to earn a 3-3 tie with the third-place Chicago Blackhawks. It was the seventh tie for the Leafs this season and the third for the Hawks.

FAVORED HOGAN SLIPS 8 STROKES BEHIND LEADERS

'Dutch' Harrison, Leader First Round, Falls Two Licks Off Pace

By Bob Myers

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Lloyd Mangrum and his protege, Eric Monti, were tied at 138 today to lead the field at the midway mark of the $15,000 annual Los Angeles Open Golf tournament.

Mangrum, of Chicago, United States Open king in 1946, blasted the par 71 Riviera Country Club course for a five-under-par 66—the finest display in the tournament—and a 36-hole score of 138.

Monti, of Santa Monica, the 30-year-old professional who has been coached in the game by Mangrum, came in with a 67 and 138.

Ben Hogan, gunning for his fourth triumph in this event and his third in succession, all but bowed out of top contention. He took 74 blows yesterday, and 72 today for a 146, eight strokes behind the leaders.

E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of Little Rock, Ark., whose 69 set the first-round pace, dropped back with a 71 for 140, tied with Marty Furgol of Albuquerque, N. M., whose score reads 71-69 going into tomorrow's round of 18 holes.

Sam Snead signaled a temporary threat with a par 35 on the first nine holes today, but blew the works on the way home for a 39 and a 74 to go with his first-round 71 for a total of 145. Par for the course is 35-36—71. Snead missed three short putts—one of one foot—in the last four holes.

An estimated 9,000 were in the galleries for the 23rd edition of the tournament, a fixture on the midwinter circuit.

OUACHITA CAGERS MEET OAK RIDGE HERE WEDNESDAY

Lions Groom For 2nd Scrap After Losing Opener To Fair Park

The Ouachita Parish High School Lions, who dropped their basketball season opener to the Fair Park Indians of Shreveport here Friday night, will meet the Oak Ridge quintet here Wednesday night at 8 o'clock in the O. P. H. S. gymnasium.

The Oak Ridge game is the only contest on tap for the Lions this week, but Coach Herbert H. Holliman said he wouldn't be opposed to a game Tuesday if some interested school would contact him not later than tomorrow.

"We need the action and are ready to accept a few additional games," he said.

The Lions will be entertained at their annual football banquet Friday night with the Lionettes, girls' organization, as hostesses.

The Lions, after two weeks' practice, lost to Fair Park, 48 to 45, in a hard fought battle that saw Ouachita closing with a rush after trailing most of the way. It was the fifteenth game of the season for the Indians whose additional experience didn't look too impressive over Holliman's boys.

The locals scored first and held a five-point lead before the Tribe forged ahead midway of the first quarter. The Lions began closing in with a better brand of ball in the last half and the driving force carried them into the lead, 41-40, with four minutes to go. But the Tribe hit the nets with three field goals and a foul shot in the remaining time to sew up the game.

Georgia continued to hit the basket and led 27-20 when the half ended.

Midway in the second half, the Bulldogs led 34-33. McKenzie put Alabama in the lead with a goal, but Jordan's free throw tied the score, 35-35.

MULLOY GAINS FINALS OF DIXIE NET TOURNEY

TAMPA, Fla., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Gardnar Mulloy, the Davis Cupper from Miami, got his revenge today on Ricardo Balbiers of Chile by ousting him in the semi-finals of the Dixie Tennis Tournament.

Mulloy, who went out of the recent Sugar Bowl tourney at the hands of Balbiers, whipped the South American 6-2, 12-10, 7-5.

In the other semi-finals match Gardnar Larned whipped his rolling college teammate, Buddy Behrens, 7-5, 1-6, 6-0, 7-5.

The Mulloy-Balbiers match was one of the best of the tournament. Each was equally good in back court play. Both had good forehand shots working. Mulloy's victory came as he went to the net more often and had better play there.

Larned's better generalship and steadiness beat the temperamental Behrens.

LOYOLA WOLVES FALL BEFORE VOLS, 73 TO 57

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Tennessee ended its non-conference basketball play with a convincing 73-57 victory over the Wolfpack of Loyola of the South here tonight before 2,000 fans.

Forward Paul Walther was the spark of the smooth-working Volunteers, hitting nine field goals and seven free throws for 25 points. He set Tennessee's scoring record of 31 points against Wake Forest last Monday.

The New Orleans team took a 3-0 lead in the first two minutes, but the Vols, working better as a unit than at any time this season, soon overtook the Wolfpack and were never headed.

Tennessee reserves were sent in after the Vols gained a 25-point lead in the second half.

The Loyola attack was led by Center Hewitte Thian, with 11 points, Guard Clyde Poche, with 10, and Guard Robert Rehm, with nine.

THREE GIANT HURLERS SIGN NEW CONTRACTS

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—(AP)—Three hurlers, who are expected to comprise the nucleus of the New York Giants' pitching staff next season, have returned their signed contracts, Secretary Eddie Brannick announced today.

The trio included righthanders Larry Jansen (18-12), and Sheldon Jones (16-8), and Southpaw Monte Kennedy (3-9). This makes a total of 10 players already in the fold.

TULANE QUINTET ROLLS THROUGH MAROONS, 69-47

Wildness At Times Spoils Perfect Greenie Performance; Riffey Hot

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 8.—(AP)—The Tulane University cagers conquered their wildness to defeat Mississippi State College 69-47 in a basketball game before 5,000 fans here tonight.

Playing hot and cold, the Greenies at times passed wildly and worked the ball in clumsily.

The sparkling backboard play of Mel Payton and Jim Riffey turned many teammate wild shots into tallies.

Score at the halftime was 33-23 in favor of Tulane.

TEXAS LEAGUERS FORECAST BIGGER CROWDS FOR 1949

FORT WORTH, Tex., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Texas League club owners today predicted an attendance of 2,750,000 in the 1949 race as they wound up their annual winter meeting by adopting a 154-game schedule.

Such a figure would better by almost three-quarters of a million the all-time record of 2,041,043 set last season.

Houston, which set the one-club record for home attendance last year with 401,383, forecast 500,000 for the 1948 while Dallas, Fort Worth and San Antonio each predicted 400,000. Oklahoma City said it expected 350,000, Beaumont and Shreveport 225,000 each and Tulsa 250,000.

Enlarged parks will mean the eight cities can handle a total of 78,550 fans. Dallas has increased its capacity the most, putting in about 4,500 more seats.

The 154-game schedule will cover a period of 151 days opening April 13 and closing Sept. 11. Opening games will be Dallas at Oklahoma City, Fort Worth at Tulsa, Houston at San Antonio and Beaumont at Shreveport. They change these stands April 15. Holiday double-headers will be played July 4 and Labor Day, with Dallas at Oklahoma City, Fort Work at Tulsa, Shreveport at San Antonio and Beaumont at Houston for the former and a reversal for the latter.

WHITE SOX GET BEVENS ON CONDITIONAL TERMS

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Baseball's busiest rebuilders, the Chicago White Sox, today had salvaged Floyd (Bill) Bevens, loser of a one-hitter in the 1947 World Series, from the New York Yankees.

He comes to the Sox's mound staff conditionally, and can be returned if his sore shoulder does not work into shape. The 31-year-old right-hander twirled 8 2-3 hitless innings against Brooklyn in the 1947 series only to lose, 2 to 1, when Cookie Lavagetto doubled in two runs.

Late in 1947 he strained a right leg ligament officiating a basketball game. This and his shoulder trouble left him useless to the Yanks last season. During 1948 he pitched some semi-pro ball and appeared in only eight innings for Newark of the International League in mid-season.

CONZELMAN TO LEAVE PRO GRID CARDINALS

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—(AP)—A St. Louis advertising firm has pulled the biggest coup of the season on the high-bidding pro football market by luring Jimmy Conzelman out of his Chicago coaching job and into the business world.

Conzelman, 49, said in his letter of resignation that he decided to get out of football and settle down to a more normal family life. He will be an account executive for the D'Arcy Advertising Company.

Jimmy's Cardinal contract, signed in 1948, had one more year to go.

Jerome Davies of the Chicago Cards made the longest punt return of the National Football League 1948 season when he lugged one back 70 yards to a touchdown against New York.

Mackenzie's Column

By DeWitt Mackenzie

(Associated Press Foreign Affairs Analyst)

Selection of a United States secretary of state in these dark and dangerous days of communism's global revolution is a momentous decision.

He must be a man of international vision and vast common sense. Wars and peace-treaties more often than not start in foreign offices.

For this reason President Truman's appointment of Dean Acheson as secretary of state is of supreme importance not only to America but to the world at large. The chancelleries of the major nations have been awaiting Mr. Truman's choice anxiously ever since it became apparent that General George Marshall would retire as secretary because of ill health.

Prior to the appointment there had been much diplomatic speculation whether it would involve any change in Uncle Sam's cold war strategy. The answer to that is in the negative.

President Truman has declared that America's policy in this respect will not be changed by his selection. Moreover, Acheson's deeds confirm this estimate.

During his long service as assistant secretary and undersecretary of state, Acheson had a big hand in framing America's policy for holding the Bolshevist aggression in check. He helped develop the "Truman doctrine" for helping free nations (like Greece and Turkey) resist the Red aggression. He also drafted the Marshall plan for European rehabilitation.

In announcing Acheson's appointment, President Truman took occasion to declare there is no foundation to reports that he wanted to soften America's "tough" policy in dealing with Moscow. This statement was in answer to a published story to the effect that he was engaged in a fight within his cabinet to soften American policy towards Russia.

The article in question was by Jay Franklin and was published in Life magazine. The president said it is without foundation in fact in nearly every instance and paragraph. Franklin is a newspaper columnist and was among writers who helped prepare Mr. Truman's campaign speeches last fall.

Thus the president has given double assurances regarding the steadfastness of America's policy towards Russia. He not only has reaffirmed the policy by word of mouth but has put his seal on it by appointing as secretary a man who had much to do with developing it.

First foreign reaction to Acheson's appointment came from London. High government officials privately expressed enthusiasm, although they were sorry to see Marshall retiring after "his fine and outstanding work for the good of humanity." Western Europe generally welcomed the appointment.

One would expect that to represent the consensus among anti-Communist nations. In this connection it is interesting to note that Acheson is perhaps the American best known personally in the chancellories of some 44 countries. He acquired this status through his leadership of the American delegation to the United Nations relief and rehabilitation administration conferences of 1943 and 1944.

The 55-year-old lawyer already had made his fortune when he became President Roosevelt's first undersecretary of the treasury in 1933. This service was followed by a variety of other government positions.

The wiry, six-foot-one secretary looks capable and talks a shirt-sleeve language that most folks have no difficulty in understanding—for example: "If totalitarian aggression * * * is to be kept out of the United States, it must be kept out of this hemisphere."

Meador And Thompson Each Score 20 Points To Lead Tiger Triumph

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Forwards Bob Meador and Dick Thompson led the Louisiana State basketball team to a 65 to 59 Southeastern Conference victory over Georgia Tech here tonight.

The L. S. U. Tigers raced out in front early in the game and had a 33-33 margin at halftime.

Center Graves Holloway repeatedly fed the ball to Meador and Thompson, who maintained the scoring pace in the last half.

The Tigers had enough edge to outlast Tech's closing sprint led by Guard Colin Anderson, whose nine points pushed the visitors within striking distance.

Meador and Thompson each had 20 points while Forward Mel Dold led Tech with 19.

IN MOVIELAND

By Bob Thomas

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Hello, out there! Anybody want to read my memoirs?

People ask Hal Boyle to write about himself, but nobody ever asks me. This would be a good day for it, since it marks the beginning of my fifth year on the Hollywood beat. But nobody asked me.

I had hoped that someone would write in and ask, "Do you get tired interviewing movie stars?" I would answer yes, I do. Any work, even wine sipping, can get tiresome. Interview "can get scarce and stars can get dull. But the movies are a fascinating business, and something always turns up.

If anybody asked me, I could tell them that interviewing Bing Crosby is like pulling teeth and interviewing June Allyson is like two weeks' vacation with pay.

I could also regale whoever might listen with tales of my experiences. How I got bawled out by George Jessel for calling him and Eddie Cantor "hams." How Director Eddie Buzzell tossed me out of an M.-G.-M. pool just as Esther Williams was giving me a swimming lesson.

How I got the brush-off from Hedy Lamarr who told me through a flunky that she was too tired to talk any more. How I got whipped 6-0, 6-0 in a tennis match with Jinx Falkenburg. How I did a story on a champagne tour of the night clubs with Maria Montez. And kissed June Haver just to report what it was like.

I could report on how well I know the stars, except that Gary Cooper and Irene Dunne sometimes call me Danny, which is not my name. And others can meet anybody a dozen times and think each time is the first.

Wouldn't you suppose that somebody would be interested in the fact that I discovered Robert Mitchum when he did a bit in "30 Seconds Over Tokyo"? (Look at him now!) Or that I knew Peter Lawford when he rode a motor scooter instead of a Cadillac?

You'd think that Constant Reader of Pismo Beach would have written in to ask if I think Hollywood is an especially wicked place. (I don't.) Or if I think movies are going to get any better. (I do.) Or if I am happy in my work. (I am.)

All this information could have been yours for the asking. Hello, out there!

BELIEVE AGE-CLOCK FOUND IS CHEMICAL

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Discovery of a mysterious chemical called X, which seems to time how fast you grow old, was described to the Terontological Society here today.

X is something that parents transmit to their offspring. It is set, like a clock, either for a long or short life.

The report was by Dr. A. I. Lansing of the Washington University School of Medicine, St. Louis. The Gerontological Society is an organization of scientists and doctors who study old age. Their annual meeting was held today.

The age clock was found in rotifers, but a little human evidence was cited. Rotifers are microscopic water bugs, swimming with long lashes that make them look like whirling dervishes.

Wah Wah Jones, Kentucky basketball and football ace, caught more touchdown passes during the football season than any other Southeastern Conference player.

FUTURE OIL, GAS SUPPLY IS GOOD

Oilers Say New Year To Have Abundant Supply Of Petroleum

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—The petroleum industry goes into the year 1949 confident that it will be able to master the challenging demands for its products. In brief, there will be plenty of gas and oil for all during the next 12 months providing, of course, that the picture is not changed by any national emergency.

The magnitude of the industry's accomplishments in the year just ended undoubtedly will ease the burden during the coming year. But that does not mean there will be any coasting in 1949. No let up is contemplated in the industry's determination to further expand and develop its resources and facilities to care for all civilian and military needs in the coming year and the future.

The industry, as it did during the war years, shattered record after record in 1948, and closed out its books for that period secure in the knowledge that it had lived up to its proudest traditions of performance, and had done a job thoroughly satisfactory to itself and to its official observers.

It met and satisfied unprecedented demand while in the midst of its greatest construction and expansion program in history.

It achieved a degree of normalcy in 1948 for the first time since the prewar days of 1939-40, a feat that was accomplished at the staggering expenditure of approximately four billion dollars in the last two years alone. The industry's fight to pull itself up by its bootstraps was so succesful that by year's end, storage tanks were comfortably filled. This was achieved only through the utmost cooperation of all members of the petroleum industry.

The industry will continue its expanded public relations program in 1949 to keep the American public fully conscious of its operations and its achievements.

With production, transportation and refining capacities operating at all-time peaks, and the number of new wells and new discoveries continuing at record levels, the industry is confident that the pressure of demand in 1949, which is expected to be six per cent above 1948, can be met easily.

During the year 1949 the close relationship of the petroleum industry to steel as well as to agriculture and transportation will be further emphasized. The steel industry already realizes keenly that the more steel it provides for petroleum consuming devices, the more steel it must provide for petroleum supply equipment.

This is shown in the fact that a 3,000 pound automobile may require the use of an equal quantity of steel by the petroleum industry to assure that car of sufficient lubricants and fuel during its useful life. A 100 pound oil burner may need the use of 30 times its weight in steel to assure it a continual supply of fuel. Thus the steel industry can expect a multiplied demand for steel so long as people continue to buy more oil-consuming devices.

Further progress in the technology of petroleum is expected to result in 1949. The industry currently is employing thousands of persons and spending millions of dollars on this phase alone, to improve known products and to develop and create new ones to make man's life easier and more comfortable.

Competition for consumer preference is expected to heighten during the next 12 months because the supply and demand factors have been equalled.

Many new records, even in the face of the unprecedented totals of 1948, are expected to be marked up in the new year.

Here, in brief, is a thumbnail sketch of the oil picture:

Production: To meet the anticipated increase of six per cent in demand, the industry will continue its vast exploration and development program. Drilling wells to make possible a production of roughly 6,000,000 barrels a day allows no time for coasting or resting. The drilling of nearly 39,000 new wells in 1948, some over 15,000 feet deep, probably will be exceeded in 1949, if the necessary steel and equipment become available.

Transportation: There can be no let up in this department either, because new oil fields require new transportation. As steel pipeline becomes available, many of the long-planned crude oil and natural gas lines, some 30 inches in diameter, will be begun and rushed to completion. The great tanker building program will go forward in 1949 and the year may witness the completion of a 40,000-ton supertanker the size of a battleship and with a capacity of 300,000 barrels of oil. More petroleum products will also mean more tank car and more tank truck construction to move these products from terminals to consumers.

Refining: Refineries throughout the United States will have to operate throughout the year at 97 per cent of their January, 1949, capacity if the expected demand for refined products is to be met. This will not be easy, and will be accomplished only by the early completion and operation of some of the new refining units now under construction. The refining capacity may reach 6,500,000 barrels daily by December as the new units go on stream.

Marketing: The distribution of petroleum products will reach new levels in 1949. Countless new oil-consuming devices, ranging from the largest diesel locomotives to the small garden tractor, are being delivered daily, and each of these will require more distribution equipment, more investment, more labor and more fuel to operate them. The continued production of farm crops at high levels with mechanized equipment makes the petroleum industry even more essential in the production of food.

LITTLE THEATRE CURTAIN CALL

Today at 2:30 p. m. in the reading room of the Red Cross building, 200 South Grand street, Little Theatre members, their friends and associates will gather for the first reading of Noel Coward's outstanding hit of the war years, "Blithe Spirit." Under the direction of Helen Fernandez Allen, this third play of the season promises to be a happy deviation from the usual bill of fare.

The inspiration for "Blithe Spirit" came when Coward, returning from war work in various parts of the world, was deeply moved to find his people bravely gay in the face of awful months of a battering blitzkrieg and repeated threats of an invasion. Recognizing their gallantry as more than just a brave face, he decided to write a farce, improbable to a degree, utterly fantastic and wholly without so much as a smidge of reference to any serious problem. With "Blithe Spirit", Coward succeeded in setting Londoners laughing merrily.

There are five women and two men to be cast in the play, the two most unusual characterizations being those of the etheral lady ghost Elvira, first wife of Charles Condomines and Mms. Arcati, the striking and volubly chipper spiritualist. Others are Ruth, the second wife, also in a leading role, Dr. and Mrs. Bradman and the maid. Let's all be on hand to help Helen in choosing an inspiring cast for this entertaining comedy of the supernatural.

INTIMATE NOTES

Rev. Edward F. Hayward, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, who has been active in Little Theatre and one of the presidents when the organization was struggling to gain recognition, has resigned as pastor of the church he has served for many years, because of ill health. Not too many fine things can be said in behalf of Rev. Hayward who has constantly had the interest of his community at heart. He is also a past president of Civic Music Association and the Rotary Club. . . . Sara Helen Griffin, popular director of "Front Page" and former speech and dramatic teacher of N. J. C., is in a serious condition at the St. Francis Sanitarium. No visitors are permitted at the present but her legion of friends and admires are wishing her a rapid recovery. . . . Also we learned today that academy award winner Elizabeth Whitfield, who is to direct the four plays of the season for Little Theatre, has been on the sick list since Christmas—best wishes Elizabeth. . . . James Gilmer who has been very active in Little Theatre, appearing in several productions, will complete his sophomore work at N. J. C. at the end of January. James is still undecided whether to continue his education immediately or work for awhile; either way it is bad loosing a worker like him. He was to have directed the N. J. C. student variety show, "Red Skins on Parade," this spring. He will be replaced by Mary Louise Guerriero.

LITTLE THEATRE SKETCH

IRENE SIMMS REID . . . attractive career woman and nationally recognized advertising executive, is a native of Richland parish who came to Monroe as a mere child and entered the newspaper business under C. E. Faulk, Sr., then owner of the News Star. She is a self made woman who has learned the ways of the business world first hand. Irene is a graduate of Perry Business School, (now an important chain in Florida) where she studied shorthand, typing, business English, bookkeeping and commercial law at night school.

Rising from a printer's devil, she operated a job press and linotype machine; she served in the mailroom, in circulation and the classified departments before reaching the pinnacle as advertising executive of the two Monroe papers, a unique achievement because of the fact she is the only woman in the United States holding a position of this nature.

Irene is a member of the National Advertising Association where she has served on several committees and appeared on their national programs in Chicago, New York and Philadelphia. She is secretary to the advertising division of the State Press Association, and has been guest speaker for several sectional groups in Oklahoma, Texas, Georgia, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana.

A much-traveled lady who has seen most of the United States, Canada and South America, Irene is still much attached to her home, which is one of the show places of Monroe and has been featured in "American Home," "Better Homes and Gardens," "Holland's Magazine" and Johns-Mansville National publication. Her talents are many, including an unusual flare for decorating.

She has been cooperative in assisting the merchants of the Twin Cities in their efforts to create business, and she is favorably recognized by the Chamber of Commerce for her sincere efforts in behalf of the progress of Monroe and West Monroe. She has assisted the Girl Scouts, did civilian defense work during World War II, has been associated with numerous charities, is past chairman of the Business and Professional Women's Club. She has been featured in the national publications, "Business Girl," "Business Reports Magazine;" 16 times in "Editor and Publisher" and in several promotional publications.

As if this were not enough, Irene has successfully founded a realty company that ranks high in Monroe businesses. Where or how she finds the energy is most baffling to the ordinary mind.

Along with her deceased husband, Stanley Reid, who was a past president of Little Theater, Irene has been interested in the organization for a number of years. She recalls how sincere was Stanley's belief and feeling for Little Theater, so it was no small wonder to see her come to the front and create the beautiful set for "Dear Ruth" this past November.

There is so much to tell about Irene that we are sorry we could not close without mentioning her "green-hand" or the ability to grow beautiful flowers—her hobbies have been golf and swimming, and she is a superb hostess.

also attacked by Jewish aircraft" and one Tempest is missing.

The air ministry said that until now its aircraft had had orders to avoid combat, but "in view of these unprovoked attacks our aircraft have now been instructed to regard as hostile any Jewish aircraft encountered over Egyptian territory."

The ministry said British aircraft had been making trips along the Egyptian side of the frontier for several days to learn the positions of Jewish troops. Britain has a 1936 treaty of defense with Egypt and is holding her air bases in the canal zone under that treaty. The zone, vital to empire communications, is only about 90 miles from the big Egyptian base of El Arish, 30 miles from the Palestine border.

The Jews have announced officially that they chased the Egyptians as far as El Arish a few days ago, but withdrew into Palestine. However, they have admitted that a few Jewish troops may still be on the Egyptian side where they are maintaining a half-ring around the coastal border town of Rafa.

TEL AVIV, Israel, Jan. 8—(AP)—The Jewish airforce and anti-aircraft shot down at least four British planes over the still sputtering Egyptian front, Israel announced today.

(The British said five planes were missing from missions Friday, and accused the Jews of shooting them down.

(A "strong protest" is being lodged with Israeli representatives at the United Nations, the foreign office said in London, and the air ministry said that as a result of the "unprovoked attack" orders had been given its pilots to regard all Israeli aircrafts encountered over Egyptian territory henceforth as hostile.

(At the same time, the British foreign office announced that British troops have been sent to guard the Trans-Jordan port of Aquaba on the Red Sea to back up her mutual defense pact with King Abdullah.

(The clash took place as other dispatches disclosed that Britain has instituted armed air patrols along the Trans-Jordan and Egyptian borders as a strong warning to Israel not to interfere with British interests in the middle east.)

An official Israeli spokesman said four of five planes shot down in the Rafa border region were British.

He said one of the pilots bailed out, was captured and proved to be an officer of the RAF. The burned body of another pilot was found in the ruins of an RAF Spitfire, he added. Fate of the other pilots was not known but they were presumed to be dead.

A fifth plane shot down in the area was Egyptian, the spokesman said.

The spokesman said two of the planes were shot down by Israel fighters yesterday morning before the 2 p. m. cease-fire went into effect with Egypt. The other two were shot down in the afternoon.

The encounters took place, the spokesman declared, after "enemy aircraft" had straffed Jewish forces.

The captured flier was identified as Flying Officer Timothy John Celhaw, 22, of the RAF's reconnaissance squadron no. 208. Celhaw was said to have given this account:

He and Flying Officers Cooper, Cook and Close were instructed to make an armed aerial reconnaissance of Israel and Egyptian positions along the border, from Rafa at the coast, to Auja, about 30 miles inland. The mission took off with a camera in the lead plane, and all guns loaded. He saw Cooper's plane shot down and he himself bailed out without firing his guns when his plane was hit from Israeli fighters.

Later, the spokesman said, a formation of 12 planes carrying wing bombs was seen northeast of Rafa (in Palestine territory) and was attacked by Israel fighters and anti-aircraft guns. One crashed in flames and another was claimed by Israeli pilots as shot down. It was in one of these planes that the charred body of the British pilot was found.

The government said it was communicating its version of the incident to the United Nations immediately.

Presumably the captured British flier will be released.

Rafa, in the area of the clash, is a disputed town. An Israeli spokesman said yesterday Rafa had been in Palestine territory until the end of the British mandate, when the British moved the border north to include it in Egypt.

Billy Jackson, who met with a serious auto accident, is now out on crutches. A friend came up to him on DeSiard street and informed: "It's bad to get hurt as you did, but to be dead is worse, that's PERMANENT!"

Speaking of accidents, Tobe Poole, Madison parish deer hunter, was accidentally shot recently by Arnold Garland, two bullets piercing his body. At the time it was feared that injuries might prove fatal. But to the surprise and delight of his friends he is reported to have already recovered and is now at his home in Mounds.

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—(AP)—An advancing stock market bogged down today in typically slow Saturday trading.

The general undertone of the market was steady. Price changes were small and pretty well divided between advances and declines. A faint downward tendency developed near the close.

The market scored the best gain of the week—and incidentally one of the best of the past year—on Thursday, the day after the president delivered his state of the union message. Demand carried over into Friday's trading, but today tapered away.

Volume today, it was added, was too small to indicate a decisive trend either way. Turnover was at the rate of around 400,000 shares for the two-hour session.

The bond market moved into higher price brackets in today's short session.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Heavy selling swept soybeans and lard down sharply on the board of trade today, causing weakness also in wheat, corn and oats.

Wheat closed 1 1/8 to 2 1/4 lower, May $2.22 7/8 to $2.23, corn was 1 1/8 to 1 7/8 lower, May $1.46 1/8 to 1/4, oats were 7/8 to 1 cent lower, May .76 3/4, rye was 2 3/4 lower, May $1.67 1/4, soybeans were 6 to 6 3/4 lower, March $2.48 3/4 to $2.49, and lard was 35 to 45 cents a hundred pounds lower, January $15.50.

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Stocks, steady, price changes narrow. Bonds, edge upward, rails lead. Cotton, weak, late selling.

CHICAGO: Wheat: Weak; decline in sympathy with fats and oils. Corn: Weak; down with soybeans. Oats: Weak with other commodities. Hogs: Nominally steady. Cattle: Nominally steady.

COTTON

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Cotton futures advanced in the early trading here today, but reacted downward later under week-end long liquidation and hedge selling.

Closing prices were barely steady, 45 cents to 85 cents a bale lower.

Some of the selling was attributed to easiness in other markets. The early demand resulted from price fixing against recent export sales, and from short covering.

Spot cotton declined 25 cents a bale, with middling 15/16-inch quoted at 32.05 cents a pound. Local sales amounted to 4,728 bales.

AVERAGE COTTON PRICE

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 8.—(AP)—The average price of middling 15/16 inch cotton today at ten designated southern spot markets was 45 cents a bale lower at 32.22 cents a pound; average for the past 30 market days 32.19; middling 7/8 inch average 30.24.

New York

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—(AP)—General selling was attracted to cotton futures in closing minutes of dealings today and drove prices sharply lower. Most of the pressure was attributed to weakness in grains and markets for fats and oils.

The market encountered very little opposition on the decline as there was a noticeable subsiding in trade buying which bolstered prices during most of the session. Deferred contracts were the weakest.

Futures closed 35 cents to $1.20 a bale lower than the previous close.

GOOD-YIELDING PRODUCER UNEARTHED IN CONCORDIA

Drillers Find One Other Well In Tullos-Urania Field Of LaSalle Parish; Give Up Another Well And Site One Location

A 108-barrel producer was brought in last week in Concordia parish, according to the conservation department's weekly report revealed here yesterday.

The new well, the Carter Oil Company's C. M. Rodes No .8 in 29-9-10E of the Lake St. John field, was brought in under a 1/4 inch choke with a yield of 108 barrels.

The only other well brought in during the past week's operations, was identified in the conservation report as the Arkansas Fuel Oil Co.-Tremont Lumber Company's No. C-35 in 2-9-1E of the Tullos Urania field in LaSalle parish. Output of the new well, reached at 1,506 feet, was set by drillers at 48 barrels.

The T. L. James Company's Ida Mae Wade No. 2 in 1-22-1W of a wild cat strike in Union parish, was abandoned at 6,612 feet.

Oilers sited only one new location for the week: The C. M. Bagley Company's Haynie No. 1 in 21-23-1W of a wild cat field in Union parish.

CRUDE OIL OUTPUT DECLINES IN WEEK

Louisiana, Colorado, Florida Set New Records For Year; Mississippi Also Gains

TULSA, Okla., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Although three states hit their highest 1948 production, the nation's over-all output of crude oil during the week ended January 1 fell off an average of 31,500 barrels daily, the Oil and Gas Journal reported.

The total average daily output was 5,608,275 barrels.

The Journal listed Florida, Louisiana and Colorado as setting new records for the year.

Florida's production was up 475 barrels to 1,325 barrels, Louisiana's gained 1,525 barrels to 496,825 and Colorado's, exclusive of 160 barrels of Utah production, rose by 565 and 63,145.

Other notable increases were in Michigan, up 2,600 barrels to 47,700; Indiana, 1,000 to 24,000; Mississippi, 1,900 to 124,900, and Wyoming, 2,600 to 158,130.

Arkansas was up 850 barrels to 82,600, Montana 10 to 25,800 and California 900 to 957,100.

TWO ORDERS AFFECT OPERATIONS IN ADA

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 8.—(AP)—Two orders affecting operations in Ada Oil Field, in Webster and Bienville parishes, were announced today by S. L. Digby, conservation commissioner.

Hope Producing Company was granted permission to effect dual completion of a well in the Davis and Pettit zones of the field, after a finding that the project was physically and economically feasible.

Special rules and regulations governing production of gas and condensate from the Pettit zone of the field were approved, similar to those adopted for the Davis zone.

FUTURE OIL, GAS SUPPLY IS GOOD

Oilers Say New Year To Have Abundant Supply Of Petroleum

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—The petroleum industry goes into the year 1949 confident that it will be able to master the challenging demands for its products. In brief, there will be plenty of gas and oil for all during the next 12 months providing, of course, that the picture is not changed by any national emergency.

The magnitude of the industry's accomplishments in the year just ended undoubtedly will ease the burden during the coming year. But that does not mean there will be any coasting in 1949. No let up is contemplated in the industry's determination to further expand and develop its resources and facilities to care for all civilian and military needs in the coming year and the future.

The industry, as it did during the war years, shattered record after record in 1948, and closed out its books for that period secure in the knowledge that it had lived up to its proudest traditions of performance, and had done a job thoroughly satisfactory to itself and to its official observers.

It met and satisfied unprecedented demand while in the midst of its greatest construction and expansion program in history.

It achieved a degree of normalcy in 1948 for the first time since the prewar days of 1939-40, a feat that was accomplished at the staggering expenditure of approximately four billion dollars in the last two years alone. The industry's fight to pull itself up by its bootstraps was so succesful that by year's end, storage tanks were comfortably filled. This was achieved only through the utmost cooperation of all members of the petroleum industry.

The industry will continue its expanded public relations program in 1949 to keep the American public fully conscious of its operations and its achievements.

With production, transportation and refining capacities operating at all-time peaks, and the number of new wells and new discoveries continuing at record levels, the industry is confident that the pressure of demand in 1949, which is expected to be six per cent above 1948, can be met easily.

During the year 1949 the close relationship of the petroleum industry to steel as well as to agriculture and transportation will be further emphasized. The steel industry already realizes keenly that the more steel it provides for petroleum consuming devices, the more steel it must provide for petroleum supply equipment.

This is shown in the fact that a 3,000 pound automobile may require the use of an equal quantity of steel by the petroleum industry to assure that car of sufficient lubricants and fuel during its useful life. A 100 pound oil burner may need the use of 30 times its weight in steel to assure it a continual supply of fuel. Thus the steel industry can expect a multiplied demand for steel so long as people continue to buy more oil-consuming devices.

Further progress in the technology of petroleum is expected to result in 1949. The industry currently is employing thousands of persons and spending millions of dollars on this phase alone, to improve known products and to develop and create new ones to make man's life easier and more comfortable.

Competition for consumer preference is expected to heighten during the next 12 months because the supply and demand factors have been equalled.

Many new records, even in the face of the unprecedented totals of 1948, are expected to be marked up in the new year.

Here, in brief, is a thumbnail sketch of the oil picture:

Production: To meet the anticipated increase of six per cent in demand, the industry will continue its vast exploration and development program. Drilling wells to make possible a production of roughly 6,000,000 barrels a day allows no time for coasting or resting. The drilling of nearly 39,000 new wells in 1948, some over 15,000 feet deep, probably will be exceeded in 1949, if the necessary steel and equipment become available.

Transportation: There can be no let up in this department either, because new oil fields require new transportation. As steel pipeline becomes available, many of the long-planned crude oil and natural gas lines, some 30 inches in diameter, will be begun and rushed to completion. The great tanker building program will go forward in 1949 and the year may witness the completion of a 40,000-ton supertanker the size of a battleship and with a capacity of 300,000 barrels of oil. More petroleum products will also mean more tank car and more tank truck construction to move these products from terminals to consumers.

Refining: Refineries throughout the United States will have to operate throughout the year at 97 per cent of their January, 1949, capacity if the expected demand for refined products is to be met. This will not be easy, and will be accomplished only by the early completion and operation of some of the new refining units now under construction. The refining capacity may reach 6,500,000 barrels daily by December as the new units go on stream.

Marketing: The distribution of petroleum products will reach new levels in 1949. Countless new oil-consuming devices, ranging from the largest diesel locomotives to the small garden tractor, are being delivered daily, and each of these will require more distribution equipment, more investment, more labor and more fuel to operate them. The continued production of farm crops at high levels with mechanized equipment makes the petroleum industry even more essential in the production of food.

LITTLE THEATRE CURTAIN CALL

Today at 2:30 p. m. in the reading room of the Red Cross building, 200 South Grand street, Little Theatre members, their friends and associates will gather for the first reading of Noel Coward's outstanding hit of the war years, "Blithe Spirit." Under the direction of Helen Fernandez Allen, this third play of the season promises to be a happy deviation from the usual bill of fare.

The inspiration for "Blithe Spirit" came when Coward, returning from war work in various parts of the world, was deeply moved to find his people bravely gay in the face of awful months of a battering blitzkrieg and repeated threats of an invasion. Recognizing their gallantry as more than just a brave face, he decided to write a farce, improbable to a degree, utterly fantastic and wholly without so much as a smidge of reference to any serious problem. With "Blithe Spirit", Coward succeeded in setting Londoners laughing merrily.

There are five women and two men to be cast in the play, the two most unusual characterizations being those of the etheral lady ghost Elvira, first wife of Charles Condomines and Mms. Arcati, the striking and volubly chipper spiritualist. Others are Ruth, the second wife, also in a leading role, Dr. and Mrs. Bradman and the maid. Let's all be on hand to help Helen in choosing an inspiring cast for this entertaining comedy of the supernatural.

INTIMATE NOTES

Rev. Edward F. Hayward, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, who has been active in Little Theatre and one of the presidents when the organization was struggling to gain recognition, has resigned as pastor of the church he has served for many years, because of ill health. Not too many fine things can be said in behalf of Rev. Hayward who has constantly had the interest of his community at heart. He is also a past president of Civic Music Association and the Rotary Club. . . . Sara Helen Griffin, popular director of "Front Page" and former speech and dramatic teacher of N. J. C., is in a serious condition at the St. Francis Sanitarium. No visitors are permitted at the present but her legion of friends and admires are wishing her a rapid recovery. . . . Also we learned today that academy award winner Elizabeth Whitfield, who is to direct the four plays of the season for Litttle Theatre, has been on the sick list since Christmas—best wishes Elizabeth. . . . James Gilmer who has been very active in Little Theatre, appearing in several productions, will complete his sophomore work at N. J. C. at the end of January. James is still undecided whether to continue his education immediately or work for awhile; either way it is bad loosing a worker like him. He was to have directed the N. J. C. student variety show, "Red Skins on Parade," this spring. He will be replaced by Mary Louise Guerriero.

LITTLE THEATRE SKETCH

IRENE SIMMS REID . . . attractive career woman and nationally recognized advertising executive, is a native of Richland parish who came to Monroe as a mere child and entered the newspaper business under C. E. Faulk, Sr., then owner of the News Star. She is a self made woman who has learned the ways of the business world first hand. Irene is a graduate of Perry Business School, (now an important chain in Florida) where she studied shorthand, typing, business English, bookkeeping and commercial law at night school.

Rising from a printer's devil, she operated a job press and linotype machine; she served in the mailroom, in circulation and the classified departments before reaching the pinnacle as advertising executive of the two Monroe papers, a unique achievement because of the fact she is the only woman in the United States holding a position of this nature.

Irene is a member of the National Advertising Association where she has served on several committees and appeared on their national programs in Chicago, New York and Philadelphia. She is secretary to the advertising division of the State Press Association, and has been guest speaker for several sectional groups in Oklahoma, Texas, Georgia, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana.

A much-traveled lady who has seen most of the United States, Canada and South America, Irene is still much attached to her home, which is one of the show places of Monroe and has been featured in "American Home," "Better Homes and Gardens," "Holland's Magazine" and Johns-Mansville National publication. Her talents are many, including an unusual flare for decorating.

She has been cooperative in assisting the merchants of the Twin Cities in their efforts to create business, and she is favorably recognized by the Chamber of Commerce for her sincere efforts in behalf of the progress of Monroe and West Monroe. She has assisted the Girl Scouts, did civilian defense work during World War II, has been associated with numerous charities, is past chairman of the Business and Professional Women's Club. She has been featured in the national publications, "Business Girl," "Business Reports Magazine;" 16 times in "Editor and Publisher" and in several promotional publications.

As if this were not enough, Irene has successfully founded a realty company that ranks high in Monroe businesses. Where or how she finds the energy is most baffling to the ordinary mind.

Along with her deceased husband, Stanley Reid, who was a past president of Little Theater, Irene has been interested in the organization for a number of years. She recalls how sincere was Stanley's belief and feeling for Little Theater, so it was no small wonder to see her come to the front and create the beautiful set for "Dear Ruth" this past November.

There is so much to tell about Irene that we are sorry we could not close without mentioning her "green-hand" or the ability to grow beautiful flowers—her hobbies have been golf and swimming, and she is a superb hostess.

also attacked by Jewish aircraft" and one Tempest is missing.

The air ministry said that until now its aircraft had had orders to avoid combat, but "in view of these unprovoked attacks our aircraft have now been instructed to regard as hostile any Jewish aircraft encountered over Egyptian territory."

The ministry said British aircraft had been making trips along the Egyptian side of the frontier for several days to learn the positions of Jewish troops. Britain has a 1936 treaty of defense with Egypt and is holding her air bases in the canal zone under that treaty. The zone, vital to empire communications, is only about 90 miles from the big Egyptian base of El Arish, 30 miles from the Palestine border.

The Jews have announced officially that they chased the Egyptians as far as El Arish a few days ago, but withdrew into Palestine. However, they have admitted that a few Jewish troops may still be on the Egyptian side where they are maintaining a half-ring around the coastal border town of Rafa.

TEL AVIV, Israel, Jan. 8—(AP)—The Jewish airforce and anti-aircraft shot down at least four British planes over the still sputtering Egyptian front, Israel announced today.

(The British said five planes were missing from missions Friday, and accused the Jews of shooting them down.

(A "strong protest" is being lodged with Israeli representatives at the United Nations, the foreign office said in London, and the air ministry said that as a result of the "unprovoked attack" orders had been given its pilots to regard all Israeli aircrafts encountered over Egyptian territory henceforth as hostile.

(At the same time, the British foreign office announced that British troops have been sent to guard the Trans-Jordan port of Aquaba on the Red Sea to back up her mutual defense pact with King Abdullah.

(The clash took place as other dispatches disclosed that Britain has instituted armed air patrols along the Trans-Jordan and Egyptian borders as a strong warning to Israel not to interfere with British interests in the middle east.)

An official Israeli spokesman said four of five planes shot down in the Rafa border region were British.

He said one of the pilots bailed out, was captured and proved to be an officer of the RAF. The burned body of another pilot was found in the ruins of an RAF Spitfire, he added. Fate of the other pilots was not known but they were presumed to be dead.

A fifth plane shot down in the area was Egyptian, the spokesman said.

The spokesman said two of the planes were shot down by Israel fighters yesterday morning before the 2 p. m. cease-fire went into effect with Egypt. The other two were shot down in the afternoon.

The encounters took place, the spokesman declared, after "enemy aircraft" had straffed Jewish forces.

The captured flier was identified as Flying Officer Timothy John Celhaw, 22, of the RAF's reconnaissance squadron no. 208. Celhaw was said to have given this account:

He and Flying Officers Cooper, Cook and Close were instructed to make an armed aerial reconnaissance of Israel and Egyptian positions along the border, from Rafa at the coast, to Auja, about 30 miles inland. The mission took off with a camera in the lead plane, and all guns loaded. He saw Cooper's plane shot down and he himself bailed out without firing his guns when his plane was hit from Israeli fighters.

Later, the spokesman said, a formation of 12 planes carrying wing bombs was seen northeast of Rafa (in Palestine territory) and was attacked by Israel fighters and anti-aircraft guns. One crashed in flames and another was claimed by Israeli pilots as shot down. It was in one of these planes that the charred body of the British pilot was found.

The government said it was communicating its version of the incident to the United Nations immediately.

Presumably the captured British flier will be released.

Rafa, in the area of the clash, is a disputed town. An Israeli spokesman said yesterday Rafa had been in Palestine territory until the end of the British mandate, when the British moved the border north to include it in Egypt.

tioned casually in this column, came to Jes' Ramblin' in indignant mood. "Brownie (that's the nickname of the car) is quite indignant, and hides her head in shame ever since you put her age on the front page of the paper, saying she's a product of the early thirties. She demands an apology for what female wants her age blazed forth in cold type!"

Billy Jackson, who met with a serious auto accident, is now out on crutches. A friend came up to him on DeSiard street and informed: "It's bad to get hurt as you did, but to be dead is worse, that's PERMANENT!"

Speaking of accidents, Tobe Poole, Madison parish deer hunter, was accidentally shot recently by Arnold Garland, two bullets piercing his body. At the time it was feared that injuries might prove fatal. But to the surprise and delight of his friends he is reported to have already recovered and is now at his home in Mounds.

An anxious grandmother, Mrs. S. R. Lambert, Grayson Route 2, is desirous of finding her grandson, Johnny Ray Patton, who ran away from home and school last September 6 ar as far as she knows is still missing. His mother is dead and he lived with his stepmother when he disappeared. If anyone can aid with information his grandmother will be made quite happy.

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—(AP)—An advancing stock market bogged down today in typically slow Saturday trading.

The general undertone of the market was steady. Price changes were small and pretty well divided between advances and declines. A faint downward tendency developed near the close.

The market scored the best gain of the week—and incidentally one of the best of the past year—on Thursday, the day after the president delivered his state of the union message. Demand carried over into Friday's trading, but today tapered away.

Volume today, it was added, was too small to indicate a decisive trend either way. Turnover was at the rate of around 400,000 shares for the two-hour session.

The bond market moved into higher price brackets in today's short session.

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Stocks, steady, price changes narrow. Bonds, edge upward, rails lead. Cotton, weak, late selling.

CHICAGO: Wheat: Weak; decline in sympathy with fats and oils. Corn: Weak; down with soybeans. Oats: Weak with other commodities. Hogs: Nominally steady. Cattle: Nominally steady.

COTTON

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Cotton futures advanced in the early trading here today, but reacted downward later under week-end long liquidation and hedge selling.

Closing prices were barely steady, 45 cents to 85 cents a bale lower.

Some of the selling was attributed to easiness in other markets. The early demand resulted from price fixing against recent export sales, and from short covering.

Spot cotton declined 25 cents a bale, with middling 15/16-inch quoted at 32.05 cents a pound. Local sales amounted to 4,728 bales.

SPOT COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Spot cotton closed steady, 25 cents a bale lower. Sales 4,728. Low middling 26.30. Middling 32.05. Good middling 32.35. Receipts and stocks unposted.

AVERAGE COTTON PRICE

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 8.—(AP)—The average price of middling 15/16 inch cotton today at ten designated southern spot markets was 45 cents a bale lower at 32.22 cents a pound; average for the past 30 market days 32.19; middling 7/8 inch average 30.24.

New York

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—(AP)—General selling was attracted to cotton futures in closing minutes of dealings today and drove prices sharply lower. Most of the pressure was attributed to weakness in grains and markets for fats and oils.

The market encountered very little opposition on the decline as there was a noticeable subsiding in trade buying which bolstered prices during most of the session. Deferred contracts were the weakest.

Futures closed 35 cents to $1.20 a bale lower than the previous close.

MEN IN SERVICE

HEADQUARTERS, YOKOTA AFB, Japan—Announcement of the promotion of Lee R. Pouncey, son of George E. Pouncey, Downsville, La., to the grade of sergeant, was made recently by Colonel James R. Gunn, Jr., commanding officer of Yokota air force base, Japan, where Sergeant Pouncey is currently stationed for duty with the Fifth air force, the occupation air arm of Japan, as a clerk in the base publications office.

A graduate of Downsville High School, Downsville, La., class of '16, Sergeant Pouncey entered the air force on August 29, 1946 at Barksdale air force base, and following completion of basic training remained on duty in the United States until alerted for movement to the far east air forces in Japan.

Arriving in Japan during August 1947, Sergeant Pouncey was assigned to the Fifth air force and subsequently reported for duty to the 3rd supply squadron at Yokota air force base, most prominent of the far east aerial installations located approximately 30 miles northwest of the Tokyo-Yokohama area.

Lawrence Earl Thompson, radioman, first class, U. S. N., of route 2, West Monroe, La., is serving aboard the landing ship U. S. S. LSM 446 with the Atlantic fleet.

Thompson, who entered the naval service in July, 1942, received his recruit training at the naval training center, San Diego, Calif.

Before entering the navy he attended Okaloosa High School.

ARTHRITIS

In a 48 page booklet, a committee of 12 of the nation's leading doctors have issued a complete report of years of research on rheumatism and arthritis.

From their findings a formula called Ru-Tel was then tested by physicians and clinics and has achieved remarkable results in relieving the pains of rheumatism, arthritis, backache and neuritis. Ru-Tel Tablets are pleasant to take, do not upset the stomach—give quick soothing relief, sometimes overnight. Now Ru-Tel Tablets are available through all druggists. First bottle must help or your money refunded.

OLD MOVES BACK INTO OWN

Modern square dancers are "whooping it up" at their weekly get together at the Monroe Recreation Center. The dance, still in its reviving stage, promises to bring back a touch of old-style recreation to a modern generation which, from all appearances, is going to welcome it with open hearts. SQUARE DANCE REVIVAL GETS UNDER WAY OVER TWIN CITIES

'Hep' Cats Swing Each Other To Words Of Caller Like Days Of Elders

By Percy Fant
(Of The Morning World Staff)

If you're in for a different type of recreation, something that has a new twist for fun, but yet is as old as the nation itself, then join the party, get in the groove, swing your partner in one of Monroe's oldest-newest types of dancing—square dance.

Yes, the "given-up-for-dead" pastime of not too long ago is now in the process of being revived every Tuesday night at the Monroe Recreation Center. And, according to Jack Hesketh, head of the center, the dance stands an excellent chance of coming back to stay.

Began over a month ago for adult recreation, the square dance is fast bringing back an air of the past with fluttering skirts and jivy music such as "Nelly Bly" and "Downtown, Uptown."

Hesketh, who got his idea while attending a national recreation convention last year, said that such affairs are held weekly in Texas and usually have a turnout of several hundred.

The teaching of interested couples occupy most of the two and a half hours at the present. Mrs. Orrie Rust, who calls the dance and mingles with the couples, offering individual assistance, is in charge of giving the lessons.

Hesketh, very much interested in the weekly meetings, predicts that before the year is gone, square dancing will be very much a part of the city's recreation. An average of 20 couples already are getting "hep" to the idea and an increase in attendance is expected.

Newcomers to the Tuesday night jamborees are asked to dress accordingly, with the women donning themselves in brightly colored skirts containing some ten yards of cloth. The gentlemen are asked to wear plaid shirts with colors to match their lady's skirts.

Hesketh pointed out that the colors, the music, costumes and caller makes the dance a success, and although the students are being taught now by phonograph records, a band is slated for the future with a man acting as "caller."

Young couples are particularly urged to attend the lessons so they won't be missing anything, and believe it or not, so they won't get behind time.

Friends may come together as it requires four couples to a square, Hesketh said.

For a dime a person, you and your friends may learn to enjoy a recreation which, although far different from the modern steps, can afford you a lot of fun and a taste of what your parents and grandparents engaged in before the days of movies and jazz.

PRESBYTERIAN MEN TO DINE IN CHURCH

Men of the Presbyterian Church will have the monthly meeting in the social rooms of the church at 6:30 p. m. on Wednesday night. Fred Meyers, class president, invites all members. The speaker will be the well known Dr. E. K. Means.

The refreshments will be in charge of a committee composed of Mark Stroud, Wallace Ezzell and A. E. Whiting and a highly enjoyable evening is anticipated.

FIRE ALARMS

Firemen from company 5 extinguished a grass fire at 3906 DeSiard street, at 11:25 a. m. Saturday and reported no damage was caused by the blaze.

WELCOME SLATED FOR COWBOY STAR

Gene Autry And Troupe Will Appear For One Day In City Next Wednesday

Monroe's welcome mat will be put out early Wednesday morning when the nation's favorite western cowboy, Gene Autry, comes to town.

Before leaving Monroe, Gene will have been deputized as a special deputy sheriff, made an honorary citizen of Monroe, been guest at an Exchange Club luncheon, appeared on local radio programs, and put on two shows.

Autry, who with his big cast of screen and radio performers, and his two horses, "Champion" and "Little Champ", will be featured in person in a western musical and variety show at Neville High School Auditorium, is one of the most active and hard working screen actors in the business.

Now on his second annual tour of the country with his present show, Gene has taken time out of an unusually heavy production schedule of six major films a year, as well as his 52-weeks sponsored radio broadcast to bring to his fans and friends in 60 important cities a top-flight Hollywood-designed "western" show.

When not on tour or making pictures or broadcasting, the popular cowboy star fills his "spare" hours with such diversified pursuits as making phonograph records; starring in the World's Championship Rodeo, particularly the big event at New York's Madison Square Garden; keeping track of his holding interest in five radio stations; an Arizona newspaper; a flying field and school; an airplane crop dusting service; a western merchandise emporium; and a string of five Texas movie theaters. He still manages to find time to visit hospitals and orphanages, and supervise the welfare of two working cattle ranches.

Aiding Autry in the presentation of his variety show is a cast including Johnny Bond and Pat Buttram, comedians; The Cass County Boys, cowboy trio; The Pinafores, singing sisters act; Carl Cotner, cowboy fiddler; Frankie Marvin, electric guitarist; Rufe Davis, internationally known hillbilly comic; Ginny Jackson, radio singer; Jack and Bobbie Knapp, trick ropers; and The Dewey Sisters, acrobatic dancers.

A children's matinee will take place at 4 p. m. and an evening performance at 8:30.

Aviators have reported swifts circling about planes which were flying at speeds up to 85 miles an hour.

FEDERAL JUDGE STILL GOING STRONG AT 91

SALT LAKE CITY, Jan. 8—(AP)—U. S. District Judge Tillman D. Johnson turned 91 today—reaching a longtime goal of becoming the oldest federal judge in history.

The spry jurist passed the record of the late Oliver Wendell Holmes, who retired from the U. S. supreme court in 1932, at the age of 90. On his birthday last year Judge Johnson said "I'm aiming to beat him (Holmes)."

Saying he's "too old to be a prophet," the judge remarked:

"We oldsters are always inclined to criticize the young generation and the luxuries of modern-day lift. But I'm going to be different. I was a member of the younger generation once myself—a long time ago. And as for luxuries, I like them!"

Judge Johnson was born in Rutherford county, Tennessee. A graduate of Cumberland University, he was principal of Indian reservation schools at Bennett, S. D., and Fort Hall, Idaho, in the 80s.

He was appointed to the federal bench in 1915 by Woodrow Wilson.

He walks to work each day and has handled more than 16,000 cases in 33 years.

Retirement? He hasn't given as much as a hint.

MEN IN SERVICE

HEADQUARTERS, YOKOTA AFB, Japan—Announcement of the promotion of Lee R. Pouncey, son of George E. Pouncey, Downsville, La., to the grade of sergeant, was made recently by Colonel James R. Gunn, Jr., commanding officer of Yokota air force base, Japan, where Sergeant Pouncey is currently stationed for duty with the Fifth air force, the occupation air arm of Japan, as a clerk in the base publications office.

A graduate of Downsville High School, Downsville, La., class of '46, Sergeant Pouncey entered the air force on August 29, 1946 at Barksdale air force base, and following completion of basic training remained on duty in the United States until alerted for movement to the far east air forces in Japan.

Arriving in Japan during August 1947, Sergeant Pouncey was assigned to the Fifth air force and subsequently reported for duty to the 3rd supply squadron at Yokota air force base, most prominent of the far east aerial installations located approximately 30 miles northwest of the Tokyo-Yokohama area.

Lawrence Earl Thompson, radioman, first class, U. S. N., of route 2, West Monroe, La., is serving aboard the landing ship U. S. S. LSM 446 with the Atlantic fleet.

Thompson, who entered the naval service in July, 1942, received his recruit training at the naval training center, San Diego, Calif.

Before entering the navy he attended Okaloosa High School.

ARTHRITIS

In a 48 page booklet, a committee of 12 of the nation's leading doctors have issued a complete report of years of research on rheumatism and arthritis.

Ru-Tel Tablets are pleasant to take, do not upset the stomach—give quick soothing relief, sometimes overnight. Now Ru-Tel Tablets are available through all druggists. Brunson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie McWilliam Brunson of Charleston, Miss. Rev. L. T. Hastings officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Smilax and tall white tapers, with baskets of white gladioli and stock, formed a background for the wedding party. Soft wedding music was played by Mrs. Dorothy Zeagler and Mr. Irving Zeidman sang Grieg's "I Love Thee" and "O Perfect Love" by Burleigh.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory slipper satin dress, of classic design. The yoke of illusion was outlined with imported Cluny lace, which had belonged to her great-grandmother. The long circular train was a continuation of the three soft folds across the front of the skirt. Her lace edged veil was held in place by a tiara of pearls and orange blossoms. She carried a white prayer book surmounted by a white orchid and white streamers tied with stephanotis.

Miss Marguerite Colvert, maid of honor, wore ashes of roses slipper satin with off shoulder neckline fashioned in deep scallops. The panelled skirt featured fullness at the sides. She wore matching gauntlets and halo headdress and carried a shirred muff with spray of orchids. The bridesmaids were Miss Pat Harbuck and Miss Dorothy Bynum, who wore dresses, gauntlets and muffs identical with those of the maid of honor. Master Matt Rice carried the rings on a white satin pillow.

Mr. James May of Jackson, Mississippi, cousin of the groom, served as best man. The groomsmen were Mr. Tom Watson and Mr. Leslie Winslow.

A reception followed in the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Spivey. Miss Nell Rainey, aunt of the bride, greeted the guests with Mrs. Spivey on arrival. Mrs. Brunson, mother of the bridegroom, stood with Mrs. Phelps and members of the wedding party in the receiving line.

The bride's table was covered with a lace cloth. Silver candelabra, supporting white tapers, flanked the tiered wedding cake, which was surrounded by white camellias from the gardens of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Sholars. Mrs. Clyde C. Colvert presided at the punch bowl. Miss Faye Todd and Mrs. Herschel McDaniel assisted in serving. Mrs. Jay W. Cummins served the wedding cake. Brunson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie McWilliam Brunson of Charleston, Miss. Rev. L. T. Hastings officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Smilax and tall white tapers, with baskets of white gladioli and stock, formed a background for the wedding party. Soft wedding music was played by Mrs. Dorothy Zeagler and Mr. Irving Zeidman sang Grieg's "I Love Thee" and "O Perfect Love" by Burleigh.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory slipper satin dress, of classic design. The yoke of illusion was outlined with imported Cluny lace, which had belonged to her great-grandmother. The long circular train was a continuation of the three soft folds across the front of the skirt. Her lace edged veil was held in place by a tiara of pearls and orange blossoms. She carried a white prayer book surmounted by a white orchid and white streamers tied with stephanotis.

Miss Marguerite Colvert, maid of honor, wore ashes of roses slipper satin with off shoulder neckline fashioned in deep scallops. The panelled skirt featured fullness at the sides. BETTY JEAN BENSON WEDS JAMES GREGORY SENTELL

An impressive wedding was that of Miss Betty Jean Benson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Benson, and Mr. James Gregory Sentell, son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Sentell, Jr., of Shreveport.

The ceremony took place Monday evening in the home of the bride's parents on the Millhaven Road, with the Reverend George Pearce, pastor of the Memorial Methodist Church, officiating. The event took place on the twenty-first wedding anniversary of the bride's parents.

The young couple stood under an improvised arch entwined with smilax and fern fronds, sprays of white gladioli caught with white tulle were placed at intervals around the arch. At either side stood baskets of white gladioli, and branched candelabra supported tall tapers to illuminate the scene. The lighting of the tapers by Mr. Garnet M. Anderson and Mr. Ed S. Harper, Jr., was an effective part of the ceremony.

Mrs. Scotty Daniel was the bride's only attendant, and wore a winter white suit with black accessories and a corsage of pink roses. Her hat of winter white was complimented with a graceful plume in a harmonizing shade.

Mr. Henry Hamilton, Jr., served the groom as best man.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a suit of copenhagen blue, with which she wore navy accessories.

She carried a white Bible surmounted by orchids and valley lillies and cascaded with white satin streamers caught with tuberoses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held before the couple departed for a wedding trip to Boston and New York.

The lace-covered bride's table was centered with an arrangement of white camellias and the tiered wedding cake embossed in lilies of the valley, was fringed with the same white flowers.

Mrs. Garnett M. Anderson presided at the punch bowl and Mrs. E. S. Harper, Jr., and Miss Betty Richardson, assisted in the serving courtesies.

The bride's mother wore a slate blue crepe frock with a corsage of orchids, while Mrs. Sentell, mother of the groom, wore green crepe with an orchid corsage.

The bride was graduated from Neville High School and was a member of Delta Beta Sigma and Lambda Sigma Chi sororities. Mr. Sentell was graduated from Byrd High School in Shreveport and attended Louisiana State University. The groom is established in business in West Monroe and they will reside at 205 South Fourth Street.

Out-of-town guests for the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. John M. Sentell, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Sentell, Mr. Bill Sentell, Miss Patti Sentell and Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Anderson, all of Shreveport.

Home Freezer Unit Can Be Most Helpful

There are many, many things we can put in our home freezer unit, according to Mrs. Mildred Swift. For instance, we can put baked products such as yeast bread and cakes in the freezer unit and they will keep satisfactorily for months when properly wrapped. You can slice most cakes smoothly while they are still frozen and they will thaw quickly after slicing. You can wrap the rest of the cake again and return it to the freezer. However, you must thaw bread before slicing. You can also freeze dough before baking. You can shape yeast dough into rolls, wrap them well and keep them in your freezer for two or three weeks. When you get ready to use them allow about four hours for time to thaw and rise before baking. You can freeze quick breads such as baking powder biscuits, muffins and corn bread before baking. The agent states you can save time and labor by doing this, because the time you use for preparing dough and dishwashing afterwards serves for more than one meal.

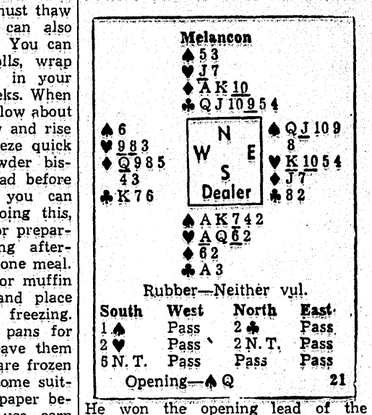

Prepare your corn bread or muffin batter in the usual way and place in greased baking pans for freezing. Place the biscuits on flat pans for freezing. You can either leave them on the pans on which they are frozen or you can stack them in some suitable container with waxed paper between them. You should use corn bread or muffin batter or biscuit dough within a week or two after placing them in the freezer. When you get ready to use quick bread dough, allow to thaw and begin to rise in a warm oven (about 300 F.). After about ten minutes in a warm oven, finish baking in a hot oven (425 degree 450 degree F.).

Double Squeeze Needs Good Timing

By William E. McKenney
(America's Card Authority)
(Written for NEA Service)

Today we introduce Ben Melancon, another of Columbus, Ohio's, good bridge players. Mr. Melancon owns and manages the Columbus Bridge Club, and is known as a quiet, modest player, but one never to be underrated.

In today's hand, Mr. Melancon executed a very unusual and interesting squeeze play to make his contract.

Rubber—Neither vul.

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	2 N.T.	Pass
5 N.T.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening—♠ Q 21

He won the opening lead of the queen of spades with dummy's ace, cashed the ace of clubs and led the small club, West winning with the king.

West could not return his partner's spade, so he led back the five of diamonds. Melancon won this trick with the king of diamonds, then led the small heart and finessed dummy's queen, which held. He next cashed the high spade, returned to his own hand with the ace of diamonds, and cashed the balance of the clubs.

The last three cards in each hand are underlined. When declarer led the last club, East had to discard either the jack of spades, which would establish dummy's seven of spades, or the ten of hearts, in which case both of dummy's hearts would be good, because West, too, was squeezed. He could not hold the nine and eight of hearts and the queen of diamonds.

This is a double squeeze and requires very nice timing.

BETTY JEAN BENSON WEDS JAMES GREGORY SENTELL

An impressive wedding was that of Miss Betty Jean Benson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Benson, and Mr. James Gregory Sentell, son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Sentell, Jr., of Shreveport.

The ceremony took place Monday evening in the home of the bride's parents on the Millhaven Road, with the Reverend George Pearce, pastor of the Memorial Methodist Church, officiating. The event took place on the twenty-first wedding anniversary of the bride's parents.

The young couple stood under an improvised arch entwined with smilax and fern fronds, sprays of white gladioli caught with white tulle were placed at intervals around the arch. At either side stood baskets of white gladioli, and branched candelabra supported tall tapers to illuminate the scene. The lighting of the tapers by Mr. Garnet M. Anderson and Mr. Ed S. Harper, Jr., was an effective part of the ceremony.

Mrs. Scotty Daniel was the bride's only attendant, and wore a winter white suit with black accessories and a corsage of pink roses. Her hat of winter white was complimented with a graceful plume in a harmonizing shade.

Mr. Henry Hamilton, Jr., served the groom as best man.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a suit of copenhagen blue, with which she wore navy accessories.

She carried a white Bible surmounted by orchids and valley lillies and cascaded with white satin streamers caught with tuberoses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held before the couple departed for a wedding trip to Boston and New York.

The lace-covered bride's table was centered with an arrangement of white camellias and the tiered wedding cake embossed in lilies of the valley, was fringed with the same white flowers.

Mrs. Garnett M. Anderson presided at the punch bowl and Mrs. E. S. Harper, Jr., and Miss Betty Richardson, assisted in the serving courtesies.

The bride's mother wore a slate blue crepe frock with a corsage of orchids, while Mrs. Sentell, mother of the groom, wore green crepe with an orchid corsage.

The bride was graduated from Neville High School and was a member of Delta Beta Sigma and Lambda Sigma Chi sororities. Mr. Sentell was graduated from Byrd High School in Shreveport and attended Louisiana State University. The groom is established in business in West Monroe and they will reside at 205 South Fourth Street.

Out-of-town guests for the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. John M. Sentell, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Sentell, Mr. Bill Sentell, Miss Patti Sentell and Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Anderson, all of Shreveport.

Grains and fruits presently may have to move over to make room for whey as starting material for fermented drinks. This byproduct of the dairy industry, now largely wasted, is the basis for beverages made by a newly patented process.

Home Freezer Unit Can Be Most Helpful

There are many, many things we can put in our home freezer unit, according to Mrs. Mildred Swift. For instance, we can put baked products such as yeast bread and cakes in the freezer unit and they will keep satisfactorily for months when properly wrapped. You can slice most cakes smoothly while they are still frozen and they will thaw quickly after slicing. You can wrap the rest of the cake again and return it to the freezer. However, you must thaw bread before slicing. You can also freeze dough before baking. You can shape yeast dough into rolls, wrap them well and keep them in your freezer for two or three weeks. When you get ready to use them allow about four hours for time to thaw and rise before baking. You can freeze quick breads such as baking powder biscuits, muffins and corn bread before baking. The agent states you can save time and labor by doing this, because the time you use for preparing dough and dishwashing afterwards serves for more than one meal.

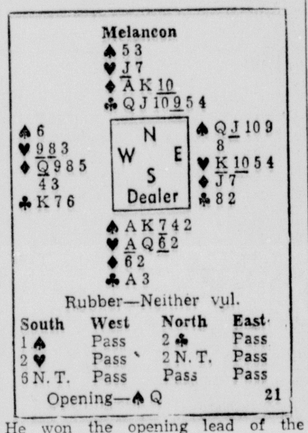

Prepare your corn bread or muffin batter in the usual way and place in greased baking pans for freezing. Place the biscuits on flat pans for freezing. You can either leave them on the pans on which they are frozen or you can stack them in some suitable container with waxed paper between them. You should use corn bread or muffin batter or biscuit dough within a week or two after placing them in the freezer. When you get ready to use quick bread dough, allow to thaw and begin to rise in a warm oven (about 300 F.). After about ten minutes in a warm oven, finish baking in a hot oven (425 degree 450 degree F.).

Double Squeeze Needs Good Timing

By William E. McKenney
(America's Card Authority)
(Written for NEA Service)

Today we introduce Ben Melancon, another of Columbus, Ohio's, good bridge players. Mr. Melancon owns and manages the Columbus Bridge Club, and is known as a quiet, modest player, but one never to be underrated.

In today's hand, Mr. Melancon executed a very unusual and interesting squeeze play to make his contract.

Rubber—Neither vul.

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	2 N.T.	Pass
6 N.T.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening—♠ Q 21

He won the opening lead of the queen of spades with dummy's ace, cashed the ace of clubs and led the small club, West winning with the king.

West could not return his partner's spade, so he led back the five of diamonds. Melancon won this trick with the king of diamonds, then led the small heart and finessed dummy's queen, which held. He next cashed the high spade, returned to his own hand with the ace of diamonds, and cashed the balance of the clubs.

The last three cards in each hand are underlined. When declarer led the last club, East had to discard either the jack of spades, which would establish dummy's seven of spades, or the ten of hearts, in which case both of dummy's hearts would be good, because West, too, was squeezed. He could not hold the nine and eight of hearts and the queen of diamonds.

This is a double squeeze and requires very nice timing.

HITCHHIKER ON HIGH PLANE

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is by Alma DeLuce, wife of Associated Press' Pulitzer prize-winning reporter, Dan DeLuce. DeLuce recently arrived in Berlin.)

By Alma DeLuce

(Associated Press News Features)

BERLIN—No skirts are allowed on the Allied airlift. I had to borrow overalls to hitchhike over the clouds to Berlin.

The sky was goupy. The big C-54 was roaring to go with ten tons of flour on the cargo deck. The airmen politely overlooked my frivolous Legroux hat, but they firmly outlawed my dress.

Anybody riding the airlift, they explained, has to be ready to buckle on a parachute harness, if necessary. That's why trousers are de rigeur.

I really hadn't expected to be a hitchhiker. But the fog was so thick in Frankfurt, the capital of the American zone in western Germany, that nothing flew for nearly three days. Commercial planes were still grounded when the Berlin blockade-busters began taking off again.

The woods around the Rhein-Main airport looked like a setting for The Snow Maiden. The C-54s were zooming off into the mist like street cars passing a downtown street corner. One every four or five minutes.

Changed into overalls, I climbed up an eight-foot ladder and into my ship. Flight Engineer L. E. Eichenlaub, of Mt. Vernon, Washington, took my hat-box and week end bag up past the dusty piles of flour sacks to the crew compartment.

Flour is heavier than a housewife would guess. The ten tons covered only a fraction of the cargo deck.

I sat on the lower bunk in what the crew call their bedroom, just behind the radio controls. It was strewn with parachutes and other gear.

"No seat belts here," said Engineer Eichenlaub, "just hold on."

Before I knew it, we were in the air. Dense fog streamed past the porthole window. Then sunshine came pouring in. We were up 500 feet and it was quite clear.

Lieutenant (junior grade) G. W. Kimmons was flying on a beam. He made it seem easy. He said he was a long way from home in Akron, O., and even farther from his last navy assignment—flying between Honolulu and Guam.

He and his co-pilot, Ensign W. A. Nomber, of Gary, Neb., and his engineer had come over together in a transferred Pacific squadron. They were the first navy crew to cross the Atlantic to join the airlift.

They had one night out in Paris, but mostly for two months they had been contending with Germany's cold and fog. Their squadron had 12 planes and had set a record of 40 flights to Berlin in 24 hours.

I asked if we were sure of being able to land at Tempelhof field in Berlin, because weather reports from there hadn't been too reassuring and we would arrive after dark. The young pilot grinned.

"They tell us that if the ceiling is less than 500 feet, the landing is done at a pilot's own discretion," he said. "My own limit is 400 feet. As far as I'm concerned, there are always three V. I. P.'s aboard—me, my co-pilot and my engineer. We're all very important persons. If it's less than 400, we'll go over to Fassberg in the British zone. That flour back there is worth only a minimum risk."

Over Fulda, I was given a chance to broadcast our identification and position signal to a ground station.

"It makes a nice change to hear a woman's voice on our communications system," Lieutenant Kimmons said.

"Of course, somebody may think it's just an imitation and kid you," cautioned Ensign Nomber.

I'd barely concluded the signal with "Roger!" when a baritone voice came through my earphones.

"Hey, Babe, when did you leave California?"

I thought this proved the system has remarkable clarity, at least for California accents.

The sun had set before we neared Berlin after 100 minutes in the air. Any other city might have danced with lights. But most of Berlin was dark. Airlift coal is precious here and electricity is skimped.

Tempelhof's GCA — ground control for approach—started directing us vocally. We circled according to instructions. A steady stream of precise information came over the radio—altitude, speed, time, headings and rate of descent.

Landing in misty darkness, even by GCA, impressed me as akin to driving blindfolded a heavy truck at top speed down a sheer mountain grade.

We rushed downward at two strings of white, yellow and red lights, marking the Tempelhof runway. I was standing up clinging tightly to a metal railing, and it was more exciting than a roller coaster dip.

Once GCA made a correction in our descent: "Level off! You're 60 feet too low."

The pilot pulled the nose up for just a moment. GCA okayed it. Then we plunged downward again.

We touched the runway without the slightest perceptible jar. The co-pilot strained at the brakes to shorten our run. We curved off to a side-strip in the wake of a yellow jeep marked "Follow me."

The engineer pushed open the rear door. An army truck swarming with German workmen plus a couple of military police backed up in a drizzling rain.

Another load of flour from Operation Vittles was through the Russian blockade.

HITCHHIKER ON HIGH PLANE

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is by Alma DeLuce, wife of Associated Press' Pulitzer prize-winning reporter, Dan DeLuce. DeLuce recently arrived in Berlin.)

By Alma DeLuce
(Associated Press News Features)

BERLIN—No skirts are allowed on the Allied airlift. I had to borrow overalls to hitchhike over the clouds to Berlin.

The sky was soupy. The big C-54 was roaring to go with ten tons of flour on the cargo deck. The airmen politely overlooked my frivolous Legroux hat, but they firmly outlawed my dress.

Anybody riding the airlift, they explained, has to be ready to buckle on a parachute harness, if necessary. That's why trousers are de rigeur.

I really hadn't expected to be a hitchhiker. But the fog was so thick in Frankfurt, the capital of the American zone in western Germany, that nothing flew for nearly three days. Commercial planes were still grounded when the Berlin blockade-busters began taking off again.

The woods around the Rhein-Main airport looked like a setting for The Snow Maiden. The C-54s were zooming off into the mist like street cars passing a downtown street corner. One every four or five minutes.

Changed into overalls, I climbed up an eight-foot ladder and into my ship. Flight Engineer L. E. Eichenlaub, of Mt. Vernon, Washington, took my hat-box and week end bag up past the dusty piles of flour sacks to the crew compartment.

Flour is heavier than a housewife would guess. The ten tons covered only a fraction of the cargo deck.

I sat on the lower bunk in what the crew call their bedroom, just behind the radio controls. It was strewn with parachutes and other gear.

"No seat belts here," said Engineer Eichenlaub, "just hold on."

Before I knew it, we were in the air. Dense fog streamed past the porthole window. Then sunshine came pouring in. We were up 500 feet and it was quite clear.

Lieutenant (junior grade) G. W. Kimmons was flying on a beam. He made it seem easy. He said he was a long way from home in Akron, O., and even farther from his last navy assignment—flying between Honolulu and Guam.

He and his co-pilot, Ensign W. A. Nomber, of Gary, Neb., and his engineer had come over together in a transferred Pacific squadron. They were the first navy crew to cross the Atlantic to join the airlift.

They had one night out in Paris, but mostly for two months they had been contending with Germany's cold and fog. Their squadron had 12 planes and had set a record of 40 flights to Berlin in 24 hours.

I asked if we were sure of being able to land at Tempelhof field in Berlin, because weather reports from there hadn't been too reassuring and we would arrive after dark. The young pilot grinned.

"They tell us that if the ceiling is less than 500 feet, the landing is done at a pilot's own discretion," he said. "My own limit is 400 feet. As far as I'm concerned, there are always three V. I. P.'s aboard—me, my co-pilot and my engineer. We're all very important persons. If it's less than 400, we'll go over to Fassberg in the British zone. That flour back there is worth only a minimum risk."

Over Fulda, I was given a chance to broadcast our identification and position signal to a ground station.

"It makes a nice change to hear a woman's voice on our communications system," Lieutenant Kimmons said.

"Of course, somebody may think it's just an imitation and kid you," cautioned Ensign Nomber.

I'd barely concluded the signal with "Roger!" when a baritone voice came through my earphones.

"Hey, Babe, when did you leave California?"

I thought this proved the system has remarkable clarity, at least for California accents.

The sun had set before we neared Berlin after 100 minutes in the air. Any other city might have danced with lights. But most of Berlin was dark. Airlift coal is precious here and electricity is skimped.

Tempelhof's GCA—ground control for approach—started directing us vocally. We circled according to instructions. A steady stream of precise information came over the radio—altitude, speed, time, headings and rate of descent.

Landing in misty darkness, even by GCA, impressed me as akin to driving blindfolded a heavy truck at top speed down a sheer mountain grade.

We rushed downward at two strings of white, yellow and red lights, marking the Tempelhof runway. I was standing up clinging tightly to a metal railing, and it was more exciting than a roller coaster dip.

Once GCA made a correction in our descent: "Level off! You're 60 feet too low."

The pilot pulled the nose up for just a moment. GCA okayed it. Then we plunged downward again.

We touched the runway without the slightest perceptible jar. The co-pilot strained at the brakes to shorten our run. We curved off to a side-strip in the wake of a yellow jeep marked "Follow me."

The engineer pushed open the rear door. An army truck swarming with German workmen plus a couple of military police backed up in a drizzling rain.

Another load of flour from Operation Vittles was through the Russian blockade.

Blueprint for Beauty

Changeabout Curls

THE close-cropped girl who finds herself stuck with one short hair-do can stop envying girls who change coiffures as they change their clothes. The way out of a one hair-do dilemma is to pin on a matching piece which can carry on to create a variety of arrangements where short locks stop.

Pin on a hair-piece which will hide short curls and give a more luxuriant look to close-cropped hair. Suavely-styled hair-pieces may be worn as chignons, spiral knots. Such pieces may be taken apart and braided to give a girl her choice of tricks effects. In these pictures you see how easily the transition from short to long hair has been made.

The model's curls (above) are dressed to make the only kind of hair-do into which short locks can usually be maneuvered. All that was needed to re-style this casual hair-do into the more formally-styled coiffure (left) was to pin a twisted chignon at the edge of the short curls which you see reflected in the mirror.

French Live 'To Be' Americans, 'To Do'

By Cynthia Lowry
(Associated Press Newsfeatures Writer)

NEW YORK—Eleanor Palffy is in serious danger of becoming a legend in her own lifetime.

She's a Yankee-born countess, a raconteuse turned author, a survivor of a golden European era forever passed and more American than a Kiwanis luncheon. In short, she's a witty, facile-penned paradox—and a grandmother.

Countess Palffy (she appreciates the title only when it produces a desired restaurant table) was a part of that Europe that perished on the sword of German ambition in 1939. It was a cosmopolitan world of which few Americans were a part.

She married into the old Europe of the aristocracy, becoming the bride of a dashing Hungarian nobleman soon after the first World War. For five years—his third, but not last, countess—she was mistress of a vast, feudal Czechoslovakian estate. Later, she adopted France as the home of her heart.

And now in a first novel which is a thinly veiled memoir, "Largely Fiction," Eleanor Palffy has wittily and charmingly looked back over those years and told of the people and places she knew so well.

For the most part, the book's heroine really is the book's author. But she has been able to see all of the fabulous characters—the dukes, the marquises, the canny and social-conscious bourgoise French, even the wild, barbaric husband of her heroine—with a level, undimmed eye.

She was so close to the things she writes about. How could she achieve impersonality about it?

"For the same reason," she said, "that I can never go back again to live in Europe.

"A psychiatrist once told me that every person has a picture in his mind of himself—and tries to live up to the picture. He's happy only as long as the people around him see him just as he sees himself. He's unhappy when their pictures of him are different from his own.

"I guess I had never been happy until I went to Europe and married there. I suppose my picture of me and those of others around me in the United States never were the same.

"Then suddenly, I found that in France I was supremely happy in my life and my friends. I thought I would always stay there—and I would have. Except that war came, and I returned to America."

During the war she worked in the Red Cross and other organizations.

"And in 1946—just as soon as I could," she confessed, "I went back. I intended to stay."

The tall, slender woman paused and lit a cigarette.

"I found that the people were the same. The French had maintained their wit, their sense of civilization and their sense of form. I found that they hadn't changed their picture of me. But I suddenly found I wasn't happy there anymore. And then I knew that my picture of myself had changed—and that I could never live any place but in the United States again."

Mrs Palffy has her own explanation of the differences between Europeans—differences that make it hard to achieve real understanding.

"In America," she said, "the important verb is 'to do.' In Europe, the important verb is 'to be.'"

There is great preoccupation—still in Europe with great names.

"When you hear a name like Talleyrand or Murat in France, your mind goes back to men and women of the past who bore those names. We are only just beginning to respond to the fascination of our own American historic names."

Spring Fashion Turns Its Back on Pockets

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Restless pockets, which are always on the move, have settled this spring at the back of women's clothes.

Although this new location is a style idea borrowed from men's pants, women's hip pockets are not intended to carry wallets or ease the burden of a lady's handbag.

The weightiest object seen in a back hip pocket, woman-styled, is a silk print handkerchief which probably weighs little more than a feather. This nankie is anchored for a flip effect into one of the two cuffed pockets with which Hattie Carnegie whops up the hip array on a woolen sharkskin suit of wedgewood blue. More hip interest comes from the jacket's stiffened peplum which flares out like a lampshade above a pedestal-slim skirt with more pockets in front.

Patch pockets, styled like those on a man's levis, look much more sophisticated than that at the back of a suavely-tailored coat dress. Made of acorn-born tropical worsted, this design of Jo Copeland's matches back interest with white pique collar and cuffs as fresh-looking as the first crocus.

Jones-Stivers

Mrs. Clarice Stivers, a neice of Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Baur, of this city, became the bride of Mr. Milton Jones, in a simple ceremony which took place Tuesday evening, December 28th, at 8:30, at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Ollie Summerlin, of Pollock.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Mr. W. C. Summerlin. Mr. Drew Bandy, justice of the peace, performed the ceremony. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Zack Jones, of Ball.

The ceremony took place beneath an archway entwined with evergreen vine, holly, fern, roses and hyacinth with candelabra at either side. The bride wore a simply designed dress of rose colored gabardine, with a white orchid corsage. She wore black suede accessories.

Mrs. J. W. Crump, cousin of the bride, served as matron of honor. She wore a green gabardine dress, with a corsage of white carnations, and black accessories. The groom had as his best man the bride's cousin, Mr. A. L. Creed, Jr., of Alexandria. Mr. I. B. Malone, served as candlelighter.

A reception for the bridal couple was held immediately after the wedding ceremony, at the Summerlin home. The table was centered with a traditional tiered wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom and surrounded at the base with sprigs of holly. Mrs. A. L. Creed presided at the punch bowl. The bride's grandmother wore for the occasion a black wool suit, with black accessories. Mrs. Zack Jones, mother of the groom, was also attired in black.

The couple left for a wedding trip to Florida, where they will make their home.

Changeabout Curls

THE close-cropped girl who finds herself stuck with one short hair-do can stop envying girls who change coiffures as they change their clothes. The way out of a one hair-do dilemma is to pin on a matching piece which can carry on to create a variety of arrangements where short locks stop.

Pin on a hair-piece which will hide short curls and give a more luxuriant look to close-cropped hair. Suavely-styled hair-pieces may be worn as chignons, spiral knots. Such pieces may be taken apart and braided to give a girl her choice of tricks effects. In these pictures you see how easily the transition from short to long hair has been made.

The model's curls (above) are dressed to make the only kind of hair-do into which short locks can usually be maneuvered. All that was needed to re-style this casual hair-do into the more formally-styled coiffure (left) was to pin a twisted chignon at the edge of the short curls which you see reflected in the mirror.

French Live 'To Be' Americans, 'To Do'

By Cynthia Lowry

(Associated Press Newsfeatures Writer)

NEW YORK—Eleanor Palffy is in serious danger of becoming a legend in her own lifetime.

She's a Yankee-born countess, a raconteuse turned author, a survivor of a golden European era forever passed and more American than a Kiwanis luncheon. In short, she's a witty, facile-penned paradox—and a grandmother.

Countess Palffy (she appreciates the title only when it produces a desired restaurant table) was a part of that Europe that perished on the sword of German ambition in 1939. It was a cosmopolitan world of which few Americans were a part.

She married into the old Europe of the aristocracy, becoming the bride of a dashing Hungarian nobleman soon after the first World War. For five years—his third, but not last, countess—she was mistress of a vast, feudal Czechoslovakian estate. Later, she adopted France as the home of her heart.

LAW INSTITUTE SEEKS REVISION

Would Prune Obsolete Statutes Of Years Ago Not Effective Now

Any prizefighter in Louisiana is a law-breaker, subject to a $500 fine or imprisonment for six months, or both.

In fact, even training for a prize fight to be held outside Louisiana is an infraction of state law.

Don't believe it? Just look up Act 25 of 1890. It's still on the books. Pugilists can come out of hiding, however. Act 235 of 1946 placed boxing control in the benign hands of the state athletic commission, though Act 25 still prohibits the sport.

In Louisiana, what's more, it is illegal to establish a store for the sale of any kind of merchandise within two miles of the State Seminary of Learning (Louisiana State University, nowadays). A large chunk of Baton Rouge's commercial section is automatically eliminated by that revised statute of 1870, section 2567.

These statutes and others (such as Act 93 of 1876, which allotted each member of the state legislature the sum of three dollars per session to buy his own stationery) are now being blue-pencilled by a hardworking statutory revision committee.

The project was begun in March, 1946, by the Louisiana State Law Institute, which is also revising the spectacularly voluminous state constitution. The statutory group hopes to complete its editing job by May of 1949, and have it ready for presentation to the state legislature in 1950.

Dr. Dale Bennett of the L. S. U. law school is coordinator of the project, assisted by Carlos Lazarus, also of L. S. U.

It has been a herculean undertaking. Louisiana statutes have not been revised since 1870, and are moss-hung with incongruities and contradictions. Statutes nullifying old laws have been added at a rapid rate, while the original laws remain on the books. There are now 12,000 statutes in Louisiana law. The committee hopes to simmer them down to a compact 3,000 for legislative approval.

The committee is not passing judgment on the statutes themselves, states Dr. Bennett. "It isn't a matter of what the institute feels the law should be," he declares. "Our job is to eliminate the obsolete and contradictory provisions. Where two are opposed, the latest adopted is the one accepted."

There is more to it than merely pruning out the deadwood. In many cases, Dr. Bennett points out, it was necessary to redraft overlapping provisions, and to put the whole into a consistent and connected pattern of law.

The job of revising the statutes, which currently fill 55 two-foot boxes of 5 by 8 cards, was assigned to ten "reporters" recruited, with one exception, from the faculties of the three Louisiana law schools—L. S. U., Tulane and Loyola.

All authorities in their assigned fields, the reporters are Henry G. McMahon, Harriet S. Daggett, Joseph Dainow and Carlos Lazarus of the L. S. U. law school; James A. Bugea, John J. McAuley and A. E. Papale of Loyola; Leon Hubert of Tulane and John M. Wisdom, New Orleans attorney and part-time professor at Tulane, and Mrs. Dorothy Dowling Wolbrette, New Orleans attorney.

Each reporter was provided a full-time research assistant to do the spade and detail work, and to make preliminary drafts; and each reporter was assigned to specific titles to work on. Dr. Daggett, for example, is responsible for nine classes of statutes ranging from cemetery legislation to mineral law.

DR. COON WILL ADDRESS WOMEN

Local Physician To Speak Before A. A. U. W. January 13

Dr. Margaret Coon of Monroe will use as her subject, "The Responsibility of the Educated Woman in Understanding the International Situation," when she speaks to the local branch of the American Association of University Women on Thursday evening, January 13.

The speaker, it was pointed out, is doubly able to discuss this subject. Having herself been born in China of missionary parents, she has an understanding and background which reveals to her the importance of the part woman should play in the affairs of our present day world.

Dr. Coon was educated in the United States, taking her degree in medicine from Tulane University.

This is the third in a series of addresses being given before the local branch of the American Association of University Women on the general theme of The Responsibility of the Educated Woman.

Rev. Lea Joyner of the First Methodist Church, of this city and Mrs. A. D. Tisdale were previous speakers.

Miss Joyner spoke on "The Responsibility of the Educated Woman in Human Relationships," while Mrs. Tisdale took as her general theme, "The Responsibility of the Educated Woman in Learning How to Spend Wisely."

The local branch of the American Association of University Women invites any woman in the Twin Cities eligible for membership in A. A. U. W. to hear Dr. Coon when she speaks Thursday evening. The meeting will be a dinner meeting at 6:30 o'clock at the LaCasa tea room. Persons desiring reservations are asked to call Mrs. W. R. Hammond, 5381 or Mrs. A. L. Tatum, 839-M before six o'clock Wednesday evening, January 12.

LAW INSTITUTE SEEKS REVISION

Would Prune Obsolete Statutes Of Years Ago Not Effective Now

Any prizefighter in Louisiana is a law-breaker, subject to a $500 fine or imprisonment for six months, or both.

In fact, even training for a prize fight to be held outside Louisiana is an infraction of state law.

Don't believe it? Just look up Act 25 of 1890. It's still on the books. Pugilists can come out of hiding, however. Act 235 of 1946 placed boxing control in the benign hands of the state athletic commission, though Act 25 still prohibits the sport.

In Louisiana, what's more, it is illegal to establish a store for the sale of any kind of merchandise within two miles of the State Seminary of Learning (Louisiana State University, nowadays). A large chunk of Baton Rouge's commercial section is automatically eliminated by that revised statute of 1870, section 2567.

These statutes and others (such as Act 93 of 1876, which allotted each member of the state legislature the sum of three dollars per session to buy his own stationery) are now being blue-pencilled by a hardworking statutory revision committee.

The project was begun in March, 1946, by the Louisiana State Law Institute, which is also revising the spectacularly voluminous state constitution. The statutory group hopes to complete its editing job by May of 1949, and have it ready for presentation to the state legislature in 1950.

Dr. Dale Bennett of the L. S. U. law school is coordinator of the project, assisted by Carlos Lazarus, also of L. S. U.

It has been a herculean undertaking. Louisiana statutes have not been revised since 1870, and are moss-hung with incongruities and contradictions. Statutes nullifying old laws have been added at a rapid rate, while the original laws remain on the books. There are now 12,000 statutes in Louisiana law. The committee hopes to simmer them down to a compact 3,000 for legislative approval.

The committee is not passing judgment on the statutes themselves, states Dr. Bennett. "It isn't a matter of what the institute feels the law should be," he declares. "Our job is to eliminate the obsolete and contradictory provisions. Where two are opposed, the latest adopted is the one accepted."

There is more to it than merely pruning out the deadwood. In many cases, Dr. Bennett points out, it was necessary to redraft overlapping provisions, and to put the whole into a consistent and connected pattern of law.

The job of revising the statutes, which currently fill 55 two-foot boxes of 5 by 8 cards, was assigned to ten "reporters" recruited, with one exception, from the faculties of the three Louisiana law schools—L. S. U., Tulane and Loyola.

All authorities in their assigned fields, the reporters are Henry G. McMahon, Harriet S. Daggett, Joseph Dainow and Carlos Lazarus of the L. S. U. law school; James A. Bugea, John J. McAuley and A. E. Papale of Loyola; Leon Hubert of Tulane and John M. Wisdom, New Orleans attorney and part-time professor at Tulane, and Mrs. Dorothy Dowling Wolbrette, New Orleans attorney.

Each reporter was provided a full-time research assistant to do the spade and detail work, and to make preliminary drafts; and each reporter was assigned to specific titles to work on. Dr. Daggett, for example, is responsible for nine classes of statutes ranging from cemetery legislation to mineral law.

Delta Rho Delta Sorority Will Head Campaign For March Of Dimes

Miss Freeda Mickel, chairman of the Ouachita Parish National Foundation of Infantile Paralysis, announced today that Miss Mary Humble, social service chairman of Delta Rho Delta sorority, will head the big committee for the March of Dimes, which was under way here Jan. 14, and will continue through Jan. 31.

Carburetor Too Rich Makes Motorist Too Poor

Car owners who are wasting money and not getting proper gas mileage due to over-rich mixtures will be pleased to learn of a Wisconsin inventor who has developed a very clever unit that helps save gasoline by "Vacu-mating." It is automatic and works on the supercharge principle. Easily installed in a few minutes. Fits all cars, trucks, tractors. The manufacturers, the Vacu-matic Carburetor Co., 7617-362-C State St., Wauwatosa, Wis., are offering a Vacu-matic to anyone who will install it on his car and help introduce it to others. They will gladly send full free particulars if you write them or just send your name and address on a penny post card today.

ARMY WILL NOT USE DRAFT FOR 2 MONTHS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—(AP)—The army announced today that it will draft no men in February and March.

It canceled an original call for 5,000 men in February.

Army Secretary Royall said that "voluntary enlistments and re-enlistments, averaging 35,000 a month for the past two months, have made selective service calls unnecessary for the next two months."

Noting that the selective service act requires the army to limit its draft calls to the difference between requirements and intake through voluntary enlistments, he said:

"As long as voluntary enlistments and re-enlistments remain sufficient to maintain the strength of the army there will be no calls for inductions."

The air force and navy have not used the draft system.

It has been estimated that each census in England costs $1,500,000.

COLLEGE OBTAINS ENCYCLOPAEDIA

Britannica Covers Every Important Phase Of Human Knowledge

A set of the new revised printing of the Encyclopaedia Britannica has been acquired by Northeast Junior College, it was announced today by Miss Mary Clay, Librarian. The new reference work is now available for use and is on display in the reading room, Miss Clay said.

The Encyclopaedia Britannica is a complete general encyclopaedia covering every important phase of human knowledge. The current printing purchased by the N. J. C. library contains 24 volumes averaging more than 1,000 pages each, illustrated throughout with maps, drawings, photographs and full-color plates. Its articles were written by 4,000 eminent authorities from 62 countries, representing 552 colleges, universities and other educational, cultural and scientific institutions. An index of 400,000 entries serves as a guide to its 38,000,000 words, and an atlas is included in the index volume.

Miss Clay explained that the set is as up-to-date as possible because the Britannica is continually revised. All the subjects are divided into 30 major categories of knowledge, and each category is reviewed regularly to determine which articles need revision or rewriting. Since the plan for continuous revision was adopted in 1932, more than 39,000 articles have been brought up to date in this way, and 3,000 pictures have been changed.

Other new publications acquired by the N. J. C. library and are on display include "19 Eventful Years" (1937-1946) and the 1948 edition of the "Britannica Book of the Year."

TAX DEADLINE COMES JAN. 17

Declaration Of Estimated Income To Be Filed On That Date

C. A. Donnelly, collector of internal revenue for the Louisiana district, reminded taxpayers that Monday, January 17, will be the deadline for filing declarations of estimated tax for 1948. The final date normally is January 15, but since that date falls on a Saturday this year, the filing period is automatically extended to the next official workday.

Collector Donnelly explained that this filing date is of especial importance to farmers, since they were excused by law from filing their 1948 declarations until this time. The date is also important to many business and professional persons, investors, self-employed and similar taxpayers who were required to file declarations last spring but who now want to change their estimates by filing amended declarations. Most wage earners whose pay is subject to withholding are not required to file declarations since the withholding substantially covers their income tax, although some wage earners with large salaries or supplemental non-salary income are required to file declarations.

He also pointed out that many of these taxpayers can file their final 1948 income tax return instead of a declaration and thereby avoid the necessity of filing two returns. In other words, a farmer required to file an original declaration or a businessman desiring to file an amended declaration at this time can substitute his regular return on Form 1040, which he might otherwise wait to file on March 15. If he files his return and pays the tax in full by January 17, he can save the task of preparing and filing the 1948 declaration or amended declaration which is due then.

If a taxpayer in 1948 had more than $100 of income which was not subject to withholding, he was required to file a declaration if his total income (including wages on which tax was withheld) was $600 or more.

If all of the taxpayer's income was from wages subject to withholding, he was required to file a declaration if his wages exceeded $4,500 plus $600 for each of his exemptions (for example, $6,300 in the case of a married man claiming exemptions for himself, wife and one dependent).

ARMY WILL NOT USE DRAFT FOR 2 MONTHS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—(AP)—The army announced today that it will draft no men in February and March.

It canceled an original call for 5,000 men in February.

Army Secretary Royall said that "voluntary enlistments and re-enlistments, averaging 35,000 a month for the past two months, have made selective service calls unnecessary for the next two months."

Noting that the selective service act requires the army to limit its draft calls to the difference between requirements and intake through voluntary enlistments, he said:

"As long as voluntary enlistments and re-enlistments remain sufficient to maintain the strength of the army there will be no calls for inductions."

The air force and navy have not used the draft system.

It has been estimated that each census in England costs $1,500,000.

COLLEGE OBTAINS ENCYCLOPAEDIA

Britannica Covers Every Important Phase Of Human Knowledge

A set of the new revised printing of the Encyclopaedia Britannica has been acquired by Northeast Junior College, it was announced today by Miss Mary Clay, Librarian. The new reference work is now available for use and is on display in the reading room, Miss Clay said.

The Encyclopaedia Britannica is a complete general encyclopaedia covering every important phase of human knowledge. The current printing purchased by the N. J. C. library contains 24 volumes averaging more than 1,000 pages each, illustrated throughout with maps, drawings, photographs and full-color plates. Its articles were written by 4,000 eminent authorities from 62 countries, representing 552 colleges, universities and other educational, cultural and scientific institutions. An index of 400,000 entries serves as a guide to its 38,000,000 words, and an atlas is included in the index volume.

Miss Clay explained that the set is as up-to-date as possible because the Britannica is continually revised. All the subjects are divided into 30 major categories of knowledge, and each category is reviewed regularly to determine which articles need revision or rewriting. Since the plan for continuous revision was adopted in 1932, more than 39,000 articles have been brought up to date in this way, and 3,000 pictures have been changed.

Other new publications acquired by the N. J. C. library and are on display include "19 Eventful Years" (1937-1946) and the 1948 edition of the "Britannica Book of the Year."

TAX DEADLINE COMES JAN. 17

Declaration Of Estimated Income To Be Filed On That Date

C. A. Donnelly, collector of internal revenue for the Louisiana district, reminded taxpayers that Monday, January 17, will be the deadline for filing declarations of estimated tax for 1948. The final date normally is January 15, but since that date falls on a Saturday this year, the filing period is automatically extended to the next official workday.

Collector Donnelly explained that this filing date is of especial importance to farmers, since they were excused by law from filing their 1948 declarations until this time. The date is also important to many business and professional persons, investors, self-employed and similar taxpayers who were required to file declarations last spring but who now want to change their estimates by filing amended declarations. Most wage earners whose pay is subject to withholding are not required to file declarations since the withholding substantially covers their income tax, although some wage earners with large salaries or supplemental non-salary income are required to file declarations.

He also pointed out that many of these taxpayers can file their final 1948 income tax return instead of a declaration and thereby avoid the necessity of filing two returns. In other words, a farmer required to file an original declaration or a businessman desiring to file an amended declaration at this time can substitute his regular return on Form 1040, which he might otherwise wait to file on March 15. If he files his return and pays the tax in full by January 17, he can save the task of preparing and filing the 1948 declaration or amended declaration which is due then.

If a taxpayer in 1948 had more than $100 of income which was not subject to withholding, he was required to file a declaration if his total income (including wages on which tax was withheld) was $600 or more.

If all of the taxpayer's income was from wages subject to withholding, he was required to file a declaration if his wages exceeded $4,500 plus $600 for each of his exemptions (for example, $6,300 in the case of a married man claiming exemptions for himself, wife and one dependent).

PARK DONATIONS FREE OF TAXES

Treasury Department Gives Assurance On Baseball Ground Funds

The United States treasury department has given assurance that contributions toward the American Legion baseball park project may be deducted by donors in figuring their income taxes, James H. Trousdale, Jr., commander of L. B. Faulk post and general chairman in charge of the civic enterprise, announced Saturday.

The assurance is contained in a letter recently received by Mr. Trousdale from Charles A. Marion, assistant chief of the income tax division of the New Orleans internal revenue office. It was in answer to an inquiry by Mr. Trousdale.

The pertinent parts of the letter read as follows:

"Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of November 30, 1948, with reference to the L. B. Faulk Post of the American Legion sponsoring the construction of a baseball park in Monroe and requesting to be advised if the donations made by individuals for this purpose will be deductible for income tax purposes.

"The contributions made to the American Legion and to departments and posts of the American Legion are deductible by the donors in arriving at their taxable net income as contributions in the manner and to the extent provided by section 23(o) and 23(q) of the Internal Revenue Code as amended."

The Legion post hopes to provide Monroe and West Monroe with a modern baseball park through funds raised by public subscription. The park, to be located in Bernstein park on a site made available by the city of Monroe, will be built, maintained and operated by a non-profit organization, American Legion Stadium, Inc. Corporate powers are vested in the membership of the local Legion post.

The park will provide facilities for the reactivation of professional baseball here and for other sports events.

THE NATION TODAY

By James Marlow

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—(AP)—I have a terrifying piece of paper in my desk.

At a quick glance it looks like something put together by a drunk. But it wasn't.

Across the middle of the paper, which is about one yard long and nine inches deep, runs a straight line.

All this was carefully done by business experts.

Those hills and peaks above and below the line represent the history of American ups and downs.

They're the periods of prosperity and the periods of panics and depressions.

The chart begins in 1790 and ends in 1945. It's amazing to see how many prosperity peaks there are above the line—and how many depression dips below.

The last figure on the chart is the huge prosperity peak that started climbing in 1940. We know that this peak, although the cart stops in 1945, is still high above the middle line.

But—will that great prosperity peak, greatest in history, crumble any time soon and drip into a huge upside down peak, below the line?

It's that question which goes to the heart of President Truman's messages to congress this week.

In his state of the union message on Wednesday, Mr. Truman said:

"I am happy to report . . . That the state of the union is good." But he added:

"We cannot afford to float along carelessly on a postwar boom until it collapses."

Then he outlined his program for 1949. And yesterday, in his economic report, he said "we have not been granted lasting prosperity without further effort and vigilance."

And once again, for the second time in three days, he outlined his program, but this time in more detail. And he ended with:

"This is a period in which our ability to master our affairs in our own way will be rigorously tested."

Above I said the chart of the history of American booms and busts was a terrifying sight. It is, and for this reason:

At every other period in our history we were more or less isolated from the rest of the world.

When we fell on our faces, we had time to pick ourselves up off the floor leisurely and get started upward again.

There was no danger to us if other countries collapsed at the same time or even collapsed becaused we collasped.

It was pretty much all right for us, we were safe, every time it happened—up till now. But now it's different.

And—a collapse for us is just what the Russians are banking on. It's the kind of thing on which they've built their thinking and their ambitions.

For now, if we collapse, it will be unlike any other time in our history. This time communism will try to run over the world, including us.

We could almost afford depressions before, when we felt safe in the world. We can't now. The next one might be fatal for us.

SOME TO OPPOSE TOBACCO TAX CUT

City Officials Expected To Fight For Continuation Of Revenue

By Edmond Le Breton

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 8.—(AP)—The ripples are still spreading from a remark casually dropped by Gov. Earl K. Long this week that he is considering reduction of the state tobacco tax.

That remark immediately brought up, among other subjects the question how effective as a revenue measure the tax really is, and whether mail ordering of cigarettes from other states is partially defeating it.

There is no conclusive answer to that one yet, because the tax is too young. Of the six major revenue measures adopted on the governor's recommendation last year, the cigarette tax increase was the last to go into effect. Collections on the new scale began Sept. 15.

But there is a hint in the early figures on the tax yield that it may not provide nearly as much as had been hoped. The figures have to be taken with caution because they cover only a short period of time and because the cigarette tax is collected by the sale of stamps to dealers—in other words, not at the time the cigarettes are sold to consumers. This means that comparing any one month's collections in one year with the same month in another year may not establish a valid trend. At any rate, and without losing sight of all these qualifications, the figures show:

The tax was increased from 5 to 8 cents per pack of cigarettes and in porportion on most other tobacco products. That's a 60 per cent increase in the rate.

Collections for the only two complete calendar months on which the revenue department has full figures show only a 27 per cent increase in the amount collected.

To be specific, the tobacco tax yielded $1,053,632 in October, 1947, and $903,678 in November, 1947. In October 1948, it yielded $1,158,826 and in November, 1948, $1,328,923.

The difference between the total for the two 1947 months and the two 1948 months is $530,438—an increase of about 27 per cent over the 1947 collections.

The revised tobacco tax bill, providing the increased rate, specifies that the first $700,000 of the revenue shall go to Louisiana State University. The next $3,000,000 is to be divided among cities and town. Municipalities of 1,000 or less population get $4.65 per inhabitant and the per capita amount drops.

The increasing size until cities of 50,000 or more receive only $2 per inhabitant, with a ceiling—applicable in practice only to New Orleans—of $650,000 for any one city.

The rest of the tobacco tax yield is to go into the state's general fund.

If the tentative figures on the amount of increased revenue from the tax are confirmed by more experience, there would be no additional revenue for the general fund—the allotments to the university and the municipalities would more than account for the extra yield.

Louisiana municipalities long have been complaining that it is increasingly hard to make ends meet with the few revenue sources allowed them by state law. A serious move to reduce the tobacco tax by two cents—presumably cutting out the distribution to cities and towns but probably retaining the allotment for the university—would be likely to meet considerable resistance from city officials, whether or not the townspeople themselves favored it.

New Chevrolet for '49
Tested and Proved... on the world's toughest Proving Ground

WHEN you see the 1949 Chevrolets, a glance will be enough to tell you they're new—all new—and you'll see that their newness is not merely in outward appearance, but in design and engineering and construction as well.

Brand New . . . Yet Already Proved in Action

But, to a lot of people, the 1949 Chevrolet is already old. They know what it will do, and how exceedingly well it will do it—they know all about its performance, its comfort, its power, safety, durability and economy. It's an old model to these people, for already, they are testing models of years ahead. They are the engineers and technicians of the General Motors Proving Ground—the largest, most completely equipped, outdoor laboratory in the automobile world.

Here, before a single new 1949 Chevrolet went into production, experimental models were tested—made to show that they possess, in greater measure than ever, all those qualities on which Chevrolet has built its leadership.

It's Tried and True—Through and Through

In short, the General Motors Proving Ground tests are your assurance that, when you get your new-model Chevrolet, you will have a car built of materials and units and parts that have proved their worth through many months and many, many thousands of miles of rough handling.

PARK DONATIONS FREE OF TAXES

Treasury Department Gives Assurance On Baseball Ground Funds

The United States treasury department has given assurance that contributions toward the American Legion baseball park project may be deducted by donors in figuring their income taxes, James H. Trousdale, Jr., commander of L. B. Faulk post and general chairman in charge of the civic enterprise, announced Saturday.

The assurance is contained in a letter recently received by Mr. Trousdale from Charles A. Marion, assistant chief of the income tax division of the New Orleans internal revenue office. It was in answer to an inquiry by Mr. Trousdale.

The pertinent parts of the letter read as follows:

"Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of November 30, 1948, with reference to the L. B. Faulk Post of the American Legion sponsoring the construction of a baseball park in Monroe and requesting to be advised if the donations made by individuals for this purpose will be deductible for income tax purposes.

"The contributions made to the American Legion and to departments and posts of the American Legion are deductible by the donors in arriving at their taxable net income as contributions in the manner and to the extent provided by section 23(o) and 23(q) of the Internal Revenue Code as amended."

The Legion post hopes to provide Monroe and West Monroe with a modern baseball park through funds raised by public subscription. The park, to be located in Bernstein park on a site made available by the city of Monroe, will be built, maintained and operated by a non-profit organization, American Legion Stadium, Inc. Corporate powers are vested in the membership of the local Legion post.

The park will provide facilities for the reactivation of professional baseball here and for other sports events.

THE NATION TODAY

By James Marlow

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—(AP)—I have a terrifying piece of paper in my desk.

At a quick glance it looks like something put together by a drunk. But it wasn't.

Across the middle of the paper, which is about one yard long and nine inches deep, runs a straight line.

And below the line, as if the peaks were being reflected in water, is another row of hills and peaks, upside down.

All this was carefully done by business experts.

Those hills and peaks above and below the line represent the history of American ups and downs.

They're the periods of prosperity and the periods of panics and depressions.

The chart begins in 1790 and ends in 1945. It's amazing to see how many prosperity peaks there are above the line—and how many depression dips below.

The last figure on the chart is the huge prosperity peak that started climbing in 1940. We know that this peak, although the cart stops in 1945, is still high above the middle line.

But—will that great prosperity peak, greatest in history, crumble any time soon and drip into a huge upside down peak, below the line?

It's that question which goes to the heart of President Truman's messages to congress this week.

In his state of the union message on Wednesday, Mr. Truman said:

"I am happy to report . . . That the state of the union is good." But he added:

"We cannot afford to float along carelessly on a postwar boom until it collapses."

Then he outlined his program for 1949. And yesterday, in his economic report, he said "we have not been granted lasting prosperity without further effort and vigilance."

And once again, for the second time in three days, he outlined his program, but this time in more detail. And he ended with:

"This is a period in which our ability to master our affairs in our own way will be rigorously tested."

Above I said the chart of the history of American booms and busts was a terrifying sight. It is, and for this reason:

At every other period in our history we were more or less isolated from the rest of the world.

When we fell on our faces, we had time to pick ourselves up off the floor leisurely and get started upward again.

There was no danger to us if other countries collapsed at the same time or even collapsed becaused we collasped.

It was pretty much all right for us we were safe, every time it happened—up till now. But now it's different.

And—a collapse for us is just what the Russians are banking on. It's the kind of thing on which they've built their thinking and their ambitions.

For now, if we collapse, it will be unlike any other time in our history. This time communism will try to run over the world, including us.

We could almost afford depressions before, when we felt safe in the world. We can't now. The next one might be fatal for us.

SOME TO OPPOSE TOBACCO TAX CUT

City Officials Expected To Fight For Continuation Of Revenue

By Edmond Le Breton

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 8.—(AP)—The ripples are still spreading from a remark casually dropped by Gov. Earl K. Long this week that he is considering reduction of the state tobacco tax.

That remark immediately brought up, among other subjects the question how effective as a revenue measure the tax really is, and whether mail ordering of cigarettes from other states is partially defeating it.

There is no conclusive answer to that one yet, because the tax is too young. Of the six major revenue measures adopted on the governor's recommendation last year, the cigarette tax increase was the last to go into effect. Collections on the new scale began Sept. 15.

But there is a hint in the early figures on the tax yield that it may not provide nearly as much as had been hoped. The figures have to be taken with caution because they cover only a short period of time and because the cigarette tax is collected by the sale of stamps to dealers—in other words, not at the time the cigarettes are sold to consumers. This means that comparing any one month's collections in one year with the same month in another year may not establish a valid trend. At any rate, and without losing sight of all these qualifications, the figures show:

The tax was increased from 5 to 8 cents per pack of cigarettes and in porportion on most other tobacco products. That's a 60 per cent increase in the rate.

Collections for the only two complete calendar months on which the revenue department has full figures show only a 27 per cent increase in the amount collected.

To be specific, the tobacco tax yielded $1,053,632 in October, 1947, and $903,678 in November, 1947. In October 1948, it yielded $1,158,826 and in November, 1948, $1,328,923.

The difference between the total for the two 1947 months and the two 1948 months is $530,438—an increase of about 27 per cent over the 1947 collections.

The revised tobacco tax bill, providing the increased rate, specifies that the first $700,000 of the revenue shall go to Louisiana State University. The next $3,000,000 is to be divided among cities and town. Municipalities of 1,000 or less population get $4.65 per inhabitant and the per capita amount drops.

The increasing size until cities of 50,000 or more receive only $2 per inhabitant, with a ceiling—applicable in practice only to New Orleans—of $650,000 for any one city.

The rest of the tobacco tax yield is to go into the state's general fund.

If the tentative figures on the amount of increased revenue from the tax are confirmed by more experience, there would be no additional revenue for the general fund—the allotments to the university and the municipalities would more than account for the extra yield.

Louisiana municipalities long have been complaining that it is increasingly hard to make ends meet with the few revenue sources allowed them by state law. A serious move to reduce the tobacco tax by two cents—presumably cutting out the distribution to cities and towns but probably retaining the allotment for the university—would be likely to meet considerable resistance from city officials, whether or not the townspeople themselves favored it.

by

EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

THE STARTLED CRY OF A WARRIOR AROUSED THE VILLAGE NEXT MORNING. WARRIORS GATHERED TO STARE CURIOUSLY AT THE BODY OF MOPOLO.

"PERHAPS THE OWNER OF THE KNIFE," TARZAN SAID POINTEDLY, "CAN EXPLAIN ITS PRESENCE IN MOPOLO'S BODY." — "HOW COMES THE KNIFE OF TOTAMA," RIMALI DEMANDED, "TO BE BURIED IN MOPOLO'S BREAST?"

"THE KNIFE VANISHED FROM MY HUT," TOTAMA CRIED. "WHO STOLE IT TO KILL MOPOLO, I CAN ONLY GUESS."

WHILE RIMALI AND TARZAN PREPARED TO VISIT THALIA, TOTAMA MADE MEDICINE AND PLANNED THE APE-MAN'S DEATH.

"THE STRANGERS MUST NOT REACH THALIA ALIVE," TOTAMA HISSED. "YOUR SPEAR TIPS CARRY THE POISON OF THE GODS. FOLLOW---AND KILL THEM!"

JACK RUSHES TO THE PILOT'S SEAT, OVERRIDES THE ROBOT MECHANISM AND, WITH A SHARP CLIMBING TURN, MISSES ONE HUGE PEAK BY ONLY A FEW FEET!

---THEN, HE LEVELS OFF THE SHIP--- UNTIES SABLE, AND SNAPS OFF THE ROBOT PILOT!

SABLE HONEY--- TAKE TH' CONTROLS AND KEEP DODGING THE MOUNTAINS--- I'VE GOTTA RUSH BACK TO PEARLY! HE MAY COME TO AND ESCAPE BY BAILING OUT!

BUT, JACK, I'VE NEVER FLOWN A BIG, MULTI-ENGINE PLANE!

DON'T WORRY, HONEY--- JUST STEERING IT IN TH' AIR IS ABOUT THE SAME AS PILOTING A LIGHT PLANE--- SAME PRINCIPLE!

WELL, MAYBE SO--- BUT TIE UP PEARLY FAST AND HURRY BACK, BECAUSE IF ONE THING WENT WRONG I'D BE HELPLESS!

---ALL THESE GADGETS ARE AS CONFUSIN' AS A PIPE ORGAN CONSOLE!

AS JACK RETURNS TO THE CARGO SECTION, PEARLY COMES TO AND STARTS FOR THE DOOR!

--- JACK DIVES FOR HIM AND THE FIGHT IS ON AGAIN!

BUT THIS TIME, JACK, WHO HAS STILL NOT FULLY RECOVERED FROM HIS RECENT ILLNESS, FEELS HIS STRENGTH WANING!

I'VE GOTTA TRY TO GET A STRANGLE HOLD OR A HAMMER LOCK ON PEARLY! HE'S IN A LOT BETTER PHYSICAL CONDITION THAN I AM!

---AND IF I HAVE TO KEEP FIGHTIN', HE'S SURE TO OUTLAST ME!

DALE IS CAUGHT OFF GUARD AS TOR SUDDENLY LIFTS HER. HE GROWLS: "HO! YOU'VE BEEN MADE LIGHT! WHERE'S THE STOLEN GRAVITOR?"

FLASH TALKS FAST: "WE USED ZARINA'S --BUT IT WAS SMASHED IN THE LANDQUAKE." TOR SNARLS: "LIAR! I'LL SEARCH YOU." HE PINS FLASH AGAINST THE WALL WITH GRAVITY-FORCE.

"STOP! FLASH CAN'T BREATHE!" DALE CRIES. TURNING PRIMITIVE, SHE BITES TOR'S ARM AS SHE GRABS FOR THE GRAVITOR.

TOR FLINGS DALE ASIDE. FLASH, FREED FROM THE GRAVITY-PRESSURE, LEAPS WITH A SHOUT: "I'LL TEACH YOU TO PUSH DALE AROUND!" AND THE DWARF POK SEES HIS CHANCE--

"LET ME GO! POK GOT THE GRAVITOR! CATCH HIM!" ROARS TOR, BUT FLASH THINKS IT'S JUST A TRICK TO ESCAPE A WELL-EARNED TROUNCING.

THE PALACE CRUMBLES AS THE FLEEING POK HASTILY TRIES OUT THE GRAVITOR. TOR GROWLS: "FOOLS! SEE WHAT YOU'VE DONE. THE PYGMIES WILL SMASH OUR WORLD IF WE DON'T CATCH POK!"

TARZAN

by EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

"PERHAPS THE OWNER OF THE KNIFE," TARZAN SAID POINTEDLY, "CAN EXPLAIN ITS PRESENCE IN MOPOLO'S BODY." — "HOW COMES THE KNIFE OF TOTAMA," RIMALI DEMANDED, "TO BE BURIED IN MOPOLO'S BREAST?"

"THE KNIFE VANISHED FROM MY HUT," TOTAMA CRIED. "WHO STOLE IT TO KILL MOPOLO, I CAN ONLY GUESS."

WHILE RIMALI AND TARZAN PREPARED TO VISIT THALIA, TOTAMA MADE MEDICINE AND PLANNED THE APE-MAN'S DEATH.

"THE STRANGERS MUST NOT REACH TH'ALIA ALIVE," TOTAMA HISSED. "YOUR SPEAR TIPS CARRY THE POISON OF THE GODS. FOLLOW---AND KILL THEM!"
